

'ARMY' TO GET NEW BUILDING

Handsome Structure to be Erected for Religious Organization Here

The new Salvation Army headquarters building which it is expected will be erected and ready for occupancy by May of this spring will be a splendid addition to the worthwhile buildings in Salem. It will fill a long felt need in the community and only those who have worked in the Army, and with it, can realize just how much such a building is needed.

The building as planned will include a very large, well equipped basement and two stories, and will be erected at a cost of about $10,000. It is desirable to build at this time when the price of lumber is less than it has been for some time and when any extra work in the community will aid in the employment problem.

The American Legion has been sponsoring the furthering of plans that has made the final steps possible for the building of this new structure. J. T. Delaney is chairman of the Legion committee in charge of the building program.

Ensign Williams of the army produced with great joy and pride the set of blueprints made up by Lyle Bartholomew, and explained in detail the carefully planned interior.

The front of the building as it is supposed to be built is shown in the line drawing done by Mr. Bartholomew. Wrought-iron brackets over either window will act as standard holders for flags on holiday occasions; over the doorway will shine a Neon sign announcing "Salvation Army" headquarters. Over each window in the circle a plaque will be fitted, each of which will be a Biblical scene.

The building will be constructed where the old building now stands, 241 State street. The Army already owns the lot and according to Ensign Williams, without wasting a bit of space the building is 82 1/2 feet, will neatly and economically cover the lot. Both a front and back entrance will be made for the basement and first story, one on the alley at the back and one from State street.

The basement will be given over to relief and social service work, and will include a large storage room for relief supplies, a fumigation room where all donations needing fumigation may be treated. A pipe will lead from this room to the top of the building where all fumes will be released and none will enter the building to interfere with comfort.

The soup kitchen will be located in the basement next to the furnace and fuel storage room and there will also be a repair room for salvaging clothes, and a lavatory with shower where men in need of hygienic service may be served.

