HONORS URGED FOR OREGON PIONEERS

A plea for every church worker to back up attempts to influence the legislature to make an appropriation to put the busts of Jason Lee and Dr. McLoughlin, early Oregon pioneers, in the national capital was made by Dr. W. W. Youngson of Portland, superintendent of the Portland district of churches, in an address Sunday night at Jason Lee church here.

His address, "Pioneers of Yesterday and Today," was the day's observance of the 26th anniversary of the Jason Lee church.

More than 400 persons attended the Sunday morning service, when a former pastor of the church, Rev. Thomas Acheson of Tacoma, gave the anniversary sermon on "Tomorrow's Challenge—the Church's Response." Acheson declared the function that is really going to church will have to have the spirit of Christ, the love for human beings and a truly holy ambition. Participating also in the morning program were Rev. A. F. Lacy and Rev. W. E. Ingalls, both former pastors and now retired. A basket luncheon was served in the church parlors at noon.

The reception given at the parsonage in the afternoon by Rev. and Mrs. Hugh B. Fouke, Jr., was attended by more than a hundred persons.

Falls From 3rd Floor; Badly Hurt

In spite of the heroic efforts of his younger brother to save him from disaster, John Fisher, 30, of Eugene, slipped from the third story window of the Miller apartments, 633 Ferry street, early Sunday morning, to the sidewalk below, injuring himself seriously. Following is the story as told by his sister, Mrs. J. W. Mays:

"Fisher was rushed immediately by relatives to the Salem general hospital where he is under physicians' care. His condition is serious since he struck his head on the pavement, making two openings in the scalp and fracturing his skull. Until Monday afternoon, he was unconscious most of the time.

"Fisher's relatives, managers of the apartment house, state that he had been sick all night and at the suggestion of his brother, Lahmer, 23, he started to pace the room. Both young men were dressed.

"John Fisher walked near the window and stood there for a little while with his brother at his side. The opinion is expressed that he either was slightly suffocated or fainted, for he dropped down and out of the window. His brother grabbed on his feet and locked his teeth in the seat of his brother's trousers and held on, calling for help.

"Lahmer told John to grab a limb on a near-by tree. John tried, but could not get a purchase; in addition, the limb was small and soon broke. The sudden jerk of John's weight, broke the hold of his younger brother and the elder fell to the pavement.

BERRY INSPECTION FEE IS CALLED OFF

Inspection of strawberry plants will no longer cost Marion county growers a fee, according to instructions received by S. H. Van Trump, county fruit inspector, from H. S. Merriam, horticultural commissioner for this district. Van Trump has been collecting fees under authority given by the board some years ago. Merriam's instructions say:

"In the matter of fees for the inspection of strawberry fields I am of the opinion that berry growers, being taxpayers as are other fruit growers, are entitled to the services of the fruit inspector without extra charge the same as prune or cherry growers. Therefore until further notice no fees will be charged growers for any services rendered in your official capacity as fruit inspector.

"The license fee for growers selling strawberry plants has raised several questions. The attorney general has given an opinion that growers producing fruit primarily are exempt from license even though they sell some plants. On the other hand a grower advertising plants for sale in a newspaper, or in a public place, or selling them in a store or market, is considered to be making a business of selling plants and is subject to license under the nursery law. However the license or lack of it does not absolve the fruit inspector from the responsibility of preventing the sale of diseased plants."
