Mrs. A. H. Bunn Honored With Dinner

A pleasant afternoon was had a few days ago, when a group of Royal Neighbors and friends and relatives joined in a surprise dinner complimenting Mrs. A. H. Bunn on her birthday anniversary.

The affair was held in the fraternal building on the state fair grounds, where Mrs. Bunn is serving as hostess during the fair.

The large table was tastefully decorated and centered with bowls of marigolds, while ferns and gladioli were used effectively about the room. An informal program consisting of songs by Corydon Blodgett with a whistling accompaniment by Billy Utley and informal birthday greetings were enjoyed. During the afternoon Mrs. Bunn was presented with a handkerchief shower and other birthday remembrances to which she responded appropriately. Those invited to enjoy the day were Mr. and Mrs. A. H. ## Oh These Women!

By LEO LA ALLARD

I am constantly receiving letters from girls who don't want to let go of some man they've been going with for a year or two or three. The man "acts strange," or "doesn't think many marriages turn out happy so he thinks he wants to remain single," or he "doesn't mention marriage any more" so the girl gets panicky and wants to know what to do.

Nothing.

At least nothing to try to change his mind about marrying you. That's one thing you can't do. If a man wants you he is jumping all over the lot, singing under your window and phoning you and writing you and being peevish when he can't see you more than once a day. When he doesn't want you—that's all. There isn't any more.

Prolonging the association by forced means, only makes the pain greater. When a man is through he's through. It takes more, usually, to make him tire of a woman than it takes for a woman to tire of a man. But when he is tired, you might just as well roll up your memories while they are happy.

It's easier to kill love than it is to suffocate a canary. But when it's dead there isn't any pumpkin that's worth a darn. The decent thing to do is bury it and preserve the happy memories you have instead of leaving yourself instead of anything of the man you once loved.

Of course the sane thing to do as long as you have to live in this world, is to be happy. It takes an effort after a disappointment, but it's being done every day. This thought of jumping off of high building should make you ashamed. Go and see some war pictures. Theatres used to tell you how to live, but the new war pictures tell you how to die, which is even more important, because they show you how cowardly it is not to carry on until you can die fighting desperately to live. Somehow they inspire you with the courage to make the fight. Your troubles seem so petty. You feel small and ashamed. Pick out a good war picture and get a better lesson in self-discipline than you can give you.

Sorority Rushes Guests at Clever Dinner

Something unique and clever too was the "Amos n' Andy" rush dinner party given Thursday evening at the Alpha Phi Alpha house, honoring a group of 18 Freshman girls attending Willamette university.

The idea was effectively handled in the selection of Amos n' Andy figure place cards, favors in the form of miniature tubes which were presented each guest, even to the checked table cloths and costumes worn by the girls assisting with the serving. The evening was most happily spent and the idea afforded much amusement for the participants. Mrs. Fisher was an honor guest for the evening.

Miss Brown Entertains At Supper Thursday

An interesting social event of the week was the informal affair enjoyed Thursday evening when Reverend and Mrs. Fred Alban Will were honor guests of Miss Alice Brown at the home of Mrs. Claudius Thayer on Capitol street.

The guests were entertained with a line party at the home after which they met again at the Thayer home for a late supper. Those included in the evening and Mrs. Well, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Burghardt, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wallace, Dr. W. B. Morse and the hostess, Miss Alice Brown.

Fair-Ways and Reporters' Shots From the State Fair

Today at the state fair will be children's day. All under 12 years of age are in free. Things of the banks that are being robbed of every penny for hot luxury as the "red bug" such dogs, and such!

Barbara Barnes and her wee tots won a good hand from the large grandstand audience Friday afternoon. The youngsters lunched on the platform in front of the grandstand.

The members of the state fair board looked like nothing short or proud parents as they led the wonderful display of livestock champions before the grandstand in the 1930 annual parade of champions Friday afternoon.

Many a complaint is being made concerning the fact that the agricultural building has been closed several nights at 10 o'clock. This does not allow the night horse show crowds a chance to go through the exhibits after the show is over. Many business people find the evening the only time to attend the fair and like to see the exhibits as well as the horse show.

A suggestion heard at the race Friday: Why not use the center field of the race track out where the Lone Oak used to be, for a football field and have a night football game during the state fair? Well, that is an idea for the state fair board to work on and we extend it free for nothing.

A Jersey flapper, and a champion at that, got loose on the model floor in front of the grandstand Friday afternoon as the champions were all showing their style, and started a parade all her own. Even as the public tries to catch the flapper so did the herdsmen run to curb the frisky Jersey miss.

Times are when one can hear in the grandstand very easily what is being said from the announcer's platform, but there are many other times when it is impossible to hear. Wonder if it is announcers, machinery or what? Perhaps atmosphere.

Madam Pellenberg might add this to the merits of her bears—"Famous scratching bear." The positions that the smaller brunn of her group of three can get himself into while occupying his spare moments from acting is worth calling the public's attention to.

Among the attractive floral exhibits from Salem is the luter Parental garden display. It is much the same as the one presented by Mr. Lufer at the Salem Garden club show in the spring. Very effective. J. W. Maruny

Honor Young Lad On Birthday Friday

Little Harry Heckes was the honor guest Friday afternoon when his mother Mrs. Hazel Heckes entertained in compliment to his seventh birthday anniversary. The little guest enjoyed an afternoon of games and contests, which was made gay by horns, caps and other favors in keeping with the Halloween idea. Gate witches and pumpkin motifs formed the decoration scheme for the afternoon.

