RAILROAD COMPANY LOSES ON APPEAL

Ben Krause secured a reversal of the judgment in the supreme court Tuesday, in his suit for damages against the Southern Pacific company, and Oregon City, in a decision handed down by the state supreme court yesterday. The case is remanded for a new trial. On November 10, 1924, Ben Krause was riding in a truck with his father transporting some hogs from Portland to their farm near Canby. Krause was standing on the bed of the truck behind a pen of hogs which he was watching in order to keep them from fighting.

As the truck passed under the north side of the Southern Pacific company trestle adjacent to the business district of Oregon City, the plaintiff's head came violently in contact with one of the steel girders of the trestle and he was thrown to the ground with a fractured skull. The trestle extends across the entire width of the street and has a clearance above the pavement of about ten feet. The plaintiff claims there is insufficient clearance over this street and that it is dangerous for public travel.

In the opinion Justice Belt says: "A traveler upon a street is not bound to see to it that he does not discover any defect or obstruction, although it may be an open one, especially when his attention is directed by other sufficient cause. Whether the combative disposition of these hogs was sufficient cause to divert the attention of an ordinarily prudent person was a question upon which reasonable men might differ. Viewing the record in its entirety and in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs, we think the question of contributory negligence is one which should have been submitted to the jury. Case is reversed and remanded for a new trial."

Other opinions announced by the supreme court are as follows: M. C. Hooton vs. Jarman Chevrolet Co., appeal from Coos county. Action for damages for personal injuries with judgment of $5,050 in favor of plaintiff. Justice Brand, affirmed. Opinion by Justice Brown.

UNIQUE NOTEBOOK IS PUPILS' WORK

Pupils of the fourth grade at Liberty have made an interesting notebook, which they have sent to County Superintendent Mary L. Fulkerson to look over. The book is called "Mr. Nobody," and has as its theme the poem by that title.

Prefacing the booklet with this poem, each student has written in prose a Mr. Nobody or Miss Nobody of himself or herself, showing how he or she looks in the mirror. Then below this description is an account of something which has been done at home which is blame on Mr. or Miss Nobody.

The notebook also contains some pictures clipped from advertisements, and about each picture the pupil has a little story.

Mrs. Jessie Rains is teacher of this grade.

country; buckskin the cloth, moccasins for the feet, fur cap for the head; a blanket with a hole in the middle to pass the head through and rest upon the shoulders for an overcoat; mounted on a horse with a rawhide covered saddle, wooden stirrups, Spanish spurs, leggings, with a rawhide lariat—thus you have a partial pen picture of an Oregon pioneer. Free in action, content in mind, perfect physical health, at home at anybody's cabin, God's best specimen—man; the ruler of the world, dependent only upon his Creator. A man to prepare the way for higher civilization, a firm believer in the government of the United States; ready to maintain his rights wherever his lot might be cast.

The murder of Dr. Whitman and many fell upon the country without warning, but the call of the governor for volunteers was responded to with amazing rapidity; amazing to the English subjects, especially those of the Hudson's Bay company. They counseled making peace, but the descendants of the pioneers, the western states determined to give them a lesson of American valor and efficiency in arms in the hands of pioneers. They went, they fought, they conquered, and the Indians sued for peace, all within a few months. The new Ford is an economical car to own and drive

Low first cost, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation mean a distinct saving to every purchaser

THE NEW FORD is a splendid car to own and drive because of its attractive lines and colors, safety, comfort, speed, reliability and long life.

There are, in addition, three other features of importance to every far-seeing automobile owner... low first cost, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation.

During the life of the car, the day-by-day economy of owning a Ford will amount to considerably more than the saving on the first cost. You save when you buy the Ford and you save every mile you drive.

The reasons for this economy are simplicity of design, high quality of materials and care in manufacturing and assembling. Many vital parts are made to limits of one one-thousandth of an inch. Some to three ten-thousandths of an inch. Throughout, the new Ford is an outstanding example of fine craftsmanship in automobile engineering.

The more you see of the new Ford—the more you talk to Ford owners and experienced mechanics—the more certain you become of this fact... It brings you everything you want or need in a motor car at an unusually low price.
