COURT REFORM FAVORED AGAIN

Yamhill and Polk to Revive Plan Once Favored by Marion Attorneys

The district court plan to replace justices of the peace will be presented to the legislature again this session, sponsored by the Polk and Yamhill bar associations. Multnomah county now has a district court, inferior to the circuit court. Last session a bill was introduced for a district court for Marion county but was killed on opposition of the towns outside of Salem who objected to abolishment of local justice courts.

The Polk-Yamhill plan would extend to all counties of over 13,000 population and under 100,000. The principal office would be in the county seat with the judge journeying to other towns of over 800 population on regular days to hold sessions.

The McMinnville Telephone-Register gives the following summary of the provisions of the bill which the lawyers will introduce:

Handle Small Damage Cases

"The court will have exclusive original jurisdiction over all damage actions or suits for recovery of money of $300 or under, and jurisdiction, but not exclusive, over cases of $500 or under. The judge, an attorney who has been admitted to the Oregon bar and has practiced for several years, is to be elected at the general elections. His salary is to be $2400 per year.

"Sheriffs in the various counties abolishing the justice judiciaries, are to serve in the place of constables. They will appoint deputies in strategic points about the district who will care for enforcement details.

"Unless a petition is placed before the court by either the plaintiff or the defendant, the law actions will be held before a judge with no jury. Criminal actions will be tried before a six-man jury unless the defendant shall waive the jury, a right given under the new system.

Claim Counties Will Save Money

"Not only will the plan save the counties money but it will prevent clogging of the docket of circuit courts by removal of all smaller cases. At present, members of the local bar association state, operation of circuit court costs the county well over $100 a day, and an action for money of any size may be brought before the tribunal. More than half the cases now coming into the circuit court are for less than $300, they say.

"It would save more than $3,000 to each county annually, or approximately its own cost, and at the same time would keep for the county the fees now taken by the justices of the peace.

"The plan received no little favorable discussion by the Oregon judicial council at its meeting in Portland, when Circuit Judge Arlie G. Walker outlined the proposal before its members. Besides the backing being given the measure by the Yamhill and Polk county bar associations, Hillsboro and Portland lawyers are actively in its support, while Tillamook and southern Oregon attorneys have agreed that the proposal would be adoptable in their counties."

Valuation Fixed On All Tomatoes Going to Canada

WASHINGTON—A fixed valuation of five cents a pound on all tomatoes imported into Canada and not entitled to entry under the British preferential tariff has been placed by the dominion government, the department of commerce has been told. The Canadian appraisers' bulletin, dated December 23, announcing this order, reads as follows:

"Until otherwise instructed all tomatoes not entitled to entry under the British preferential tariff may be appraised for duty purposes at five cents pound, the weight of the packages to be included. The above value is to apply to shipments exported direct to Canada from the point of production. When exported from a diversion or intermediate distributing point, all charges to such point should be added. Provided, however, that in no case shall the goods be entered at less than their invoice value."

Drunkenness Charged—Jack Sorahan of Salem was arrested at 11:55 p. m. Saturday on drunk charges.

Appraisal Reported — Gust Heyden, G. W. Rutsch and G. Schunke have appraised estate of Lina Herrman at $4,532.47.

Sale Ordered — Order for sale of personal property has been entered in estate of Michael Laux.

Build Boys Rather Than Institution is Policy at Training School, Shown

The aim of the Oregon State Training School for Boys is to build better boys and not to build an institution. "We seek to salvage boys and to keep them out of trouble; we do not provide a systematic course of trade instruction for the youths," declared W. H. Bailie, training school superintendent, in an enlightening talk before the chamber of commerce Monday.

To a systematic plan of supervised parole, Bailie credited the comparatively small number of boys in the Oregon training school. The average population of the institution in the last biennium has been 134, while the state of Washington has an average enrollment in its boys' institutions of 320, and Colorado 360, said Bailie.

