

BEARCATS WIN OVER LINFIELD

Tremendous Power Shown in First Period Dash; Final Count 44-0

(Continued from page 1)

plays; a 30-yard toss from DePoe, who had taken Erickson's place, to Kaiser, who ran the remaining five yards to a touchdown.

With a second string lineup starting the second quarter, the Bearcats pulled in parallel in the Bearcat camp, but for only one touchdown in which Ferguson did much of the ball totting, including the last eight yards in one try.

The Linfield took a brace and not only held the Bearcats, but did at little attacking of its own, with Christensen carrying the ball on running plays and tossing short lobs to Eckman and Fuller with good effect. The Wildcats reached Willamette's 35-yard line before the half ended.

Third Period

With Willamette's first string back in action in the third period, Linfield's defense was still good, and it was not until Gretsch pulled a long pass back to those days of suffering worry and trouble.

Lang carried the ball over.

The second string took up the burden in the final period and did a little better than the first string, dancing through the middle of Linfield's line for neat gains, the Bearcats drove to one touchdown and narrowly missed another. McAnany ran 40 yards to the ninety-yard mark and Johnson hit center for eight yards in a kicking placement for an extra point, and one other was gained when Linfield was offside. The other attempts were missed.

Lineup and summary:

Willamette	Linfield
Cardinal	LT
Carpenter	LE
F. Smith	LG
Ackerman	C
Philpott	RG
Jones	RT
Haldane	RE
Paul	RB
Gretsch	QB
Erickson	RH
Johnson	F
Willamette scoring: Touchdowns, Erickson 2, Gretsch, Kaiser (sub for Haldane), Lang (sub for Johnson), Ferguson (sub for Gretsch), Smith (sub for Erickson). Points after touchdown, Deetz (place kick) one, Linfield 0.

Referee, Stritmatter; umpire, Coleman; head linesman, Matson.

The Call Board

By OLIVE M. DOAK

BLIGH'S CAPITOL

Today—Olsen and Johnson in "Oh Sailor Behave."

Thursday—Reginald Donay in "Those Three French Girls."

THE ELSINORE

Today—Buster Keaton in "Dough Boys."

Wednesday—Clara Bow in "Her Wedding Night."

THE GRAND

Today—Conrad Nagel and Lila Lee in "Second Wife."

Friday—"Roaring Ranch," with Hoot Gibson.

THE HOLLYWOOD

Today—Wheeler and Woolsey in "Cuckoo."

Friday—Buster Keaton in "Dough Boys."

A few hours of real memories were brought to life again at Bligh's Capitol theatre Tuesday afternoon and evening, and made the observation of Armistice day seem a bit more serious and the contrast with our present day and contrast existence stood out in bold relief. It hardly seemed possible to think back to those days of suffering worry and trouble.

Corporal "Bob" Ingleston in person spoke for 30 minutes and with fun and pictures brought back very vivid pictures of those days in 1917 and 1918; pictures of Company M leaving Salem added greater realism to the memories recalled.

The screen feature which will be on again today was "Oh, Sailor Behave" and it is one continuous lot of nonsense. You may like it. At no time will you be in any danger of a brain storm.

Bombs Hurling by Angry War Vets

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Ohio, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Angered over failure of a grocery store to close in observance of Armistice Day, a group of Belmont county World War veterans today hurled tear bombs into the place. Patrons and employees were forced to flee, gasping for air.

The platoon of soldiers, wearing steel helmets and carrying rifles, was led to the store by C. McQuinn, commander of the Belmont county American Legion. He did not enter. Nelson McQuinn, former officer of the Ohio "40 and 8," fun society of the American Legion, was among those who went inside.

McQuinn said the veterans "considered it their right to close the store on Armistice Day just the same as they would protest any attempt of anyone to tear down the American flag."

Operators of the store protested against the attack to Mayor C. D. Bradford, but no charges were filed.

Civil authorities said they had no statements to make on the bombing.

The bombs were taken by the veterans from the sheriff's office. A deputy sheriff on duty there said he permitted them to enter the ammunition room thinking they desired material for a demonstration.