Mrs. Roy Hurst assisted Mrs. Heckes with the serving of the pretty birthday cake and other refreshments.

The children who enjoyed the afternoon with the honor guest, Harry Heckes, were, Bill Smith, David Berger, Patsy Ryer, Maxine Stoops, Albert Stoops, Junior Ryer, Bobby Hurst, Junior Schaffer, Susanne Schramm, Phillip Schramm, Lucille Stoops, Hazel Schaffer, Elizabeth Nelson, Billy Nelson and Dickey Smith.

Small Lad Celebrates Birthday Anniversary

Another children's party of much interest is the one planned for Monday afternoon when Mrs. Gus Hixon has invited a group of the very small children and their mothers to celebrate the first birthday anniversary of her small son, Harvey. The serving of the birthday cake with one lighted candle was the high point of interest in the afternoon's pleasure of the little tots. The little folk present were, the honor guest, Harvey Hixon, Dwight Quisenberry, Roderick Slade, Bill Eoff, Franklin Ford, Jean Steiner, Patsy Wilson, Dudley Slater, Madeline Glee Keone, Donald Phillips, Janey Carson, Robert Craig and Donald Young, Junior.

The little guests' mothers included, Mrs. P. D. Quisenberry, Mrs. E. F. Slade, Mrs. Asel Eoff, Mrs. Bert Ford, Mrs. Milton Steiner, Mrs. Kenneth Wilson, Mrs. Richard Slater, Mrs. Roy Keene, Mrs. W. F. Phillips, Mrs. Donald Young, Mrs. John Carson and Mrs. Dolph Craig. Mrs. Wayne Loder and Mrs. H. E. Lousbury assisted Mrs. Hixon with the serving of the guests.

LIGHTING PLAN TURNED DOWN

Federal Department Decides Against Equipping Salem Airport

Salem's proposal to the Light-house Service of the department of commerce suggesting that the service equip Salem municipal airport for night landing and that the city be licensed by the department to bear the expense of the upkeep of the illuminating system, has been turned down flatly.

Communication received here Friday from the superintendent of the Lighthouse Service, R. R. Tinkham, of Portland, states that the executive board of the aeronautics branch of the department of commerce, at its meeting August 11, considered the installation of lighting equipment on an established airport would be contrary to the policy of the department, and to provisions of the air commerce act of 1926.

Further reason for the department's refusal to light the local port was that "Salem is six miles west of the airway and 12 miles southwest of Silverton intermediate landing field on the San Francisco-Seattle airway."

City Officers Here

The city council in a resolution of last June offered to lease the airport to the government at a nominal rate, on condition the department of commerce should equip the field for night flying and, further, offered to undertake the responsibility by license of maintaining the illumination system, as has been done by other cities.

Lee Eyerly, leading user of the port, declared yesterday that the government had done for other airports a restricted zone, after he had asked for and that there was really no reason why the same should not be done for Salem.

The airport, at present, is lighted by large floodlights. But these do not constitute a standard, safe, night landing lighting system. Boundary beacons, placed at short intervals around the limits of the field are badly needed, it is said.

STEPS OFF IN SPACE

Ruth Sammons Scared not at all; Plans to BECOME STUNT FLIER

Ruth Sammons, 19, dropped off an Eyerly airplane yesterday afternoon and said afterwards she wasn't scared a bit.

"I'm not pretending either," added this young Salem girl who after completing a school teaching course at Bellingham, Wash., this spring, decided that aviation was the life for her.

The drop yesterday was Miss Sammons' initial use of a parachute. "I was rather scared when I knew Wednesday I was going to make the drop and I'll admit I was nervous this morning but I wasn't scared when I fell into space."

On her initial parachute experience, Miss Sammons went out on been a conspicuous figure in the councils of the democratic party for a long period, endorsed the grange power bill. He cited Los Angeles, Seattle, and Tacoma as examples of success of the municipalities in operating power plants.

Stunt flying is Miss Sammons' objective. She has already had three and one-half hours in the air at the Eyerly school and Pilot "Scout" Hazeltine has put her through a number of air maneuvers. Miss Sammons has handled the controls, too, in some flights, although to date she has done no solo work.

"I should have fallen face forward if I had been an experienced jumper," she said.

VON ESCHEN GETS GEOLOGY EXHIBITS

Search for classroom geological specimens this summer took Florian Von Eschen on a 10,900 mile itinerary this summer and extended for 80 days according to a report in the Modesto News-Herald. Professor Von Eschen, for many years a professor at Willamette university here, went to the California school in the summer of 1928, taking a position in the junior college there.

More than 800 pounds of rocks, minerals, shells and fossils to be used in classes this fall were obtained.

Von Eschen dug the specimens in many parts of the United States, and shipped them to the Modesto junior college.

The traveling geologist made a special study of coral formations in Florida. He spent more than a week investigating the unfilled.

He traveled through Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, east to New York, through the New England states, south along the eastern coast to Florida, through the Everglade swamps, west to Arizona, New Mexico and California. He visited the famous Carlsbad caverns in New Mexico.
