PILOT IS ABLE TO RESCUE HIMSELF

I set the plane down at the edge of a lake. My landing was successful except that one wing struck a tree and was demolished. The landing gear also was damaged.

"My transmitter was jarred in landing but my receiver was all right and for the rest of the night I sat comfortably in my plane listening to all the excitement about me."

Cunningham's chief concern seemed to be to return to Seattle and resume his duties on the overnight mail-passenger service. He said the plane probably would be taken to the nearest flying field, he repaired and flown to Seattle.

Cunningham a week ago Thursday flew mail and passengers from Medford to Seattle in 12 hours, 43 minutes, a record for that division.

Resulting therefrom is the Heisenberg so-called "principle of uncertainty." Einstein was asked what he thought about Heisenberg's principle. And he smashed another law of physics, the causality principle.

"This principle of Heisenberg's is of importance since it makes clear that the quantities in physics which we have hitherto used cannot in their totality be observed," he said. "This has the result that the causality principle in the form of which we have previously used it has no content which can be directly proved by observations."

Brother, Sister Die Same Day; 3d of Family Weakening

LONG BEACH, Cal., Jan. 2.—(AP)—An elderly brother and sister, inseparable companions through life, are dead today, and their sister, likewise bound close in the family circle, as the result lies at death's door. The three, who never have married, came here from Macomb, Ill., four weeks ago to spend Christmas together.

George W. Eyerly, the 54-year-old brother, died the last day of the old year. He had been ill two days. The shock caused the death the same day of his older sister, Mary, 62, who never has married. The third member of the brother-and-sister under a heart attack New Year's day. She is in a critical condition at St. Mary's hospital where she is expected to die.

to California expecting help from experimental scientists at the institute and Mount Wilson to solve the major problem on his mind. Unifying of Forces Held Possible by Einstein.

This is whether gravitation, light, electricity and electromagnetism are not different forms of the same thing. "I am working on a unified mathematical theory of these phenomena—a unified field theory," he said.

Judging from the effects of the press interview in New York in December, friends expected the professor might suffer physically from this trip. However, the shock from the face conferences with the serenity of a child, and seems to thrive upon them.

Not only does he enjoy them, but he makes his interviewers happy. The chairman of executive board of the institute sought to "save" him from the interview today by collecting the written questions and saying the professor could not be subjected to the strain that he was an invalid.

Einstein Very Obliging As He Answers Questions

But Einstein, who reveals a decided comprehension of English, reached and took the papers from Dr. Arthur H. Fleming's hand and started to read the questions. And he smiled. Then corrugated his brows a moment, then deliberately answered each question.

Dr. Richard Chace Tolman, one of the greatest mathematicians in America, at Cal-Tech, acted as interpreter.

After the last written question was answered, Einstein paused, he smiled, and with a sort of mischievous, child-like delight looking around the little classroom, stood and said simply: "I hope I've passed the examination."

And as he left it was with that satisfied smile of relief and contentment after a good meal—mentally at least.

WEIGHT EARTH IS LESS THAN THOUGHT

Einstein in calculations of the distance across space. It shows that the earth has slightly less density than formerly estimated—that is the earth's solid substance is not quite so hard.

If all humans and their livestock were moved to the moon, Dr. Heyl remarked, the drop in the earth's total weight would be about one millionth of a millionth part of the total tonnage.

The babies who performed their sleeping tricks for science lived in Chicago—the sons and daughters of college professors. They were studied by Doctors H. M. Johnson, Marion M. Jacobson and Charlye F. Jacobson of the Mellon Institute of the University of Pittsburgh.

Science Proves Value of Nap in Afternoon

"It has already been shown," this report stated, "that the afternoon nap does not tend to retard or shorten the sleep of the night, or to render it more restless. These experiments, coupled with those which were made by a different method by Doctors Boynton and Goodenough at the University of Minnesota, show that the child ordinarily rests more quietly during the afternoon nap than in any time of corresponding length during the night."

"So that if a child is judged to be in need of more rest than it is getting, the ideal way of gaining it is by means of the afternoon nap. Experimental evidence exists which indicates that it is much harder to gain more rest by lengthening the child's stay in bed at night."

60 to 90 Changing Modes in Sleeping Posture

This stay in bed at night is quite a circus. From 60 to 90 times a night the youngster will change his sleeping posture. This is twice as often as an adult shifts.

"Although," said the report, "many of the favorite resting poses of adults are quite contorted—giving sprawled limbs and a spinal column that is bowed into a doubly compound curve and also greatly twisted—many of the sleeping poses of children are still more so."

But this does the children no harm.

"The doctrine that a young child may acquire a deformity," the Mellon scientists find, "or develop a beautiful figure by lying for long times in some bodily position that he habitually prefers has been rendered very doubtful by the testimony of the motion picture camera."

Mr. Justus and his sister just wiggle too much for harm.

national police, who also served as Panama's only standing army. There were a few outbursts of firing and the station fell.

Simultaneously other attackers warned upon the palace, where after a brief resistance, the defenders gave way. President Ariosemena was confined to his quarters with several other government officials including Archibaldo Boyd, governor of the Providence of Panama, and Ricardo Arango, head of the police.

Appointment of Arias As Premier Made Quickly
After a consultation with the revolutionary leaders President Ariosemena appointed Dr. Harmodio Arias premier, then resigned as president.

With police headquarters and the palace in their hands, civilians associated with the revolutionists patrolled the city under the direction of General Manuel Quintero. Shops remained closed, there was no bus service and automobiles dashed through the city, carrying armed men who were posted as guards on police duty.

When Governor Inocencio G. H. de la Provincia de Colon learned of the revolution he attempted to send 500 national police to support the government at the capital. The Panama railroad refused to carry the detachment.

In a dramatic manifesto issued this afternoon "accion comunal" proclaimed Senor Arias president of the republic.

Senor Arias, head of the revolt, is a native Panamanian, the son of humble parents of a northern province who went abroad in his boyhood. By his own efforts he obtained an education in England. He is a lawyer and a comparatively young man.

Today, surrounded by reporters, printers and a lawyer or two at a newspaper plant here, O'Brien scouted the idea he was to inherit a large sum.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—(AP)—Jazz notes came to the rescue of bank notes today and successfully routed an incipient run on the Albany Park National Bank and Trust Co.

WOMEN'S PRAYERS ASK STRIKE CEASE

CARDIFF, Wales, Jan. 2.—(AP)—In the little chapels scattered through the grimy valleys of South Wales men and women spend this day praying some way may be found to end the dispute between masters and men which sent 140,000 coal miners into idleness yesterday.

They pinned hopes on a meeting tomorrow of the coal negotiation board from which might come a compromise ending the strike; a few days more of which would bring misery and want to tens of thousands.

The women, who have been through this before, knew their would be the heaviest burden.

Already business was beginning to feel the effects of the lockout. The coal exchange was at a standstill. In the Bristol Channel ships were being turned back and sent to continental ports for coal. One ship broker said that days of loss of business already had been lost.

The one bright feature of the situation was that there had been no disorder among the men. Squads of special police sent into the mine fields had nothing to do but stand guard. The safety crews remained on duty in the mines.