Bailie explained how the state is divided into three parole districts where the parents, neighbors and the boys themselves are contacted after a youth is released from the institution. Through the efforts of these officers, whose biennial cost to the state is only $21,000, Bailie thinks the appropriation needed for the school has been cut in half.

Oregon will be asked to appropriate only $142,000 for the next two years, Bailie said, in contrast to $90,000 more asked by Washington and a two-year appropriation of $500,000 asked by Colorado.

"Keep 'em busy" is Bailie's slogan for school conduct. From the time the boy arises at 6 a. m. until bed time at 8:30 p.m., Bailie said, the inmate's activity schedule is filled with work, and supervised play. While the school is primarily agricultural, some industries such as a laundry, a print shop and a clothing shop are conducted by the youths. Bailie said every boy was required to take a part in basketball, there being 26 teams organized among the members of the school.

As soon as a boy enters the school, the superintendent's office makes a careful check of his record and follows this by sending a parole officer to the boy's community where his home and school environments both are checked. From this information and a seven-day period of observation, the assignment of the newcomer is made to a cottage where other boys of similar age and outlook on life are quartered.

Bailie said that his parole officers throughout the state had won the confidence of the paroled lads who oftentimes came to them for advice and assistance. The average successful paroles he said amounted to 70 per cent. When a lad fails to keep a parole as required by the institution, he is brought back to the training school and his merit requirements doubled.

While runaway boys have decreased one-half in number in the last two years, some escaping from the school is inevitable, the speaker said. No armed guards are maintained nor are rooms barred and there are no cells. Almost any boy, craving freedom and despising restraint, at times will make a dash for liberty Bailie averred.

ANNUAL JAPANESE PROGRAM TONIGHT

The annual Japanese program of the Jason Lee Brotherhood will occur at the meeting of the church tonight, according to the Brotherhood president, F. P. Phipps. The event will begin at 6:30 o'clock, and will be attended by the Japanese of the Lake Labish settlement and others who live in the city, as well as the men of the church congregation.

More than 60 of the Japanese have made reservations, and it is expected fully than many men of the church will attend. The dinner will be served by the women of the church under leadership of Mrs. A. L. Dark.

The program will be largely brought by the Japanese, and will consist of their native songs, recitations, and playing of native instruments. Singing of the church hymns, each of the racial groups in their respective tongues, will be a feature of the program, and will be led by Dr. H. C. Epley. Among the Japanese numbers will be a piano solo by Hoshi Watanabe; Shigin by Mr. Kodo, which is the recitation of a Japanese poem; and a duet on two native instruments, Shamisen and Sha ki ha chi, by Mrs. Okuda and Mr. Tagaki. A group of Japanese boys will sing.

Arrangements for the program have been made by the brotherhoow through the Japanese pastor, Rev. S. Niwa, and the Council of Salem Church Women for superintendent of the Japanese work.

GRANGE LECTURER GETS PHONOGRAPH

WALLACE ROAD, Jan. 12—A State Grange Lecturer Mrs. Marie Flint McCall of Wallace Road was highly gratified when she received a portable Victrola from the executive committee of the state grange by mail Friday. The machine is to be used on her trips to various group meetings in the state. A number of records for grange work such as music of appreciation and march numbers accompanied the Victrola.

Mrs. McCall will supplement these records from time to time as needed.

Mrs. McCall was lecturer of Brush College before being elected to her present position. She is an enthusiastic grange worker, and thoroughly enjoys her work. Her efficiency has called forth much favorable comment from granges all over Oregon.

Superintendent Finds Fine Book Case at Turner

Turner school teachers and pupils are proud of a fine library case which has recently been constructed in the high school study hall, reports County School Superintendent Fulkerson, who visited that school this week.

The library case extends the entire length of the far end of the hall, and at the top and bottom are storage spaces with doors. The library case proper has glass door. A large study table has been placed in the center of this end of the building, and under a window.

The entire structure has made a great improvement in the study hall, and is but one of the things the Turner school is doing and planning to make for greater efficiency.