After forcing the patrons and employees outside with bomb fumes, a detachment of ex-soldiers wrecked a fruit display in front of the store.

The former doughboys said they had the backing of the public in their attempt to close the store.

King George, who two years ago stood bareheaded in the rain and caught the cold which nearly resulted in his death, stood at the foot of the cenotaph between his two sons, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York. This time he was in uniform and did not remove his hat.

A unique tribute came in the morning when a British passenger plane from Paris silenced its motors 2,000 feet aloft at 11 o'clock and its passengers stood bareheaded in their places for two minutes while the plane coasted downward.

HOLLYWOOD

Home of 25c Talks TODAY AND THURSDAY

Tonight is RADIO NIGHT

Bring your Tickets

Brought back to Salem for the last time

Mightiest of Fun Shows

WHEELER WOOLSEY

THE CUCKOO

Also Talking Comedy

Pathe-Sound Review

We Welcome You

200 comfortable rooms, each with bath. Reasonable rates. Continental breakfast.

The HOTEL CONGRESS

PORTLAND, OREGON

Sound News - Talking Comedy

THOUSANDS AT PROGRAM HERE

Honor Paid to Victims of World War; Memorial Salute Observed

(Continued from page 1)

"We were war not as a glorious adventure, in which we were fighting the battle of righteousness. Rather we see the war as a horrible vision, an era of unbridled destruction of human life," declared the general.

Militarism, defined as the habit of national groups in depending on armed force to protect themselves as their beliefs, was held by the speaker to be the circumstance which above all other causes was.

"Europe was an armed camp in 1914. And when passion stalked the land, reason was swept aside, and they rose to arms."

The speaker urged his hearers to preserve the trust placed in them by the founders of this nation. "Peace is now as it was in 1917, basic in American character and aspiration," he said. "We have tolerance, a desire to live in peace, to lead the way out of the black abyss of armed conflict."

"We must and will go on working for peace, stout in the belief that one day conciliation will be the final court among nations rather than the barbaric tribunal of ruthless force."

White told his hearers that they must nevertheless be rational pacifists. "Let us not put out of mind the cold, solid facts of existence," he counseled. "We alone cannot make world peace. We have seen all too recently that we can not always control our own destinies as to peace or war."

"While working for peace we must go on living in the belief that we have the finest civilization under the heavens. We must stand ready to die in maintaining that belief, finding our inspiration in the immortal service and sacrifice of those men of Marlon county whose names are inscribed immutably upon the pages of our country's history and which we may read upon that solemn monument in whose shadow we are gathered today," concluded the general.

About the memorial on the courthouse lawn were gathered a large audience to hear Major General White. The inscription on the monument reads:

"Their country's call answered. Sons and daughters of Marlon county who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War, 1914-1918. Greater love hath no man."

Men of Marlon county who sacrificed their lives during the conflict were Joseph A. Martin, Ben

SURVIVOR OF SHIP WRECK IS RESCUED

(Continued from page 1)

er Brooklyn which sank off Eureka last Saturday, was alive.

Mrs. Greve said the other day when she learned of the disaster that she felt certain her husband would survive this one as he had two previous times at sea.

Greve later said he didn't know how he managed to hold on to the fragment of the wrecked Brooklyn which intervened between him and drowning for nearly 72 hours on the storm tossed waters. He said he had long since given up hope of rescue when the "Two Sisters" appeared beside him.

"Don't ask me how I come to be alive and why I didn't die in those awful nights and days," he said in the hospital. "I don't know and I don't believe I ever will know. It's all a nightmare. I can remember little, except, except occasionally I would awake to find the waves washing over me or the hot sun beating down on my bare body."

"I barely remember loading the ship, casting off and starting for the bar. Right now, I can't tell what happened at the bar. Sometimes I think I see water pouring over the deck and hear the yells of the men. But I think it must be a dream.

"Then there were nightmares—of something trying to tear me away from a timber to which I am holding. Then, it seemed, I would wind my arms and legs tighter around the timber."

Greve's first question was: "What happened to the others?"

Told he was the only one rescued, he said:

"I don't understand how that can be. But if it is so, it is so."

