

COAST HIGHWAY NAME ADOPTED

'Roosevelt' is Deleted in Senate Vote; Hall is Chief Opponent

The senate yesterday approved House Bill 362 which changes the name of the Roosevelt Military Coast highway to the Oregon coast highway.

The senate committee on roads and highways reported the house bill out with an amendment changing the name to the Roosevelt Oregon Coast highway but the senate defeated this change. On the final vote 21 ayes against nine nays were cast for the name change.

The fight to change the name of the highway was led by Senator Franciscovich of Clatsop county. He declared that the name of Oregon Coast highway had been indorsed by the state highway commission, virtually all of the counties through which it passes and a large majority of people living at the mouth of the Columbia river. Franciscovich said in changing the name of the highway, the state of Oregon would receive the advertising to which it is entitled. "The present name of the highway means nothing to the people in the east," said Franciscovich, "as there are a dozen other highways bearing the name Roosevelt."

Hall Says Name Given by People
Senator Hall opposed changing the name of the highway for the reason that it was approved by the voters at an election held in this state in 1914. "The people voted for the name 'Roosevelt Military Coast highway,'" said Hall, "and the name 'Roosevelt' should not be eliminated by this senate."

Hall also charged that in eliminating the name 'Roosevelt' the state of Oregon would lose much favorable advertising gained through the last 16 years.

Senator Moser favored changing the name to the Oregon Coast highway, on the ground that such action would give additional advertising to the state, and distinguish the road from other Roosevelt highways in different parts of the United States.

Senator Upton charged that in case the state of Oregon changed the designation of the highway, the states of Washington, California and California would capitalize the name 'Roosevelt' in advertising their coast roads. "This is the only road that officially has been designated as the 'Roosevelt highway,'" continued Upton.

Senator Staples contended that it would be as foolish to change the name of the highway as it would for him to change the name of his son.

Senators who voted against the proposed change of the name were Booth, Brown, Dunne, Fisher, Jones, Staples, Upton and Wheeler.

Woodward Here To Make Study Of Flax Plant

Senator Woodward announced yesterday that he would probably stay over Sunday in Salem to attend to some pressing legislative duties, including a more extensive investigation of flax industry figures being prepared by Secretary of State Hoss. The latter was scheduled to turn over the complete figures on the industry in recent years to the Multnomah senator, on Friday.

Woodward was called into conference with Governor Meier on the matter Friday. He has been consistent in his explanations to the ways and means committee that his probing of the industry was for the good of the business and not for the purpose of embarrassing state officials.

Session Expense Bill is Adopted In Lower House

A second appropriation measure of $120,000 with which to carry on the expense of the 34th session of the legislature, was introduced Friday in the house. It bears the title of House Bill 378, and revenues from it will go for secretarial hire, for per diem payment of members as well as for their mileage expenses.

This is the second measure introduced for the payment of the expenses of the session, the first one being rushed through the senate and the house in the opening days of the session. It provided $25,000 which was used to meet drawing charges of the various employees.

