OUTLINE WORK OF CLUBS TOLD

Projects Suitable for Spring and Summer in Rural Areas Given

A list and explanation of spring and summer 4-H club projects for rural communities and cities has been compiled by W. W. Fox, county club leader, and copies of it have been mailed to the sections interested. These projects are carried during the spring and summer months. They are:

CANNING — This project is in three progressive divisions and is an excellent one for any boy or girl in Salem, Silverton, or any other community in Marion county. Vegetables, fruits, and other products are abundant during the season. Instead of permitting the surplus to become waste, it may be profitably canned for future consumption.

CAMP COOKERY — A project for groups of young folks who enjoy camping and outdoor life. It is planned to give each member a practical knowledge of planning and preparing meals under outdoor conditions.

HOME BEAUTIFICATION — This project teaches the member the principles of landscaping. The environment of the member is utilized and the work of creating a pleasant home surroundings is carefully directed and planned. This project fits admirably into a community beautification program or may be included in the plans of a community garden club.

ROSE AND FLOWER GARDEN — This project is confined to the planting of roses and flowers about the home. It is meeting with increased favor throughout the county and state at large. This is an excellent home project for any boy or girl interested in flowers and roses.

ROOM IMPROVEMENT — For the girl who desires to make her room a more enjoyable place to spend her leisure hours and has an ambition to create beautiful surroundings, this project offers a profitable means of satisfying these desires. The girl's own room is used. Interior decoration is the basis of this project.

HEALTH — To make the fourth H in our emblem stand for concrete achievement, this health project was created. The teaching of real health habits is vitalized and tangible. Clubs of this nature have been eminently successful in the county.

MARKETING — Existing economic conditions make a knowledge of the marketing of produce very much worth while. This project traces the course of produce from the producer to the consumer. Marion county is so extensively agricultural that this project can be derived from the study of this project.

POULTRY — Chickens, all breeds, turkeys and ducks are included in this project. Baby chicks or laying hens may be used. Marion county has many excellent poultry farms and the training offered to club members in this project should impel us to stress membership in it.

RABBITS — There are many rabbits being raised throughout the county under a great variety of conditions. The best possible guidance is given to members. It is urged that boys and girls owning rabbits at present or who desire to do so be interested in the project. There is an assured market for 20 rabbits a week in Salem alone.

VEGETABLE GARDEN — Careful instruction is given in the selection of seed, soil preparation, and care of the growing plants. Vacant lots or back yards may be put to excellent use in this project. A pleasant addition to the family menu, and larger is assured, which carries with it the satisfying knowledge that a saving has been made in the family budget. The member prepares, plants, and cares for 500 square feet of ground planted to at least five varieties of vegetables.

SHAKE-UP BRINGS NEW PAPER HEADS

Eloise White new Editor and Isabel Childs Business Manager

Fate has caused a shake-up in the leaders of the Willamette university Collegian staff. Through various causes, three of the heads of the weekly staff have resigned. New staff members are Eloise White, editor-in-chief; Isabel Childs, business manager; and Miriam Armitage, society editor.

Miss White takes the place of Mrs. Dorothy Pemberton Fieshae who left the university recently. Miss White has been associate editor of the publication throughout this year. She was editor of the freshman edition in her first year, in 1928.

Miss Childs seemed to the executive committee, which made the appointments, to be the most logical person in the university to take the place of Al King, who, until late this week, was business manager. Miss Childs has been associated with the Collegian as business manager during this year.

The change in manager is a development from financial considerations and also the necessity of the student's learning to think through their problems during school life in order that they may be able to solve the great economical problems facing the world.

The Washington Senators are reported to have paid $201,400 for players last year.

About a month ago, it seemed advisable and the student body voted to transfer three per cent of the student body funds from the classes to the Collegian account.

Because of certain charges on the part of students and citizens of Salem who are interested in advertising to the effect that the business staff was inefficient, Warren McMinnis, president of the student body and acting for the executive committee, appointed an investigation of seven students who were not connected with the Collegian, to investigate the efficiency of the staff.

This committee has been functioning and last Monday it turned in its report to the effect that the managerial staff was not efficient. Results of the investigation campaign were listed as well as recommendations of the committee. Late this week, Mr. King, the former business manager, resigned making a vacancy in the staff. At its meeting Friday noon, the executive committee appointed Miss Childs.

It is rumored that the advertising manager tendered his resignation to Mr. King some time ago. This is another post that must be filled.

Miss Armitage, who was associate society editor, was automatically promoted when Miss Payne-Cornutt resigned to pursue stenographic activities of the campus. Another promotion of one or two staff members will be in effect in this department, soon.
