

COPCO RECORD UNDER ATTACK

Liljequist Avers State has Not Power to Approve Company Request

from the jurisdiction of the commission until the 1905 law was complied with. He attacked the waiver clause in the application by which the company presumed to protect future use of the waters for irrigation, by declaring as denying the validity of such waivers, and that it contained jokers dangerous to the use of the water for irrigation.

Going into the history of the old deal in 1917 by which the power company obtained canals and power sites on Link river which had presumably been reserved for the benefit of the settlers, Liljequist declared the federal reclamation service had violated the trust on the basis of which the 1905 acts were passed by the Oregon legislature, ceding lands about Lower Klamath lake to the government and all the waters of upper Klamath lake to the government.

Ignoring the state and the district, the reclamation service entered into a contract by which the power company was made the agent of the federal government for the development of the power; it sold valuable properties to the power company for a sum one-sixth of what it represented the irrigation district their value was, and on terms of $5,000 down and the balance in ten years.

By making the deal in the form of a contract the power company could not be attacked in court because of the old inhibition against suing the United States government. For 13 years the irrigation district has sought to get the right by congressional enactment to sue to recover its rights. The attorney general, he said, had fought lone handedly against the state land board, the board of control, and the reclamation commission had never joined to urge the legislature to pass a memorial asking congress to enact the necessary legislation.

Defies State

He charged the power company with coming with unclean hands because it had defied the state of Oregon in not returning a power permit which the state engineer on the ruling of the attorney general had revoked. He accused it of unfair dealing with the state of Oregon, and said that the state should be getting $146,000 a year for the use of the waters by the power company instead of the mere pittance it now receives.

Bert E. Haney, Portland, representing the irrigation district, further urged that the commission should not grant a permit because the next legislature might enact additional legislation to safeguard the power rights of the state from private exploitation.

Harlan is Challenged

Kenneth Harlan, representing the state grantee, started something when he declared the big delegation attending the convention endorsing the project had had their expenses paid. Mayor T. B. Waters seized Harlan and shouted "That's a lie".

Later when Harlan took the stand and started telling the commission what it must do, and finally asked if they wanted to hear his testimony, Treasurer Kay said "I don't care a damn about your testimony."

A. M. Geary of Portland also appeared in opposition to the granting of the permit. He suggested a string of To Permit.

Treasurer Kay made inquiries of both sides, as to whether it would be possible to grant a permit and get immediate construction and still tie a string to the permit by which the power company would be made subject to any new legislation which might be enacted at the next session of the legislature. Kay said the company said no one present could speak for the company on that point; and Haney expressed the view that such a provision would not be safe.

organizations were to meet here simultaneously Morrison said it had.

"Such a condition as obtained in this city was a crime," Tobin said. "Men and women had their lives endangered. Some came within a hair of being killed. Articles were thrown from windows. I have been through many a sleep many a rough house—and I'm no baby—but I never experienced such conditions as I had to undergo in the last few days. Delegates were jostled. They could not see each other."

In a subsequent remark by Tobin to Morrison regarding the convention clause of the federation constitution, murmurs of disapproval by delegates rippled through the hall.

Legion Commander Delivers Address

Tobin's statement came about an hour after the convention had been addressed by Ralph T. O'Neil of Kansas, national commander-elect of the legion. O'Neil spoke chiefly on the mutual ideals of the two organizations.

The executive council was charged by Tobin to change the place of the convention when it learned that the legion was to meet here too. He declared "we will be protected in the future from a condition of this kind."

President William Green explained the two conventions met

BOARD SEEKS CRUX OF PROH QUESTION

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—(AP)—Prepared to go to the "bottom" of the prohibition question, President Hoover's law enforcement commission today neared a formula for solving this troublesome problem.

This formula, still subject to the future discussion, provides that the ten men and one woman of the commission first determine whether the dry law is being enforced and if not, whether it can be perfected to make it enforceable.

Should the commission reach the conclusion that prohibition cannot be enforced the next step would be a decision whether it should recommend for modification or repeal.

There is no unanimity among the 11 minds on all the details of such a program, particularly over the latter part of it, but as the commissioners went home over the week end to study further the voluminous reports on prohibition there appeared signs that this plan was gaining favor.

DROWNED MAN IS NOW IDENTIFIED

What at first seemed impossible, identification of the body of a man found on an island a short distance upriver from Spon's landing Thursday, came to pass yesterday, when Deputy Coroner Dale Taylor discovered the missing clue in the man's shirt pocket. By means of an admittance card to the state fair, he was definitely identified as Arthur Bolin, patient at the Oregon state hospital for the insane.

Hospital authorities had given Bolin the card, signed by a hospital official, the morning of September 23. He was considered a trustworthy patient, quiet and well behaved. No evidence of suicidal tendencies had been noted during his confinement at the hospital.

Bolin was sent to the state hospital February 11 of this year from Astoria. He formerly worked at the Fisher Logging company at Astoria.

Without the card, identification would have been virtually impossible, the body was so badly decomposed.

MARINES' BAND INTEREST HIGH

Governor and Mayor Urge Public to Attend; Big Crowd in Portland

"All school children and all other citizens of the community should make a special effort to attend the concert of the United States Marine band which will appear in Salem, October 13, and thus assist in making possible such real musical entertainments for Salem and vicinity."

This is a part of the proclamation issued by Governor A. W. Norblad and Mayor T. A. Livesley urging citizens of Salem and adjacent territory to cooperate with the Salem Lions club in making a success of the appearance of the "President's Own" band at the horse show pavilion on Monday afternoon and evening.

