A number of students from Marion county went on the cruises, and many studied at Eugene. Carlotta Crowley, Marie McKelvey, and Meri E. Dimick, all of Salem, went to Alaska; while Henrietta M. White, Salem, and Olivia Deguire, Silverton, took the Hawaiian trip.

Beattie Head of Alaska Party

The Alaskan session, which will be held August 2 to 25, is expected to be one of the most interesting phases of the summer school this year. The actual cruise, which 140 students will make on the S. S. Admiral Rogers, will start from the campus August 12, under the direction of W. G. Beattie, of the extension division of the university.

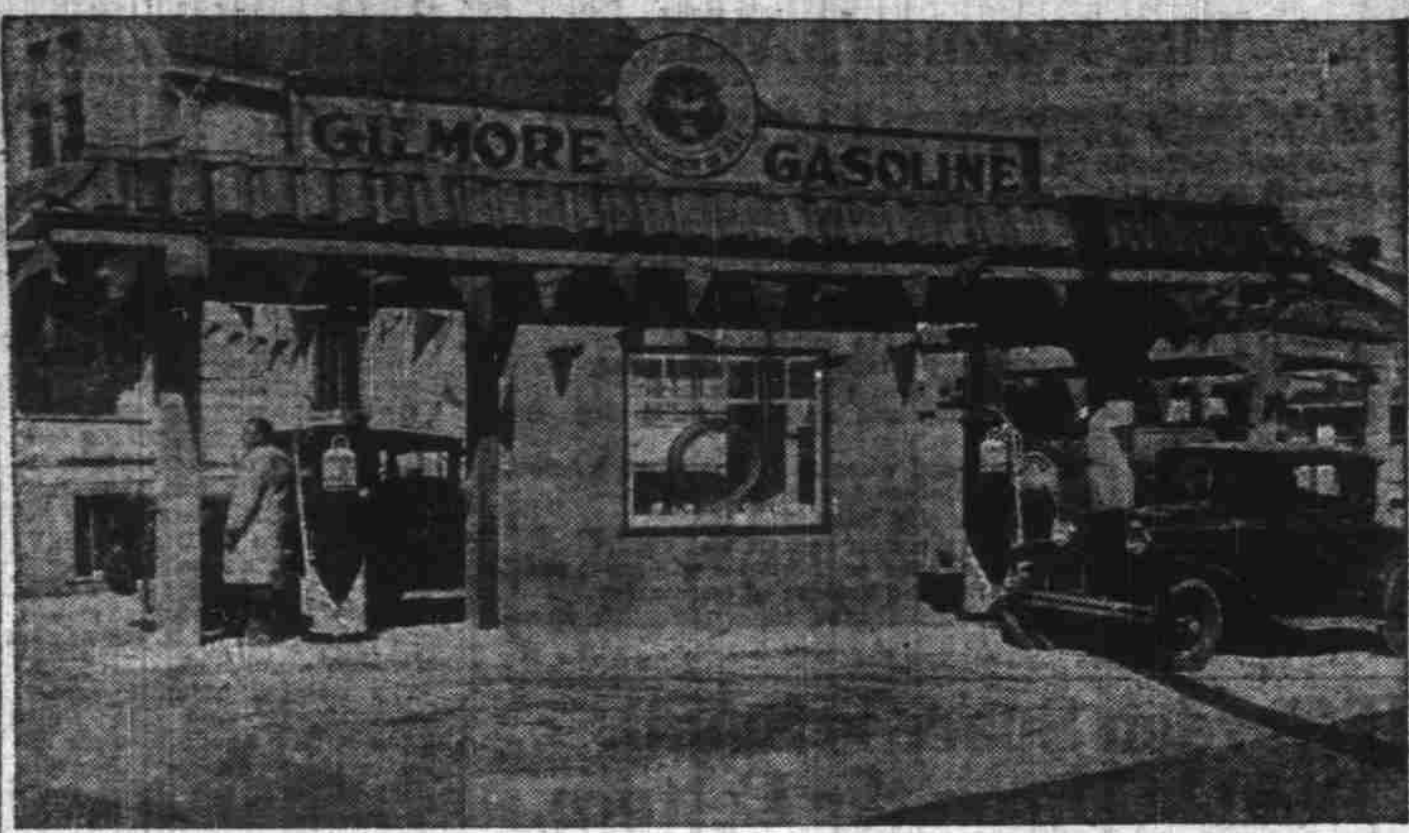

Several educators of national fame have already been engaged for the faculty of the Alaska cruise, it is announced. Dr. Alexander Goldenweiser, noted anthropologist and regarded as the foremost authority on totemism, will offer a course in anthropology; Dr. Joseph Schaefer, author of "History of the Pacific Northwest," will teach northwest history; Dr. E. L. Packard, professor of geology at the university, will teach geology, and Mable Holmes Parsons, short story writer and professor of English at the university extension center, will teach literature. Prof. A. R. Sweetser, botanist, will be a member of the cruise for the third time.

The cruise will include visits to Ketchikan, with its interesting fisheries; Juneau, the capital of the territory; Skagway, the scene of the historic gold rush of '99, where a side-trip by rail will show the students the Yukon trail; Sitka, capital of the old Russian days, where an entire day will be spent; St. Petersburg, Wrangell, and the famous Metlakatla school. Special arrangements will be made so that students may see the famous glaciers by daylight, and a side-trip to Mendenhall glacier will be included. The vessel will also stop at Prince Rupert, a port not usually visited.

ANCHOR ON MERCURY GREET'S OLD FRIENDS

Redington Has Remedy for "Finest Weather"

In characteristically humorous style, J. W. Redington, who lived in Salem in the '70's, writes this month to Mrs. Sallie Clark Dyer about the beauties of California and the enjoyment he is taking from life.

Redington is a printer by trade. In the days he lived here he worked in the Statesman office and on The Willamette Farmer.

In recent years he lived in a government home near Los Angeles and Redington now is residing in Oakland, Calif.

The letter, in part, follows: "You will be glad to learn that the general health of the community is very good, and that there is very little complaint about the ailments of advancing age, such as specter-salientia, locomotive-stataxial and hardening of the artichokes."