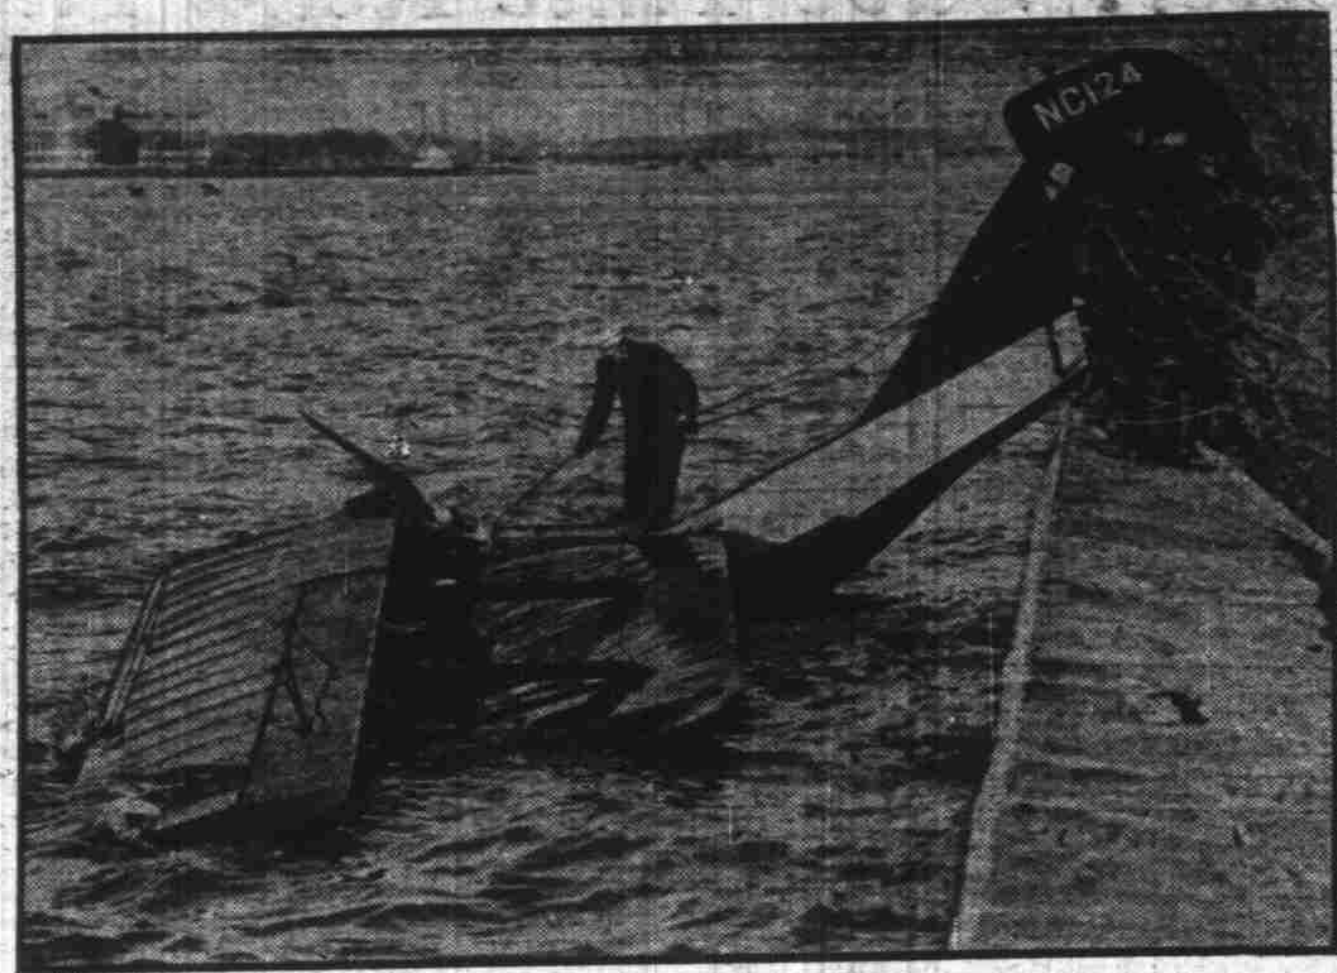

McKee, National Legion Official Is Visitor Here

Mark T. McKee of Detroit, Mich., member of the board of directors of the American Legion foundation, was a visitor at the capitol Friday. He was extended the courtesies of the senate and accorded other legislative honors. Mr. McKee announced that he was in sympathy with the move to have the 1932 national convention of the Legion held in Portland. The 1931 convention will be held in Detroit.

Mr. McKee is on his way to California, where he will attend the wedding of his daughter.

Legislative Sidelights Oregon's 36th Legislative Session Brings Interesting Personages to Salem

THE nearest approach to a pork barrel; seen at the restaurant conducted in the basement. Here at noon the dignitaries of both houses meet with the lobbyists and plan affairs of state over soup, sandwich and pie. One goes down a conical stairway to reach the subterranean eating place which is managed by Salem women.

Robert Notson, political writer of The Oregonian, and Senator Willard Marks have been conferring frequently the last few days. It seems the higher-ups have requested the two to stage a radio interview on current legislative topics. The problem has been to cut down the material available so it will fit a seven and one-half minute time allotment.

Marks started as a newspaper man in his early days and went up to the position of lawyer; Notson, a debater of some fame in college days, went down from an opportunity to be a lawyer, like his father, District Attorney Notson of Heppner, and became a newspaper worker. When Marks and Notson talk to each other, therefore, they both know something of the other's job, its pleasures and disagreeable features.

Reporters like the appearance of the senator from Clatsop county but their remarks about his name are far from courteous. He spells it Francis-covich and a layman, who only needs to garble it to pronounce it will admit that it is even harder to spell. Reporters feel there "ought to be a law" simplifying the names of Astoria's senators. Norblad was an unusual name but Franciscovich . . .

The representative from Clatsop, also, has a distinctive name. He is Hellberg. Mott of Marion lives up to his name, "Moi" in French means word and even genial Jim will admit he uses words, and plenty of them, when free texts, old-age pensions, property tax relief or what have you, are at stake.

Miss Marjorie Flegel who attended Willamette university with the class of '23, was a visitor at the capitol Friday afternoon. She was connected for some time with the Y. W. C. A. in Portland and later served with the "Y. W." in Honolulu. "It's a perfect place to live," she commented when asked about her view of the islands. Recently Miss Flegel has been busy at her home while her mother came to Salem in the interests of certain child welfare legislation.

W. S. Link, member of the United States National bank at McMinnville, has been keeping a watchful eye on a number of bills in the session. Mr. Link has been active in the municipal supervision of water and power operation in the Yamhill county city for many years. To him goes much of the credit for the sound, practical development which has been made in that city.

Senator Joe Bailey of Multnomah county was a bit flabbergasted Friday when the firemen's and policemen's pension bill lost in the senate. Together with the other members of the Multnomah delegation the senator had worked hard and debated fervently in the interests of the bill. When the roll started, the pension advocates expected victory. When the tally was made they had lost by the small margin of 14 ayes; 16 nays. It took the pension proponents several minutes to recapture their poise.