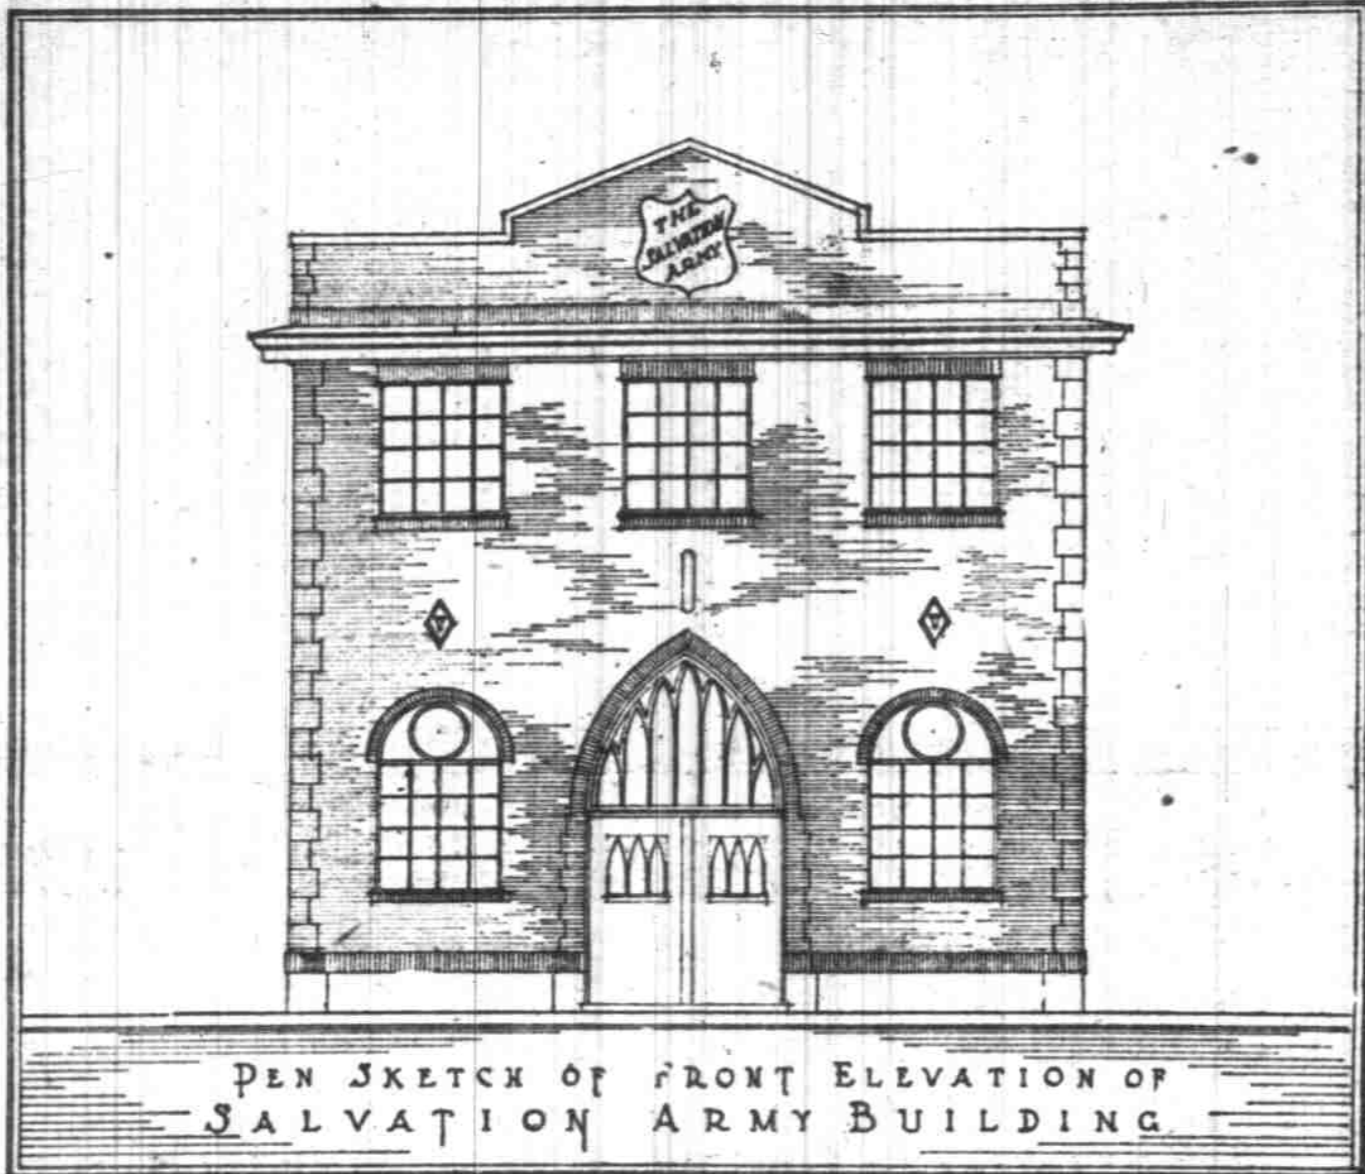

The ceiling of the basement will be 8 1/2 feet high in order to allow for any chance which might be required for the future use of the building.

The main floor will be entered from the front by a large hall to the right of which will be the main office, to the left a large rest room and comfort station for women, and a stairway leading to the basement and one to the second floor.

Double doors will also lead from the hall into the auditorium room, a large, long, well lighted room with seating capacity for 200 and which terminates in a well placed stage in the center back of which is a French door. This door leads into a small hallway to the right of which is a storage room for band instruments, and to the left a small additional relief store room.

The second floor has a large front room with excellent lighting arrangement in which home sewing service women will meet. A large closet leads off this so that sewing machines and materials may be stored just off the sewing room. Additional electric fixtures for irons and such like equipment is allowed for in this room.

On this floor is also a large auditorium which will be given over to young peoples' work, and where social activities may be carried on. Back of the auditorium has been arranged a kitchen, lavatory and shower room, and two sleeping rooms for emergency needs.

All in all the building will be one that will neatly care for the needs of the Army and the many people of the community whom it serves. And as planned it will add another attractive structure to the many already erected in Salem.