"Of course it gets a little bit cool at night, but when the thermometer drops away down to 50 above, our efficient weather bureau puts jackscrews under it and holds it up where it belongs. And we are arranging to pipe all the extra heat of the Mount Lassen volcano down here, and make it circulate under all the sidewalks. Also to provide airships for all people to cross the streets, so that there will be no obstructions to drunken drivers or speed devils.

5. will be directed by Dr. James H. Gilbert, dean of the college of liberal arts and sciences. The Empress of Japan, now the largest and fastest vessel in trans-pacific service, will take the students to Honolulu and back, and while there they will be quartered in Punahou college, where the group stayed last summer. Classes will be held aboard the vessel, and both graduate and undergraduate credit will be given for courses which may be taken at the University of Hawaii. Other faculty members, and a complete list of courses will be announced soon.

Besides the usual pleasure of swimming and surfing in Honolulu, a number of interesting side-trips have been planned for students who take this cruise. The university summer student cruises have become nationally known and last year drew students from all over the United States.

CITIZEN TRAINING CAMP IS REPEATED

PORTLAND, Ore.—(AP)—When the bugle calls assembly at Camp Harburt, Vancouver barracks, this summer for the citizens' military training camp, Uncle Sam expects to bring together some 600 or 700 future citizens who will have a new perspective of fundamental patriotism.

So says First Lieutenant Thomas J. Cross, adjutant of this year's camp, a veteran of many campaigns and many of the citizen training periods of the government.

"We are not trying to make soldiers," Lieut. Cross said, "for this cannot be done in 30 days. Nor can it be done in three years' time. The government expects to reap its reward several years hence when these youths are grown to manhood and are respected citizens with their families in the communities in which they reside."

"Citizenship lectures, the annual feature of the camps, will again be the leading spirit of the month which starts June 13 and closes July 17. Boys are given enough military drill to give them an idea of discipline and self-assurance. All afternoon of every week day is devoted to supervised athletics in which each boy is required to participate. Organized recreation fills the evening hours. Experts prepare the good, wholesome food and there is plenty of it for growing young men. The average gain in weight is six pounds."