Another trip will be necessary to complete the dental work for the little girls.

MONEY BILLS BEFORE HOUSE

Dull Friday Session Sees Appropriation Bills Approved by Votes

With the senate furnishing all the fireworks for the day, members of the house sat through a dull session Friday and saw nearly a score of measures given favorable consideration.

Chief among the bills passed were 12 appropriation measures providing for operating costs during the next biennium of various commissions, courts, state boards and the national guard, the total of the outlay being $1,750,000.

A group of bills originating in the senate and passed by that body, were given the favorable vote of the house. Among these measures were measures providing for the acquisition of forest lands, establishment of a six-cent mileage rate or state officials using their own cars in state business; enabling county courts to lease county owned lands; prohibiting the throwing of rubbish upon public thoroughfares; six measures clarifying certain sections of the Oregon code pertaining to elections and ballots.

Transfer of Water Rights Allowed

The house passed two of its own bills during the afternoon session. One authorized county court to transfer water rights while a second related to the conduct of elections in irrigation districts.

The house gave its approval to four resolutions and memorials already passed by the senate. These pertained to the rights of the accused in original prosecutions; reports of expense of state officials; a memorial to the postmaster general for the improvement of air mail service in Oregon and the method of punctation to be followed when used to refer to the title of a new law.

Damage Claims Of Yamhill Men Before Solons

Payment by the state of $6358 damages held due farmers in Yamhill county for destruction of their clover crops in 1928, by reason of an order from the state board of horticulture, is asked in an appropriation bill introduced in the lower house Friday. The amounts to be paid the 24 farmers concerned range from $10 to $1670.

The destruction of the clover crops was brought about by a nematode discovered in the clover and causing the crop to be quarantined and plowed under.

Hide Dealers Probe Sought

The senate Friday adopted a memorial introduced by Senator Bennett urging congress to conduct an investigation of hide dealers. Bennett alleged that the hide dealers had formed a monopoly in restraint of trade. Copies of the memorial will be sent to Oregon's delegation in congress.

Rest Day Bill Is Withdrawn

Twin Record Broken by Three Pairs in One Family

WALDO HILLS, [Feb. 20—Numerous interesting articles regarding twins in certain communities have appeared in the paper lately but none more interesting have been told than this one from Evergreen school district.

For years this school has always had at least one set of twins attending. They came from the families of Baller's, Kaufman's Dick's, and Knight's. Now there are two sets in school and both from the same family. They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Von Flue. Marie and Lucille are in the first grade, Alfred and Aldene in the fifth grade. But to make the story more interesting there are Laura and Lorene, aged four years, yet at home.

VISIT STATE CAPITAL

JEFFERSON, Feb. 20.—Mrs. Ethel Gulvin, teacher of the Looney Butte school and her pupils, spent Tuesday in Salem, visiting industrial plants and state offices. The group went through the legislative halls, the supreme court building, the state library, the circuit court, the Capitol Journal plant, the woolen mill and the paper mill. Henry Pocan assisted in taking the students on this trip.

Children in the party were Edith Eulrich, Ardis Eulrich, John Finlay, Edgar Husted, Arthur Bainter, James Anderson, Robert Pocan and Robert Gulvin.

FOUR YEAR NORMAL BILL TURNED DOWN

"Is there any man in this house who can explain this 'theory of play' which is a part of the educational curriculum?" queried Representative Arthur McPhillips Friday morning as he vigorously opposed the passage of Senate Bill 150 in the house, the measure providing for a four-year normal school standard elementary teachers' training course. "The measure is the bunk," declared the representative.

With McPhillips, two representatives, Temple and Macpherson, in their opposition to the measure as imposing too great a law on the taxpayers of Oregon. The bill lost 46 to 13, with three representatives excused. The measure would have gone into effect January 1, 1934, making the four-year provision necessary after January 1, 1936.

Representative Dorothy Lee of Multnomah county, led the fight for the report of the minority report, holding it was in the interest of children to have fewer but better trained teachers.

WALDO HILLS CLUB HOUSE KEPT BUSY

WALDO HILLS, Feb. 20.—The Waldo Hills club house is a busy place these days. Saturday evening the Willard Women's club have invited their husbands and friends to a card party at the club house.

Friday and Saturday evening, February 27 and 28, the dramatic club of the Waldo Hills Community club will present their play "Crooks for a Month." Miss Lois Riches is director and the cast is as follows: Mrs. Frank Bowers, Martha Goodknecht, Mrs. Helen Mulky, George Gilliam, Waldo and Victor Rue, Rob Riches and Eddie King.

OUT OF HOSPITAL
SCOTT'S HILLS, Feb. 20.—William McKillop who has been in the Salem General hospital the past week, is expected to be able to come home this week. Mr. McKillop while splitting kindling, a stick of wood flew up and hit him in the ball of the eye, and it was at first thought he would lose his eye, but by special care they have been able to save it. Dr. Brown is his attending physician.
