

Butler's Stand on Abolishing Football Gate Draws Fire

MANY LEADERS ARE IN ACCORD

Practical Objections to Abolition of Cash Raised; Plan to be Talked

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—(AP)—While college executives today throughout the country commented in contrasting fashion, critically as well as favorably, upon his suggestions for an "athletic league of nations" and less emphasis on football gate receipts, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler indicated himself he did not intend to unfurl a crusading banner on the subject.

The president of Columbia university, although much interested in the widespread response to his proposals, merely set forth his opinions and did not plan to take any specific action designed to put them into effect at his own institution. His views were expressed incidentally in his annual report. At the same time, he said, "if anything comes of it, so much the better."

Held "Worth Considering"

In the east Chancellor Elmer Ellsworth Brown of New York university, considered the suggestion "entirely desirable" and President Ernest M. Hopkins at Dartmouth university, thought it "certainly worth considering," but there was no general movement that presaged any change in present athletic arrangements.

While in principle Dr. Butler's comment met with approval it appeared that the obstacles in the way of ending sports to the point where gate receipts would be unnecessary, and such branches as baseball and track would not feast on the profits of football, were too great to overcome.

Athletic authorities at Yale refused to comment on the suggestion but Thomas S. Gates, president of the University of Pennsylvania, issued a statement expressing sympathy with Dr. Butler's ideas.

"Penn" Not Studying Problem

"Anything that Dr. Butler has to say concerning intercollegiate relationship calls for our sympathetic consideration," he said. "Three months ago at the beginning of the football season, we began a thorough study of physical education, student health and competitive athletics at Pennsylvania and this study is in progress. There is a more important phase of intercollegiate athletics than the relations of the individual student to athletic competition, and we are strongly in accord with any proposal which tends to clarify such relationships."

Dr. H. H. Benedict, president of the University of Texas, said there were important things connected with collegiate life more in need of endowment than sports. Dr. R. N. Blackwell, business manager of athletics at Southern Methodist university, brought out facts and figures to prove the endowment suggestion was not feasible.

Commercial league will play Wednesday night, this week, instead of Thursday, Christmas.

One of the boys' misuses is reported to have scolded him for hanging out in the "alleys." Maybe in the interest of keeping the husbands safe for tempins, Fred Karr had better do a hasty thumbing in his dictionary for a new name for "alley." It sounds bad to the wives.

Humm! Looks as though the little bill of challenge posted by the two Bills, Hemenway and Yarnell, would bring forth no brave plumes to answer.

New Prize

The lucky man who rolls the highest single game of the month beginning December 20 receives a five-dollar hat from Emmons Clothing company. L. V. "Tiny" Hall won the last hat to be given for most 200-games. He chalked up 23 of them in two weeks.

Western players practiced at Berkeley under Coach Dana K. Bible of Nebraska and Percy Levey of the Olympic club. Several passing plays were added to the list while signal drill was stressed. The eastern team will be outweighed several pounds to the man.

AGUA CALIENTE IS NEXT GOLF MECCA

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 22.—(AP)—Golf and old St. Nick drew the winter army of professionals and amateurs southward to Agua Caliente today, where Leo Diegel will entertain them next month and $25,000 worth of tournament, the richest in the world.

For the present, the majority of the divot clan will be concerned with the qualifying trials for the tournament, which begin tomorrow Wednesday. Most of the famous are exempt from the preliminary rounds with the exception of Walter Hagen.

Agua Caliente, where Diegel is professional, will require qualifying rounds by all except those who qualified in the 1929 P. G. A. championship, the low 32 in the national open, foreign players and the prize winners of last year's meet. Hagen, caught in a long slump, missed all of these opportunities.

Head Coach Kerr is teaching the team the Warner wing-back formation. Although several backfield combinations were tried, it is certain that Malcolm of Colgate will be the starting fullback while Bruder of Northwestern will be one of the halfbacks.

Western players practiced at Berkeley under Coach Dana K. Bible of Nebraska and Percy Levey of the Olympic club. Several passing plays were added to the list while signal drill was stressed. The eastern team will be outweighed several pounds to the man.

HIGH GAME IS TO DRAW WELL

Special Features at School Also Assure Crowd Here This Evening

Salem high will open its 1930 basketball season tonight at the high school gymnasium when the alumni team matches individual ability against the team play of "Holly's" men.

Fussell's tight, homecoming and the "club" dance after the game will all contribute to the affair and a large crowd is expected at the game.

John Drager will not play with the alumni but will be their manager and will direct the team from the bench with the help of Bob Kitchen. Coach Drager will have a class bunch of stars to hurl at "Holly" and his outfit, and if any system can be worked out or if any of the alumni players get "on," it will be a tough task for the high school lads.

Adams Shows Speed

The Alumni won last year 27 to 24 in a thrilling game which featured one star for the graduates, Dwight Adams, who is playing forward for Willamette and has been twice selected all conference forward, proved to be the "show stealer" and made 24 points by himself which was as much as the whole high school team scored. Adams will again play with the "has-beens" and is going stronger than ever with the "Beats" this season.

Lyons with his left handed hook passes and Ashby with his close checking will also enhance the alumni's chances for victory. Olinger with his speed and shooting ability will be a hard man to check.