The band appeared in Portland Thursday evening and was greeted by a record breaking crowd. The concert there was pronounced one of the finest things that Portland has heard in a long time.

The text of the governor's statement follows: "The Citizens of Salem and Vicinity:

"The citizens of this community are to be especially favored on October 13, 1930, when the United States Marine band of Washington, D. C.—the President's Band—appears in concert twice at the Horse Show Pavilion, state fair grounds.

"Foremost among the great military and concert bands of the entire world, this celebrated organization is tremendously popular. It is the premier military musical organization at the national capital where it plays for all the important state functions at the White House.

"The United States Marine Band, oldest American military band, was organized in 1801 soon after the removal of the capital to Washington. Its inception really dates back to a transition from the original fife and drum corps of 1775. The motto of these corps was "Don't Tread on Me," and this same motto appears on the drums of the Marine Band today.

"The music of this famous band has been one of the most interesting features at the capital since it first played at the tented camp of the Marines in 1801 on a hill overlooking Washington. It has been heard at inaugurations of all Presidents, welcomed kings, queens and distinguished visitors, set the time for all the great parades down the historic Pennsylvania avenue and served as the voice of the nation in joy and in sorrow.

"The United States Marine Band is rarely heard outside of Washington and special permission was granted by the president for this tour. There is no more brilliant sight than this group of talented musicians with their resplendent uniforms and gleaming instruments.

"The Lions club of Salem is to be commended in sponsoring the movement to bring this wonderful musical organization to Salem, and

"Now, therefore, I, A. W. Norblad, governor of the state of Oregon, urge all the school children and all other citizens of the community to make a special effort to attend these concerts and thus assist in making possible such real musical entertainment for Salem and vicinity.

"A. W. Norblad, Governor."

Orchestra music, arranged through courtesy of Miss Lena May Dotson, added to final touch to the evening's enjoyment. Furnishing the music were: orchestra ensemble; Miss Dotson, piano; Edith Welborn, banjo; Vera Emmett, violin; and Margaret Livesley, saxophone; trio: Miss Dotson, Miss Emmett and Chester McCain, cellist.

CHRISTMAS SEALS SALE IS PLANNED

Health Workers From Four Counties Gather Here; Campaign Outlined

Thirty-five health workers from Benton, Polk, Linn and Marion counties met in institute session at the city library Friday morning and afternoon to quicken interest in and formulate plans for the annual Christmas seal sale.

Speakers at the afternoon program included Mrs. Mary L. Fulkerson, Marion county school superintendent, who spoke in regard to health education in the schools and emphasized the advantage of educating the children to health habits and thought for it is they, she said, who will carry on the program in a few years. Miss Henriette Morris, child health worker with the state tuberculosis association, also spoke of the health program and the work to build up health projects in the schools.

Homer Chamberlain of the state tuberculosis association, talked on publicity, telling the workers of the importance of this phase of the campaign. And Sadie-Orr Dunbar, executive secretary of the state body, spoke briefly on topics of interest. She also led an informal discussion during the morning hour.

At the morning session, Miss Mary Fale of Salem, told of seal sale methods for the county territory; and Mrs. O. J. Brabee, who handled the mail sale in Salem last year, told of that phase of the campaign. Mrs. Dunbar presided at the session.

The Marion county public health association was hostess at a luncheon at the Gray Belle at noon to the visiting workers. Mrs. Brazier Small submitted her resignation as president of the county association at this meeting, which was accepted, but not without expressions of deep regret and praise of her splendid service during her executiveship of the past two years. Mrs. J. Ballantyne of Silverton, vice-president, was instructed to appoint a nominating committee to fill the vacancy. The next meeting will be held November 14, until which time Mrs. Ballantyne will act as president.

SCHOOLS HERE GIVEN PRAISE

Dr. Schorling Finds Work is Well Handled; Mentions Grant Beautification

Teaching in Salem school system measures up well with that in other cities and, experiments under way in the schools give promise of genuine progress. These were two of the optimistic thoughts left with Salem school officials by Dr. Raleigh Schorling Friday after he had spent the day visiting Parrish and Leslie junior highs, and Park, Lincoln and Grant elementary schools.

Schorling was principal speaker at the county institute held here the first of the week and returned Friday at invitation of Supt. George W. Hug. He was on his way from Corvallis to St. Helena. The educator is in charge of the experimental school work conducted by the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, including the two million dollar public school unit recently opened by the university. "Dolling up" at Grant Praised

The visitor was much pleased with the beautification program started with "dolling up" of the Grant school building, and says he believes it would be fine and logical for Salem schools to set a standard along the right lines in school beautification.

Some of the schools are poorly equipped insofar as concerns work toward special efficiency, he told the superintendent. He also advised that tables and chairs be substituted for desks in the classrooms as speedily as possible. The school board is now considering this matter, following the recommendation to that end from Hug.

CLARK INQUEST IS SET THIS MORNING

Inquest to determine how William Clark, killed instantly Thursday afternoon, met his death, will be held this morning at 10:30 o'clock, according to word last night from Lloyd Rigdon, county coroner.

Decision to hold the inquest came following preliminary investigation after two boys declared they saw the accident and saw the truck driven by Bud Dawson hit Clark's truck.

The accident occurred on the highway five miles south of town. It was first reported that Clark simply lost control of his machine, but word of the two boys and presence of marks on the rear of the truck indicating that another machine had struck it led to the investigation.

Bud Dawson, driver of a Willamette Valley Transfer company truck, reported that he passed or was passing Clark when the Clark truck swerved off the road. No charges will be filed against Dawson unless the verdict of the jury should indicate that he was responsible for the accident.
