

Mt. Angel Land to be Irrigated From Abiqua River

3,000 ACRES TO BE IRRIGATED

Oregon Power Light and Irrigation Company to Develop Project

MT. ANGEL—Three thousand acres of rich farming land in the vicinity of Mt. Angel will be irrigated from the waters of Abiqua creek if present plans of the Oregon Power, Light and Irrigation company materialize.

According to Stephen Carver, president of the company, they are planning on diverting water from Abiqua creek near the Indianhead, and bringing the water to Mt. Angel in an open ditch. Cost of the construction of the ditch will be borne by the company, and the water will be delivered at a stipulated price to the consumer. During the dry summer months there should be ample water to supply 3,000 acres Carver believes.

The Oregon Light, Power & Irrigation company filed water and power rights on the Abiqua last August. Their filings were accepted, subject to previous filings for the Silverton municipal water supply, and a few small filings of several second feet each. This company is also planning to develop the hydroelectric power of the Abiqua and Butte creek. A 7-foot concrete dam has been constructed on the Abiqua at the Indian head, and a small diversion dam on Butte creek. The preliminary survey work for both projects was done by Cooper of Cupper, Simpson and Cooper, Salem.