RETURN TO LAND IS 'AE' MESSAGE

Noted Irish Poet Comes to Salem With Message; Well Received

(Continued from page 1)

their spiritual strength from men connected with the land.

With a rapidly increasing urban population and with rural life apparently becoming less alluring socially as well as economically, America can well give thought to the weakness she inevitably develops, if her farming population becomes a mere fragment of the nation.

Aids Strength of Irish Free State

Ireland has won political strength with her Free State mainly because the agricultural association movement has given solidarity, business experience and character to her citizens, Russell declared. He said he felt that the Irish self-government was the most rigorously honest and successful of any in Europe today.

"There is a peril in our industrial civilization," said the speaker. "It is a maxim in London that the fourth generation of Londoners always dies out. Energy is sapped by the city. We retrograde to the brute in the slum and the alley. Humanity is like a great giant which recedes new strength when it touches the earth. Yet mankind wants life and wants it abundantly. If life grows dull, uninteresting, devitalized on the farm we can only expect that our children will not wish to remain there."

The speaker sketched his experience as guide and counsellor in the organization of hundreds of agricultural societies in Ireland. He said the original organizers were the leaders of the community, bankers, merchants, professors, poets, public spirited people who foresaw the need of a revived and improved rural life.

The movement was strictly non-partisan and non-sectarian despite the opposition of political groups at its outset. So successful has the development of the rural movement been, said Russell, that each political party now adopts a strong agricultural plank.

Cultural Side Is Touched Also

While the movement was primarily economic, teaching its members how better to market their goods as well as to grow and manufacture them, the association prospers as also social.

THOUSANDS AT PROGRAM HERE

Honor Paid to Victims of World War; Memorial Salute Observed

(Continued from page 1)

"We were war not as a glorious adventure, in which we were fighting the battle of righteousness. Rather we see the war as a horrible vision, an era of unbridled destruction of human life," declared the general.

Militarism, defined as the habit of national groups in depending on armed force to protect themselves as their beliefs, was held by the speaker to be the circumstance which above all other causes was.

"Europe was an armed camp in 1914. And when passion stalked the land, reason was swept aside, and they rose to arms."

The speaker urged his hearers to preserve the trust placed in them by the founders of this nation. "Peace is now as it was in 1917, basic in American character and aspiration," he said. "We have tolerance, a desire to live in peace, to lead the way out of the black abyss of armed conflict."

"We must and will go on working for peace, stout in the belief that one day conciliation will be the final court among nations rather than the barbaric tribunal of ruthless force."

White told his hearers that they must nevertheless be rational pacifists. "Let us not put out of mind the cold, solid facts of existence," he counseled. "We alone cannot make world peace. We have seen all too recently that we can not always control our own destinies as to peace or war."

"While working for peace we must go on living in the belief that we have the finest civilization under the heavens. We must stand ready to die in maintaining that belief, finding our inspiration in the immortal service and sacrifice of those men of Marlon county whose names are inscribed immutably upon the pages of our country's history and which we may read upon that solemn monument in whose shadow we are gathered today," concluded the general.

About the memorial on the courthouse lawn were gathered a large audience to hear Major General White. The inscription on the monument reads:

"Their country's call answered. Sons and daughters of Marlon county who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War, 1914-1918. Greater love hath no man."

Men of Marlon county who sacrificed their lives during the conflict were Joseph A. Martin, Ben

THOUSANDS AT PROGRAM HERE

Honor Paid to Victims of World War; Memorial Salute Observed

(Continued from page 1)

"We were war not as a glorious adventure, in which we were fighting the battle of righteousness. Rather we see the war as a horrible vision, an era of unbridled destruction of human life," declared the general.

Militarism, defined as the habit of national groups in depending on armed force to protect themselves as their beliefs, was held by the speaker to be the circumstance which above all other causes was.

"Europe was an armed camp in 1914. And when passion stalked the land, reason was swept aside, and they rose to arms."

The speaker urged his hearers to preserve the trust placed in them by the founders of this nation. "Peace is now as it was in 1917, basic in American character and aspiration," he said. "We have tolerance, a desire to live in peace, to lead the way out of the black abyss of armed conflict."

