Jenkins Avers River Barges Surely Coming

OREGON CITY, Ore., Nov. 25—(AP)—Speakers at a meeting of the Willamette Valley Waterways association here Monday expressed the opinion barges soon will be operated extensively on the Willamette river. More than 75 business men attended the meeting.

"The industries in the upper Willamette valley often have been bogged down because of lack of distributative transportation," said Frank Jenkins, president of the association. ## NEED FIRST AID? CALL AN OFFICER

Red Cross Sponsors Course In Helping Ill, Pending Doctor's Arrival

After the first two months of next year, if you are suffocating, have been poisoned, have suffered from some broken bones, your nearest fireman, policeman or sheriff will know just what to do, pending the arrival of the doctor.

Provided, of course, that this officer attends the 15-hour course of first-aid instruction to begin January 7 under the auspices of the local Red Cross chapter.

Ralph Carlson, field representative of the Red Cross working out of San Francisco, made arrangements yesterday to conduct such a course locally with Salem men as instructors. Carlson said the first meeting would be under the direction of Dr. Vernon A. Douglas and would be held in the fire headquarters at the city hall between 7 and 9 p. m.

All Firemen May Enroll
Fire Chief Harry Hutton informed Carlson that he would try to have every fireman enroll in the course. Similar attendance is expected from the police department.

Carlson has been organizing similar first-aid training throughout the northwest for public officers. He said Portland and Eugene were two cities which already boasted of the fact that everyone of their public safety officers had completed such instruction in emergency first-aid word.

Carlson made it plain yesterday that the aim of the Red Cross work was to protect life and to relieve suffering in the interim between accidents and the arrival of doctors.
