There is a reason for this. Kuhn's repair shop, 464 Court street, repairs without charge every pair of shoes that needs re-pairing, month in and month out. This makes a good sized item for Mr. Kuhn; but that is his business. That is his way of do-ing his bit for his needy broth-ers and sisters—"for the poor ye alway have with you," as the Master said when He walked the dusty roads of old Judea. There is no limit with Mr. Kuhn; or rather the need is the limit. The need requires only the word of Mrs. Carson, in charge of the Associated Charities work.

The Spaulding mill people give many loads of wood to the poor, at cost of hauling; many times without cost. The canneries give many cases of fruits and vegetables Doctors give their services free. There is now a case of a girl needing special medical attention and special diet; the latter a rather expensive one. But the appeal, through Ensign Williams, will be met-perhaps by a service club. If not, in some other way. A life may be saved.

As long as Salem is a great fruit center, there will be need for winter relief here-owing tothe necessity for so much sea-sonal help. This is at present magnified by the general unemployment situation. But it will recur each winter; though, it is to be hoped, in modified volume.

4 4 4 The Community Serivce, "all for charity," should function permanently, and not for just five months of the present winter. if for only the value of the prevention of duplication. And the Salvation 2rmy needs a new building. And so does the Asociated Charities.

The thing now is to make up the full $5,000 special fund, and to add to all the regular revenues of helpfulness. Salem will do it. It is Salem's way.

Continued duliness features the cauliflower market, with Cal-ifornia sharply curtailing shipnents on account of low prices there. Oregon's loadings are light, f. o. b. cash track. Puget Sound markets are now oversupplied with Portland cauliflower. Delicious apples are selling wrapped and packed apples con-tinues dull. Oranges and grapefruit are moving more readily than other fruits now.

Although lettuce arrivals from central California show fair quality, the trade is expectant of much finer quality, when Imperial valley lettuce begins to arrive. First arrivals are expected this week.

Tomatoes are showing better quality now. Mexican tomatoes will be available at Portland in the near future.

Corn Prices on Way Down Again

CHICAGO, Dec. 6. - (AP) -Corn poured into primary markets today much faster than at this time last week. In dismay, R. holders of future delivery contracts made haste to stop losses, and a quick plunge in corn resuited. Prices fell to about 5e a bushel lower than were obtainable at one stage heretofere this week. Contributing to corn weakness was an official fore-cast of generally wild and fair weather conditions throughout the week indicating a further liberal movement of corn from farms, and pointing also to a letup in feeding demand.

Ivan Kearns and a friend from Seattle attracted no small amount of interest on Friday afternoon, when they arrived here by air-plane and circled low many times in the north part of town. It was thought by some that the plane was out of gas and was endeavoring to signal one of the filling stations. It developed later that Ivan was signaling to his brother, Guy, to follow the direction the plane had taken down her parents home after spending the West Stayton road, where it two months in Portland. landed in Joe Hendricks' field.
