O. S. C. Authorities Visit In Salem; Aid Moving State Flock

Prof. H. E. Cosby, poultry extension specialist, and Prof. Frank Knowlton, poultry husbandman, at the Oregon State College, were in Salem yesterday supervising the moving and housing of the state poultry flock in its new quarters at the penitentiary annex farm, formerly the boys' training school. They favored the Northwest Poultry Journal at the Statesman office with a visit and stated that the new quarters is an improvement over the old quarters in that the site is high and rolling affording the best of drainage and sanitary conditions. It is announced that one of two days poultry school will be held in Salem the coming early winter and Prof. Cosby and Knowlton were pleased with the idea and volunteered their cooperation and services to make the two days meeting the desired success. The poultry business and interests have grown so much in the Salem district in the past two or three years that a need is now felt for such meetings or schools occasionally at Salem that the poultrymen may hear discussed new and improved methods of poultry breeding and management, it not being convenient for many to go to the college at Corvallis in quest of this information.

Members of the poultry department at the college state that they will be pleased to cooperate with the poultrymen of this district in making such local meetings interesting and instructive. There will be announced about Salem's first poultry school and meeting later.

X-RAY STUDENT TO SACRIFICE AN ARM

BALTIMORE, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Known to his associates as "the last of the old guard," along with Dr. Frederick H. Baetjer of Johns Hopkins medical school, Dr. Christian Deetjen this week is to give an arm to his devotion to the healing and revealing of the science of the Roentgen or x-ray.

Already marked by a number of operations, one of which took a finger, Dr. Deetjen is one of a long line of martyrs who have undergone operation after operation as a result of dangerous exposure to the rays, and then have returned to their work with the courage of men who consider it more important than their own lives.

The "last of the old guard" often has been applied to Dr. Deetjen and Dr. Baetjer because so many of their predecessors among the early students of the comparatively new science have given their lives.

A dozen times Dr. Deetjen has been under the knife previously. He would have been even more seriously affected, according to Dr. Alexis McGlannan, who will perform the last operation, had he failed to take preventative operations.

AYORA TAKES BACK HIS RESIGNATION

QUITO, Ecuador, Oct. 1.—(AP)—President Isidro Ayora last evening consented to remain in office until expiration of his term, August 31, 1932.

His position bolstered by public and private manifestations of confidence, the chief executive sent to congress a brief note saying that, at their behest, he had reconsidered his resignation, offered last night, and would fill out his term.

His action followed a day during which pressure of every sort had been brought to bear upon him not to quit the presidency. Congress last night refused to accept his resignation and civilian and military committees combined with that body today in urging necessity of his reconsidering his withdrawal from public life.

With the exception of the socialist party all shades of political opinion gathered to support of the president, attesting their belief in him and their confidence that with the premier, Julio Moreno, removed from the cabinet the future of the administration was assured.

PERCY PORCUPINE PINES FOR PINES

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Tonight, children, you will hear about the pranks of Percy Porcupine, pining for the pines of his native Colorado, and how he succeeded in making his nostalgia known.

Porcupines, almost any natural history student will tell you, are not noted for their vocal volume, so when Percy found himself parked in a crate in the car of Leo Olondin, Lincoln park zoo keeper last night, he had to think and think as to how he could make his predicament public.

At last he had it. He gnawed through a slit of his crate, but found that steel sides and glass doors of a sedan do a prison make. So Percy sat down on the steering wheel to think some more. On the steering wheel was the horn button, and the horn squawked loud and long.

Percy repeated the treatment and irate neighbors of Olondin, as well as the zoo keeper started out in search of the disturbance. Eventually they came to Percy, bouncing busily on the button. But his plaints were futile. And if you ever come to Lincoln park, children, you can see Percy in his cage, quietly quivering his quills.