"We must and will go on working for peace, stout in the belief that one day conciliation will be the final court among nations rather than the barbaric tribunal of ruthless force."

White told his hearers that they must nevertheless be rational pacifists. "Let us not put out of mind the cold, solid facts of existence," he counseled. "We alone cannot make world peace. We have seen all too recently that we can not always control our own destinies as to peace or war."

"While working for peace we must go on living in the belief that we have the finest civilization under the heavens. We must stand ready to die in maintaining that belief, finding our inspiration in the immortal service and sacrifice of those men of Marlon county whose names are inscribed immutably upon the pages of our country's history and which we may read upon that solemn monument in whose shadow we are gathered today," concluded the general.

About the memorial on the courthouse lawn were gathered a large audience to hear Major General White. The inscription on the monument reads:

"Their country's call answered. Sons and daughters of Marlon county who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War, 1914-1918. Greater love hath no man."

Men of Marlon county who sacrificed their lives during the conflict were Joseph A. Martin, Ben

THOUSANDS AT PROGRAM HERE

Honor Paid to Victims of World War; Memorial Salute Observed

(Continued from page 1)

"We were war not as a glorious adventure, in which we were fighting the battle of righteousness. Rather we see the war as a horrible vision, an era of unbridled destruction of human life," declared the general.

Militarism, defined as the habit of national groups in depending on armed force to protect themselves as their beliefs, was held by the speaker to be the circumstance which above all other causes was.

"Europe was an armed camp in 1914. And when passion stalked the land, reason was swept aside, and they rose to arms."

The speaker urged his hearers to preserve the trust placed in them by the founders of this nation. "Peace is now as it was in 1917, basic in American character and aspiration," he said. "We have tolerance, a desire to live in peace, to lead the way out of the black abyss of armed conflict."

"We must and will go on working for peace, stout in the belief that one day conciliation will be the final court among nations rather than the barbaric tribunal of ruthless force."

White told his hearers that they must nevertheless be rational pacifists. "Let us not put out of mind the cold, solid facts of existence," he counseled. "We alone cannot make world peace. We have seen all too recently that we can not always control our own destinies as to peace or war."

"While working for peace we must go on living in the belief that we have the finest civilization under the heavens. We must stand ready to die in maintaining that belief, finding our inspiration in the immortal service and sacrifice of those men of Marlon county whose names are inscribed immutably upon the pages of our country's history and which we may read upon that solemn monument in whose shadow we are gathered today," concluded the general.

About the memorial on the courthouse lawn were gathered a large audience to hear Major General White. The inscription on the monument reads:

"Their country's call answered. Sons and daughters of Marlon county who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War, 1914-1918. Greater love hath no man."

Men of Marlon county who sacrificed their lives during the conflict were Joseph A. Martin, Ben

THOUSANDS AT PROGRAM HERE

Honor Paid to Victims of World War; Memorial Salute Observed

(Continued from page 1)

"We were war not as a glorious adventure, in which we were fighting the battle of righteousness. Rather we see the war as a horrible vision, an era of unbridled destruction of human life," declared the general.

Militarism, defined as the habit of national groups in depending on armed force to protect themselves as their beliefs, was held by the speaker to be the circumstance which above all other causes was.

"Europe was an armed camp in 1914. And when passion stalked the land, reason was swept aside, and they rose to arms."

The speaker urged his hearers to preserve the trust placed in them by the founders of this nation. "Peace is now as it was in 1917, basic in American character and aspiration," he said. "We have tolerance, a desire to live in peace, to lead the way out of the black abyss of armed conflict."

"We must and will go on working for peace, stout in the belief that one day conciliation will be the final court among nations rather than the barbaric tribunal of ruthless force."

White told his hearers that they must nevertheless be rational pacifists. "Let us not put out of mind the cold, solid facts of existence," he counseled. "We alone cannot make world peace. We have seen all too recently that we can not always control our own destinies as to peace or war."

"While working for peace we must go on living in the belief that we have the finest civilization under the heavens. We must stand ready to die in maintaining that belief, finding our inspiration in the immortal service and sacrifice of those men of Marlon county whose names are inscribed immutably upon the pages of our country's history and which we may read upon that solemn monument in whose shadow we are gathered today," concluded the general.

