

HORSE SHOW'S ENTRIES MANY

Twelve new Stables Supply Animals for State Fair Feature, Announced

A horse show unsurpassed by any state fair west of the Mississippi is assured for the Oregon exposition this year, with twelve new stables to send entrants here for the first time, it was declared yesterday by P. Fleming, division superintendent.

The widely-noted Lansburgh stables of San Francisco and the Flanery stables of Kansas, Ill., in addition to many exhibitors who appear here annually, are among those to compete for a share in the $50,000 prizes during the event September 22 to 28, he revealed.

"The horse show at the Oregon state fair will equal if not exceed any exhibit of its kind to the west," Mr. Fleming stated. New exhibitors are coming, old exhibitors are sending their finest animals, and competition is becoming keener each year as the fame of the Oregon exposition spreads through the United States."

Mr. Fleming also is manager of the horse show division of the Pacific Livestock exposition, the Stockton and Palo Alto, Calif., horse show, and the International Horse Show at Seattle.

Inquiries About Show Numerous

Scores of inquiries concerning the Oregon event have poured in to my office this year, with every indication that many exhibitors are planning to make this fair the high point of the show season," he declared.

New entries received for the exposition here include: Mrs. Ruth Helveston, San Francisco; G. Albert Lansburgh, San Francisco; Charles E. Shiner, Monroe, Wis.; Georgia McNeil, Sacramento; Mary G. McNeil, Sacramento; F. E. Hart, Sacramento; R. C. Flanery, Kansas, Ill.; Barbara Worth, Sacramento; F. H. Lane, Gilroy, Cal.; Mrs. M. N. Calhoun, Crosswick's Ranch, Gilroy, Cal.; Phillip O'Connell, Stockton, Cal.; and Emily and George Canfield, Menlo Park, Cal.

Seventy-eight premium events, including seven $1,000 stakes and four $500 special awards, are offered in the horse show, Portland entries for which already include Harry Kerron, Aaron M. Frank and L. R. Banks.

Two $1,000 Stakes Shown in Program

Stakes of $1,000 include two in the harness horse events — the Governor Norblad stake and one sponsored by L. R. Banks. Other $1,000 awards are sponsored by Aaron M. Frank for three-gaited saddle horses, and E. A. Stewart, president of the Seattle International Horse show, for hunters and jumpers. Special $1,000 stakes events also are open for five-gaited horses, harness ponies and in the six-hand driving competition.

Special awards of $500 are sponsored by Olds, Wortman and King of Portland for thoroughbred hunters, and Ladd & Bush of Salem for Shetland ponies. Other $500 stakes are offered in the fine harness horse and the polo pony events.

Stall space, which has been insufficient properly to accommodate the large number of entries for the past three years, probably will be more scarce than ever, with the last minute arrivals hard put to obtain adequate room, Mr. Fleming declared.

Other buildings also are filling rapidly, with every inch of display room already leased to record list of exhibitors, according to Mrs. Ella S. Wilson, secretary of the state fair board.

Disease Free Cattle Exhibit Drawing Card

The "disease-free" cattle exhibit, first of its kind sponsored by any state fair in the United States is attracting nation-wide interest, she stated. Veteran exhibitors, as well as those attracted here for the first time, have wired in entries, while dozens of application blanks are being withheld until the last day, September 15.

when a flood of new entries is expected, she stated.

Concessionaires already are on the grounds erecting suitable quarters for their displays during the fair week, with all kinds of amusement services dotting the grounds with last-minute construction.

Among the exhibits to show the largest increase is the poultry display, in which more than 1,500 birds are expected to be entered, in comparison to slightly more than 1,200 last year, according to Edward Shearer of Esplanade, superintendent. The rabbit exhibit, under the management of Hal Osborne of Portland, also is expected to show a large gain, Mrs. Wilson declared.

Space at Premium In Auto Building

Demands for display space in the automotive building have been unusually large, with the result that late entrants probably will find it impossible to obtain sufficient space, she stated. Dealers already among the lessees include Douglas McKay, Cook & Lyons, Fitzgerald & Sherwin, Reo Sales Co., Otto Wilson, F. W. Pettijohn, Bonesteel Motor Co., State Motor Co., Salem Auto Co. and Indian and Harley-Davidson Motorcycle dealers. Large exhibits by the Standard Oil and Union Oil companies also are to be included in the automotive display.

Plans for the floral display, under the management of Tommy My Luke of Portland, call for the erection of miniature gardens to replace the usual display tables in enhancing the beauty of the exhibit, it was revealed Saturday. A giant rockery, the work of Ernest Juler of Salem, also is to be included, it was announced.

Employees of the fair, many of whom come here year after year, already are arriving, with every preparation being made to handle the vanguard of thousands expected to attend the Community Day events planned for the first day of the exposition, Sept. 22.

Columbia Basin Study to Start Soon, Announced

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13. — (AP)—The commissioner of reclamation today assigned H. W. Bashore, location engineer to study lands in the Columbia river basin to determine how they best can be reclaimed.

The appointment announced by Commissioner Elwood Mead is in accordance with action of congress as the last session in appropriating $50,000 to the bureau for the purpose of studying reclamation methods advocated by various groups and to determine whether there may be other and better methods.

Bashore has been in charge of the Yale project in Oregon which is similar to the Columbia basin, but much smaller.

State Printer Claims Record In Slugs' use

Arthur Brock, foreman of the state printing department, believes he has established a new record in connection with the durability of linotype slugs.

On a recent run of the measures' pamphlet, Brock said he used only one set of linotype slugs for more than 230,000 impressions. The usual maximum life of these slugs ranges from 75,000 to 125,000 impressions, he said. Brock attributed the unusual showing to careful makeup of the forms, from which the pamphlets were printed, and the fact that the metal was solid and free from defects.

The pamphlets were printed on a fast rotary press, direct from the linotype slugs.
