Fred Tooze of Salem, speaker of the evening, said that 25 per cent or more tax is becoming due on real-estate and that of the 50 million dollars of real-estate in the state of Oregon only 2 million is raised on the intangibles leaving 48 million on real-property while at the same time the value of intangibles is equal to the value of real-property in the state.

Mr. Tooze stated that he believed that the tax on intangibles is the most just tax possible since one pays tax on money that he already has on hand with which to pay while the owner of real-property pays on an assessed valuation and may not have the money with which to pay.

"Bill, You've Got the Chance of a Life Time" to clean up a nice lot of money. I've been watching the declines in the price of food, and invariably you decline your prices the day the wholesale price declines, and it's an actual fact it would not be necessary to reduce your prices so soon, because I've noticed in some instances you could have held your prices up for at least six weeks because no one declined their prices except Busick's." "No," I said, "that's true we didn't have to reduce prices — but we told our customers we would lower our prices as fast as the market declines, whether anyone else ever does or not.

If We Didn't We'd be Betraying the Confidence of Our Customers

As for having a lot of money, maybe it would be nice to have a lot, but what would I do with it? In the first place, the cost in friendship would be too great." "What do you mean by that?" he asked.

"Well, Just Suppose I Did" have a lot of money and my friends did not have, don't you know that there could not be the same intimate and congenial association between us? I'm only human—if I had a lot of money I'd be letting everybody know it, make them conscious of a difference between us, and besides that we're making all that we're entitled to make, especially as times are now. No, we'll continue as we are. If money only was required to make people happy there'd be little chance of happiness for a lot of us."