MUSICIANS AID IN RELIEF FOR NEEDY

TACOMA, Wash.—They return home at night, grimy and tired from their work in Tacoma saw-mills. They eat their supper, take a musical instrument and go forth to aid needy people. Not with music, however, but with good, solid food, tons of it.

They are the 36 members of the Tacoma 4L band, one of the crack outfits in the state. The 4L is the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen, organized some 12 years ago and functioning more actively than ever in Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

At a practice recently, band members got to talking of the many needy families in Tacoma.

MELLON VIEWED AS BUSINESS PROPNET

Rarely Goes Wrong Though He is Mostly Reticent On Finance Trend

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Any words on finance from a slender framed, white haired man in Washington rise quickly above the din and turmoil of the New York stock exchange.

Stock traders, financiers, industrialists listen and ponder. He speaks their language—only the statements he issued on financial conditions and general trends are few and far between.

Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury under three administrations, has never been accused of talking too much. He will give his view frankly on governmental expenditures, or proposals involving those expenditures, if called upon. There was no doubt as to his attitude when he denounced before the senate finance committee the plan to pay $3,400,000,000 to veterans in cash bonus payments.

If he has any financial fetiches one of them is a balanced budget.

Stocks have risen and fallen on rumors that he would resign. Representations as to his attitude have caused stirrings but they have been generally without his authority, or his knowledge. Sometimes after a market incident is over, he will say a word or two designed to restore confidence.

He said after a sharp stock market recession in 1925 that he thought it would have a wholesome effect. He said in the summer of 1929 only a little while before the cataclysm that he thought it a good time to buy bonds.

Declines to Talk After 1929 Crash In October, 1929, tremendous pressure was put upon him by the banking world for some public reassurance. Secretary Mellon came, and of what the band could do to help. They decided to try "food concerts". Working with improvement clubs and other civic bodies, a series of concerts was begun. Admission to a concert was, and is, one pound of food. The food thus obtained is turned over to the clubs and groups for distribution. Several tons of food have thus been collected and distributed. The concerts will be kept up through February, according to David Sims, band director, and A. E. Royal, master of ceremonies.

TEACHERS OFFERED TWO NEW DEGREES

Teachers of Marion county, many of whom are graduates of the University of Oregon will be interested to learn that two professional degrees, that of master of education and doctor of education, will henceforth be granted by the school of education of the University of Oregon, according to an announcement received from the institution, following favorable action on the proposal by the faculty.

These degrees will be conferred upon men and women who pass rigid examinations and requirements in the field of school administration, a more highly specialized field than is required for the ordinary master of arts or master of philosophy degree. Holders of the degrees are expected to find them of high professional value, since they will stamp the graduate as one specialized in the field of education.

The University of Oregon has been recognized for some time as a leader in the field of education, and many of its researches and other projects have won national acclaim. Graduates are now teaching in all parts of Oregon and in many places throughout the world.

TOURNAMENT FOR H. S. ACTORS SOON

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene.—(Special)—Salem high school and high schools all over Oregon are being invited to enter the fifth annual high school drama tournament to be held at the University of Oregon April 2, 3, and 4. Those who are interested should sign up at once as only the first ten to enroll will be allowed to compete, according to Dr. Dan E. Clark, assistant director of the extension division, who is in charge.

Salem high school was entered in the contest last year, and presented "The Last of the Lowries" by Paul Green, which was directed by Margaret Burroughs. The cast included Ruth Howe, Ferne Shelton, Yvonne Smith, Alex Volchok, and Miss Howe won the cup for the best individual acting among the women. Don Bennett, of Corvallis, was awarded the cup for being the best actor. These trophies are given by the Portland Telegram and by Dean Collins, dramatic editor of the Telegram.

Milwaukie Union high school last year captured the first prize, and was awarded the Guild Hall Players silver loving cup. The plays must have but one act, not longer than 35 minutes in duration. Entry must be made not later than March 1.

The junior national backstroke championship swim for women will be held in New York February 23.
