FITTS FAMILY HOSTS

WACONDA, Dec. 25.—Mr. and Mrs. Joe Fitts entertained at a family Christmas tree and dinner at their home on Christmas. A son, Carl Fitts, was honored on that day, the occasion being his birthday. Eight years ago he was presented to his parents, the finest gift of all.

FOREST LOVE

I shouldn't have expected you to. I should have got my freedom before I spoke. But damn it—I loved you so—I had to tell you—"

He looked so big and handsome and honest, leaning over the table to her, loving her with his eyes—forgiving her—

She hung her head. "I'm sorry," she whispered.

His comforting warm hand closed on hers. "So you thought you were in love with this fellow, and when it came to a show down he didn't make the grade. Is that it?"

"Doesn't look like it," she said through tears.

He began to speak, gently, earnestly, "Nancy, we all make mistakes. I made mine. You almost made yours."

"Oh, I did—I did—"

"Pull yourself together, baby. Powder your nose, there's the girl. Pull your hat a little more over your eyes—that's it. Listen, it doesn't matter. You fell for this fellow and you thought you were going to lead the grand outdoor life and renounce everything—especially your poor old rich boy—and he filled you to the neck about the great open spaces and what not, and the first time he made a date with you in the big city he missed—is that right?"

She gulped. "Partly—but I ought to tell you—"

"Say! I don't want to hear anything. Don't tell me any more about it."

"But Jack, I must. You don't understand. It was so beautiful in the meadows above the valley. Like the beginning o the world. Everything so fresh and new. Flowers— you never saw such flowers. And I used to go riding with him over those terrible trails—thousands of feet high, over the slippery shale, with canons and rivers below, and one misstep from your horse—"

"God, he had his nerve to take you. Suppose you'd fallen—"

"But Jack, nobody falls! The horses, you know. They're surefooted. But it's a thrill—I forget what I started to say—"

"The strong, silent ranger, no doubt." He grinned sympathetically.

Unaccountably she smiled, too. "I suppose so—oh, yes—I was going to say—"

"Well, don't say it, sweetheart. The less we talk about the unpleasant things of life, the better." A shadow crossed his face; he shivered slightly, as if he were cold—He had thought of Anita, his wife.

He said: "Nancy, I'm married as you reminded me. But I'll soon be free. And then nothing will keep us apart. I know you think it isn't very romanic, marrying somebody like me instead of a strong, silent woodsman—"

"Jack, please—"

"All right, I won't rub it in. But dear, you see who really loves you, don't you? And, baby, if you had married him it would not have worked. You weren't made for the sort of thing. You were made for luxury—pearls, furs, the bright lights—you, you were; don't shake your head at me! And, baby, that isn't all. You wouldn't make a wife for a fellow like that; he wouldn't even want you long; you wouldn't be the right kind of woman. It sounds brutal to say it but when he saw that you couldn't do the washing, and didn't want to be left to dry-mould in his shanty, he'd see his mistake, too."

She hung her head. "I guess you're right, Jack."

"Youre darn right I'm right!" She took a few puffs and laid it down. "It must be late, Jack, and I must go—I'll be late home—" She must get away. Have time to think. To think it all over. And decide—decide something—"

"Whatever you say, dear." He signaled for the check. Waiters scampered. "Mr. Beamer, Henri, —Mr. Beamer wishes to leave!"

"Jack, I can't ever thank you —" He was sending her home in a taxi.

"Don't be silly. Go home and get a good rest. I'll call you in the morning. 'Bye!"

But just as the taxi man was closing the door, Jack Beamer changed his mind.

He leaped in beside her.

The Beamer's red brick house on Jackson Street was deserted most of the year. Jack preferred to stay at a club and Anita hated the place she'd furnished so happily twelve years ago. A bride then, just married to a handsome young Englishman, ready to live happily ever after.

But it had certain fascination for her. She kept two servants in it always, and there had been times when she dreamed of making it a real home again. Not any more. She was forty-seven and looked it. Jack was thirty-four.

She had come back to it now because she was lonely. Her trip to visit her sister-in-law in Reno had been a dismal failure. Reno was too gay. She could not dance and drink cocktails every night like the others. She was not strong enough.

LINDY TURNS FIRE FIGHTER

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh using a fire extinguisher to quell the flames that came from his airplane at Baltimore. Mrs. Lindbergh was seated at the controls with field mechanics trying to start the motor when gasoline around the engine caught fire and started to spread to the wings of the monoplane. All the while Mrs. Lindbergh remained inside the pilot's cockpit.

Well-Filled House Greets Christmas Program Held By Auburn School Kiddies

AUBURN, Dec. 25.—The Auburn school presented its Christmas program Monday evening to a well filled house. The children showed exceptional training, both from the children participating and on the part of the teachers who did the training.

The program was as follows: Recitation of welcome, Ina Witte; candle drill by the primary room; dialogue, "Darning the Christmas Stockings", Jimmie Sutter and Clarence Frey; playlet, "Mrs. Santa Somes Into Her Own", with Eloise Hawkins as Mrs. Santa and Donald Smith as Santa Claus, with numerous fairies and brownies; dialogue, "The Trick That Failed", with Wallace Earls and Norman Krehbiel; a nativity pageant was presented by the upper room; a good night, Lee Mertz. Andrew Etzel of the eighth grade, acted as announcer.

Power Plant Picture Given
Charles Cady presented the school with a picture of the electric power plant at Estacada. Mr. Cady was assistant-engineer on the project. Mrs. Harriet Ingram spoke a few words of appreciation in behalf of the school.

Amid screams of delight and shouts of hapy laughter Santa Claus appeared with a well filled pack for the kiddies.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Baumgartner are enjoying a visit from their eldest daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Klempel and small daughter, Betty Jean, who have come to spend Christmas. Mr. and Mrs. Klempel are from Aberdeen, Idaho.

Mumps Prevent Kiddies Going To Holiday Tree

INDEPENDENCE, Dec. 25.—A number of the training school children are confined to their homes with the mumps, having to miss the Christmas tree and exercises.

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Walker and Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Walker will go to Eugene to spend Christmas at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Walker.

Icy Pavements Cause Troubles

MONITOR, Dec. 25. — Several minor accidents were reported on Monday morning, caused by the icy pavement. Miss Mabel Strow, who teaches the Hazel Dell school, skidded and turned completely around and finally went into the ditch, breaking off one rear wheel, when making the turn by the S. D. A. church.

White House Wood Used in Hoover Gift

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25. — (AP)—Employes at the White House yesterday received from President and Mrs. Hoover ash trays and jewel cases fashioned from wood taken from the White House two years ago when it was remodeled.

With it came the following free verses:

"A pine tree on the hills of Maryland,—through
"Many summers' heats and winters' snows,
"Felled, carted, watered, sawn, and a metamorphosis
"Within a week.
"And then a century buried deep within the White House walls,—unseen, unsung, but one of myriads of myriads holding firm together
"The storied structure.
"Until a new age came and replaced steel for wood.

"Then once again I'll go,—free smoke before free wind,—to touch again the hills of Maryland."
