DAIRYMEN DRIVERS OBTAIN OWN SETUP

Withdrawal Effected From Teamsters' and Truck Drivers' Group

Arbitration between the local labor council and the truck drivers of Capital Dairies has resulted in move to organize a dairymen's drivers organization in the city, this group to hold a charter of its own. Move to that effect was agreed upon at the central labor meeting Tuesday night at the Labor temple.

In the past drivers from one dairy, the Salem Sanitary, have been affiliated with the teamsters and truck drivers' local. The action taken last night ends a long period of conferences and arbitration with the Capital Dairies' drivers.

A number of communications were read at the meeting, including one from the Associated General Contractors of Salem asking that men of the organized labor and building trades reduce wages to a scale that would amount to a 25 per cent reduction. The contractors argued that such action would encourage building at the present time.

Council Fights Wage Cut

The central labor council has taken an opposite view of the wage cut idea, and contends that as much money as possible should be kept in circulation now, and that a wage cut will withdraw money from use. The council expressed itself as definitely opposed to any move to reduce wages.

The national federation of labor has written asking the local council to work with civic committees and other bodies in helping out the unemployment situation, it was reported. Application of the sub local unit in Salem of outside wiremen's local No. 125 to be reaffiliated with the central labor council was accepted and order given for the sub-local to be so notified. There are 35 members in the sub-local.

A letter was also presented from the metal trades of the American Federation of Labor

PRISON EDUCATION WORK INTERESTING

Former Oregon Normal Instructor Directing Program, McNeil Island

MONMOUTH, Nov. 26.—Mrs. N. A. Nelson, accompanied by her son, Melford, and her daughter, Juanita, enjoyed a weekend visit with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Meisenberg of Tacoma; and with Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Stiles of Stellacoom, Washington.

While stopping with the Stiles family they made a trip in a government speed boat to McNeil's Island, three miles from the mainland at Stellacoom, and on which the federal prison is located. Stiles, a former member of the Oregon Normal's teaching staff, now is director of educational work among the convicts of the prison. He has two highly educated assistants, and a corps of 14 subsidiary teachers, all of whom are from the convict ranks.

Test System Used Stiles has worked out an elaborate system of mental intelligence tests for the prisoners, as a means of determining each one's capability to pursue any chosen educational project. Cards of various colors are used to designate the intelligence rating of each individual. There are now between 900 and 1000 convicts there.

The educational venture is the first to be tried at McNeil's Island, its mission being largely to assist in preparing the prisoners toward rehabilitation when liberated.

The island is about two miles wide by three miles long, and contains more than 1000 acres of land. It presents a rocky coast line facing the mainland, but much of it is cultivable and is utilized as a large prison farm. In addition to the convicts there are about 200 officials and others living on the island.

Melford Nelson and Stiles attended a U. of W. vs. Washington S. C. football game at Seattle Saturday afternoon.

'CAP' MILEY IS CALLED

Pioneer of Aurora Passes Away After Long and Active Career

AURORA, Nov. 26.—One of the oldest pioneers belonging to the Aurora colony was William Miley, familiarly known as "Cap" Miley, who crossed the plains in 1863, driving a four-yoke ox team, and enduring with pioneer courage and patience the trials and privations incident to the life of the early settler.

In this particular train were 40 wagons and 180 persons, who experienced little trouble with the Indians, nor were their ranks lessened by serious epidemics and other physical ills. They crossed the Missouri river May 5, 1863, and arrived in Aurora October 4, 1863. William Miley was born in Columbia county, Mo., August 1, 1844, and comes of German ancestry, his father, John Fred Miley, having been born in the fatherland.

At an early age William was taught the shoemaker's trade and supplied the colonists with shoes. After the colony disbanded he continued this occupation until within a few years of his death.

In Early Colony In 1865, with a mule and two blankets, "Cap" retraced his steps to Boise, Idaho, at the request of Dr. Kell, to meet another caravan and pilot them to the land of opportunity. A brother of Dr. Kell was in this train. Having saved his hard-earned dollars, Mr. Miley purchased a quarter section of land, which he cleared and improved in the most primitive way, the work being done by hand in spare time. Mr. Miley was a part of the famous colony band, playing the cornet, and he will be remembered by old-timers as a constant whistler.

For a short time during his active career he and his brother were in the mercantile business in Wilsonville. He later disposed of his interest to his brother, and also sold the farm, maintaining a residence in town, where he lived alone until his death, Monday, November 24.

Life Was Varied During his long life he was a bachelor, politician, shoemaker, farmer and man of affairs. On the republican ticket he was elected county commissioner for two terms, where his thrifty habits applied to the money belonging to the county, saving the taxpayers many dollars. He was an interesting conversationalist, and served as city councilman two terms and was town marshal. He was absolutely trustworthy and was respected throughout his long life.

Surviving him is one brother, Frederick of Greencastle, Mo., and a large number of nephews and nieces: John H. and William J. Miley, Aurora; Donda Campbell and Kate Angel of Sherwood; Alvin Miley, Portland; Mrs. Humbert, Long Beach, Cal.; Kate Beck, Sophia Keil, Mary, Adam and William Steinbach, Aurora; Leon Miley, and two sisters, Wilhamina and Mrs. Davis of Portland.

INDEPENDENCE, Nov. 26.—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Perry of Anchorage, Alaska, arrived here Saturday and will be the guests of friends here for some time. Mr. Perry was at one time in charge of the creamery in this place.