About the memorial on the courthouse lawn were gathered a large audience to hear Major General White. The inscription on the monument reads:

"Their country's call answered. Sons and daughters of Marlon county who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War, 1914-1918. Greater love hath no man."

Men of Marlon county who sacrificed their lives during the conflict were Joseph A. Martin, Ben

THOUSANDS AT PROGRAM HERE

Honor Paid to Victims of World War; Memorial Salute Observed

(Continued from page 1)

"We were war not as a glorious adventure, in which we were fighting the battle of righteousness. Rather we see the war as a horrible vision, an era of unbridled destruction of human life," declared the general.

Militarism, defined as the habit of national groups in depending on armed force to protect themselves as their beliefs, was held by the speaker to be the circumstance which above all other causes was.

"Europe was an armed camp in 1914. And when passion stalked the land, reason was swept aside, and they rose to arms."

The speaker urged his hearers to preserve the trust placed in them by the founders of this nation. "Peace is now as it was in 1917, basic in American character and aspiration," he said. "We have tolerance, a desire to live in peace, to lead the way out of the black abyss of armed conflict."

"We must and will go on working for peace, stout in the belief that one day conciliation will be the final court among nations rather than the barbaric tribunal of ruthless force."

White told his hearers that they must nevertheless be rational pacifists. "Let us not put out of mind the cold, solid facts of existence," he counseled. "We alone cannot make world peace. We have seen all too recently that we can not always control our own destinies as to peace or war."

"While working for peace we must go on living in the belief that we have the finest civilization under the heavens. We must stand ready to die in maintaining that belief, finding our inspiration in the immortal service and sacrifice of those men of Marlon county whose names are inscribed immutably upon the pages of our country's history and which we may read upon that solemn monument in whose shadow we are gathered today," concluded the general.

About the memorial on the courthouse lawn were gathered a large audience to hear Major General White. The inscription on the monument reads:

"Their country's call answered. Sons and daughters of Marlon county who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War, 1914-1918. Greater love hath no man."

Men of Marlon county who sacrificed their lives during the conflict were Joseph A. Martin, Ben

THOUSANDS AT PROGRAM HERE

Honor Paid to Victims of World War; Memorial Salute Observed

(Continued from page 1)

"We were war not as a glorious adventure, in which we were fighting the battle of righteousness. Rather we see the war as a horrible vision, an era of unbridled destruction of human life," declared the general.

Militarism, defined as the habit of national groups in depending on armed force to protect themselves as their beliefs, was held by the speaker to be the circumstance which above all other causes was.

"Europe was an armed camp in 1914. And when passion stalked the land, reason was swept aside, and they rose to arms."

The speaker urged his hearers to preserve the trust placed in them by the founders of this nation. "Peace is now as it was in 1917, basic in American character and aspiration," he said. "We have tolerance, a desire to live in peace, to lead the way out of the black abyss of armed conflict."

"We must and will go on working for peace, stout in the belief that one day conciliation will be the final court among nations rather than the barbaric tribunal of ruthless force."

White told his hearers that they must nevertheless be rational pacifists. "Let us not put out of mind the cold, solid facts of existence," he counseled. "We alone cannot make world peace. We have seen all too recently that we can not always control our own destinies as to peace or war."

"While working for peace we must go on living in the belief that we have the finest civilization under the heavens. We must stand ready to die in maintaining that belief, finding our inspiration in the immortal service and sacrifice of those men of Marlon county whose names are inscribed immutably upon the pages of our country's history and which we may read upon that solemn monument in whose shadow we are gathered today," concluded the general.

About the memorial on the courthouse lawn were gathered a large audience to hear Major General White. The inscription on the monument reads:

"Their country's call answered. Sons and daughters of Marlon county who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War, 1914-1918. Greater love hath no man."

Men of Marlon county who sacrificed their lives during the conflict were Joseph A. Martin, Ben

THOUSANDS AT PROGRAM HERE

Honor Paid to Victims of World War; Memorial Salute Observed

(Continued from page 1)

"We were war not as a glorious adventure, in which we were fighting the battle of righteousness. Rather we see the war as a horrible vision, an era of unbridled destruction of human life," declared the general.

Militarism, defined as the habit of national groups in depending on armed force to protect themselves as their beliefs, was held by the speaker to be the circumstance which above all other causes was.

"Europe was an armed camp in 1914. And when passion stalked the land, reason was swept aside, and they rose to arms."

The speaker urged his hearers to preserve the trust placed in them by the founders of this nation. "Peace is now as it was in 1917, basic in American character and aspiration," he said. "We have tolerance, a desire to live in peace, to lead the way out of the black abyss of armed conflict."

"We must and will go on working for peace, stout in the belief that one day conciliation will be the final court among nations rather than the barbaric tribunal of ruthless force."

White told his hearers that they must nevertheless be rational pacifists. "Let us not put out of mind the cold, solid facts of existence," he counseled. "We alone cannot make world peace. We have seen all too recently that we can not always control our own destinies as to peace or war."

"While working for peace we must go on living in the belief that we have the finest civilization under the heavens. We must stand ready to die in maintaining that belief, finding our inspiration in the immortal service and sacrifice of those men of Marlon county whose names are inscribed immutably upon the pages of our country's history and which we may read upon that solemn monument in whose shadow we are gathered today," concluded the general.

About the memorial on the courthouse lawn were gathered a large audience to hear Major General White. The inscription on the monument reads:

"Their country's call answered. Sons and daughters of Marlon county who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War, 1914-1918. Greater love hath no man."

Men of Marlon county who sacrificed their lives during the conflict were Joseph A. Martin, Ben

THOUSANDS AT PROGRAM HERE

Honor Paid to Victims of World War; Memorial Salute Observed

(Continued from page 1)

"We were war not as a glorious adventure, in which we were fighting the battle of righteousness. Rather we see the war as a horrible vision, an era of unbridled destruction of human life," declared the general.

Militarism, defined as the habit of national groups in depending on armed force to protect themselves as their beliefs, was held by the speaker to be the circumstance which above all other causes was.

"Europe was an armed camp in 1914. And when passion stalked the land, reason was swept aside, and they rose to arms."

The speaker urged his hearers to preserve the trust placed in them by the founders of this nation. "Peace is now as it was in 1917, basic in American character and aspiration," he said. "We have tolerance, a desire to live in peace, to lead the way out of the black abyss of armed conflict."

"We must and will go on working for peace, stout in the belief that one day conciliation will be the final court among nations rather than the barbaric tribunal of ruthless force."

White told his hearers that they must nevertheless be rational pacifists. "Let us not put out of mind the cold, solid facts of existence," he counseled. "We alone cannot make world peace. We have seen all too recently that we can not always control our own destinies as to peace or war."

"While working for peace we must go on living in the belief that we have the finest civilization under the heavens. We must stand ready to die in maintaining that belief, finding our inspiration in the immortal service and sacrifice of those men of Marlon county whose names are inscribed immutably upon the pages of our country's history and which we may read upon that solemn monument in whose shadow we are gathered today," concluded the general.

About the memorial on the courthouse lawn were gathered a large audience to hear Major General White. The inscription on the monument reads:

"Their country's call answered. Sons and daughters of Marlon county who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War, 1914-1918. Greater love hath no man."

Men of Marlon county who sacrificed their lives during the conflict were Joseph A. Martin, Ben

THOUSANDS AT PROGRAM HERE

Honor Paid to Victims of World War; Memorial Salute Observed

(Continued from page 1)

"We were war not as a glorious adventure, in which we were fighting the battle of righteousness. Rather we see the war as a horrible vision, an era of unbridled destruction of human life," declared the general.

Militarism, defined as the habit of national groups in depending on armed force to protect themselves as their beliefs, was held by the speaker to be the circumstance which above all other causes was.

"Europe was an armed camp in 1914. And when passion stalked the land, reason was swept aside, and they rose to arms."

The speaker urged his hearers to preserve the trust placed in them by the founders of this nation. "Peace is now as it was in 1917, basic in American character and aspiration," he said. "We have tolerance, a desire to live in peace, to lead the way out of the black abyss of armed conflict."

"We must and will go on working for peace, stout in the belief that one day conciliation will be the final court among nations rather than the barbaric tribunal of ruthless force."

White told his hearers that they must nevertheless be rational pacifists. "Let us not put out of mind the cold, solid facts of existence," he counseled. "We alone cannot make world peace. We have seen all too recently that we can not always control our own destinies as to peace or war."

"While working for peace we must go on living in the belief that we have the finest civilization under the heavens. We must stand ready to die in maintaining that belief, finding our inspiration in the immortal service and sacrifice of those men of Marlon county whose names are inscribed immutably upon the pages of our country's history and which we may read upon that solemn monument in whose shadow we are gathered today," concluded the general.

About the memorial on the courthouse lawn were gathered a large audience to hear Major General White. The inscription on the monument reads:

"Their country's call answered. Sons and daughters of Marlon county who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War, 1914-1918. Greater love hath no man."

Men of Marlon county who sacrificed their lives during the conflict were Joseph A. Martin, Ben

OH SAILOR BEHAVE!

with Olsen and Johnson America's Funniest Clowns!

Irene Delroy — Charles King — Lotti Loder.

Corp. Bob Ingleston

—In Person—

and his humorous version of the Big Argument "AMERICA UNDER FIRE"

STARTS TOMORROW

You must come over and meet those three fascinating French ba-bees!

THOSE THREE FRENCH GIRLS

with Fifi Dorsay Reginald Denny

Cliff Edwards, Yola d'Avril, Sandra Karel, George Grossmith

The ELSINORE TODAY THUR. FRI.

THE UNBLUSHING BRIDE MAKES HER WEDDING VOWS!

CLARA BOW in "Her Wedding Night" with CHARLES RUGGLES KEETS GALLAGHER

She doesn't want a husband... he doesn't want a wife! But when they get together — then what? That's where the fun continues in this riotous farce. With the Bow "IT" flashing in and out of parlor, bedroom and bath.

PARAMOUNT PICTURE

SOUND NEWS - TALKING COMEDY

ON SATURDAY

Chevrolet will present a Six that will command interest for these important reasons

1 BIGGER

2 BETTER

3 AT NEW LOW PRICES

CHEVROLET

BRITAIN REVERES MARTYRS OF WAR

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Gray haired men who were young 12 years ago when the guns in France fell silent, stood in crowds with their king about London's cenotaph today as Britain paid the Armistice day tribute to her war dead.

In Liverpool where Lord Derby unveiled a new war memorial; at Collihot where Germany's great airplane DO-X rested on the water; in every city and village of the kingdom, work stopped and men stood with bowed heads in two minutes of silence at 11 o'clock.

King George, who two years ago stood bareheaded in the rain and caught the cold which nearly resulted in his death, stood at the foot of the cenotaph between his two sons, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York. This time he was in uniform and did not remove his hat.

A unique tribute came in the morning when a British passenger plane from Paris silenced its motors 2,000 feet aloft at 11 o'clock and its passengers stood bareheaded in their places for two minutes while the plane coasted downward.

So, Boss! You Can Drink Like The Finest Lady

VANCOUVER, Wash., Nov. 11.—(AP)—S. F. Marlon, Burton dairyman, wants his cows to be contented.

Marlon has built a new barn for his cows and as an added touch is having individual drinking fountains installed. When a cow lowers her head to a perforated sanitary plate in her stall a flow of clear mountain water is released.

No More Gas In Stomach and Bowels

If you wish to be permanently relieved of gas in stomach and bowels, take Bealman's Gas Tablets, a gas proper remedy for stomach gas, all the bad effects resulting from gas pressure.

That empty, gnawing feeling at the pit of the stomach will disappear; that anxious, nervous feeling, and you will again be able to take a deep breath without discomfort.

That drowsy, sleepy feeling after entertainment, bloating will cease. Your limbs, arms and fingers will no longer feel cold and "go to sleep" because Bealman's Gas Tablets prevent gas from interfering with the circulation. Get the genuine in the yellow package at any good drug store. Price $1.

Always on hand at DANIEL J. FRY'S