BOTH PARTIES FACE REVOLTS

Defections in South Seen With Raskob and Hoover Objects of Attacks

WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP)—Signs of revolt in the southern ranks of both major parties were received today with apparent equanimity at republican and democratic headquarters. While southern democratic leaders were organizing to combat policies advanced by Chairman Raskob of the national committee, Horace Mann, director of the southern campaign for the republican national committee, in 1928, claimed control of 233 delegates to the republican convention next year. Although his move was interpreted as "anti-Hoover" republican headquarters showed little concern over his claims. Contending its southern organization was in better shape than ever before. Democratic headquarters took no formal notice of the disturbance within its ranks. But it was said unofficially the southern movement had been anticipated.

Claims of Mann Are Discounted—Mann's claims were discounted by C. Bascom Slemo, former secretary to President Coolidge. Slemo, a power in southern politics, said Mann has "no organization and no following."

He will not control votes at the convention, Slemo added. Mann contended the south would send a solid delegation to the republican convention to demand a "new order of politics."

He would neither affirm nor deny reports his organization was designed to block the renomination of Hoover and would be pledged to former President Coolidge.

His friends, however, claimed these delegates as well as others from some northern states, would go to the convention pledged to oppose the president.

Plan Separate Organization—Mann said headquarters would be established here in December to perfect a national republican organization separate from the national committee set-up.

He added the southern delegates to the next republican convention would represent the people in the republican part of the south, rather than federal office holders.

Southern democratic leaders continued to work quietly for an organization to prevent the party from adopting the anti-prohibition and economic recommendations of Raskob and to make business conditions the paramount issue in 1932.

Many grange members were seen about the state house Friday. Among them were Roy W. Gill, representative in the legislature from Multnomah county, who is also active in Grange work. His championing of a new legislation during the recent session.

A. R. Hunter, new member of the state industrial accident commission, who takes office next Wednesday, was here from LaGrande Friday, to look over the situation. Hunter, a democrat, was a member of the state senate several sessions, although not listed at the last session. His brother was a member of the house at the same time, both here in 1927.

Perhaps Governor Meier likes Salem much better now. During the morning downpour of rain, he received a telephone call from Portland telling him that it was snowing there. There was no snow in Salem Friday. And since he likes the job of being governor, his residence in the state capitol should be pleasant.

Martin is Fined—Halford Martin was fined $7.50 in justice court on Friday when he was convicted of driving a motor vehicle without a rear light.

Eugenite Arrested—Warren M. Karsted of Eugene was arrested on a charge of speeding here yesterday. He posted $10 bail with the police judge.

Account Approved—Annual account of R. H. Bassett as guardian of the estate of Jessie and Joie Haynes has been approved by the probate judge.

Files Report—Brazier Small, guardian of the estate of Gerald K. Allan, incompetent, has filed annual report, showing a balance on hand of $4,645.35.

Publisher Visits—Ralph Cronise, business manager of the Albany Democrat-Herald, was a visitor in Salem Friday.

Final Decree—Estate of Basil A. Kirsch has been closed and A. F. Kirsch discharged as administrator.

Attachment—Certificate of attachment has been filed by the sheriff in case of Esna company vs. J. F. Cowden and others.

COASTING IN AFTER NEW RECORD

The plaudits or an enthusiastic crowd fell on the cars of Gar Wood, veteran motorboat race driver, as he established 101.55 miles per hour as the new mark, but the warmest congratulations of all came from Mrs. Gar Wood and Gar, Jr., (lower), as they congratulated the speed champ. (Upper) Gar Wood and his mechanic, Olin Johnson, waving cheerily from their "Miss America IX" as they coasted into their dock at Miami Beach after establishing the new record.

PEOPLE in eastern Oregon are more interested in taxation problems and the price of agricultural products than they are in politics," said Mrs. Walter Pierce, a member of the state board of higher education, who called on Governor Julius L. Meier Friday. Mrs. Pierce was formerly state librarian and still owns her home in Salem.

Mrs. Pierce was accompanied by former Governor Walter Pierce, who attended the meeting of the Grange executive committee, as well as the agricultural banquet. He called on the new governor. This is the first visit the former executive has made to the capitol since the inauguration of Governor Meier.

Now that James E. Kingsley, convicted murderer, was granted a stay of execution pending appeal of his case to the supreme court, Superintendent Meyers at the penitentiary will have to postpone his party scheduled for the morning of April 2. The invitations sent out for the execution perhaps should be saved, as they may be good at a later date.

E. ARNOLD BENNETT INFLUENZA VICTIM

LONDON, March 27.—(AP)—Enoch Arnold Bennett, one of the greatest literary figures of the present century, died here tonight at the age of 62.

Stricken with influenza seven weeks ago, the famous novelist and playwright was recovering when he contracted typhoid fever. After hours of unconsciousness he passed away peacefully after a blood transfusion had resulted in temporary relief.

News of the death of Bennett, who wrote some 20 novels and more than a dozen plays, though not unexpected, came as a shock to his personal friends as well as to hundreds of thousands throughout the English-speaking world who were familiar with his works.

His earlier novels of the drabness of "The Five Towns," England's pottery district—particularly "The Old Wives Tale"—were rated as classics even in the author's lifetime. In less serious works he acted as guide to what is best in literature, travel and recreation, having always been a keen observer of human life. His type of prison locks for the cell block at the penitentiary, and both expressed determination to stick to their stories. Hoss is silent, and when the matter comes up for final action, he will be called upon to cast the deciding vote of the board of control. At least Hal will be with the majority this time.

A quiet day is anticipated at the capitol Saturday. With Governor Meier in Portland and the other state officials perusing the anniversary number of The Statesman, there will be little news emanating from the various offices. And then, too, all the grangers and farmers here for the agricultural meeting, will be going back to their tanks.

William Hanley was among the late callers at the governor's office Friday. Hanley was once mentioned as a possible candidate for the office of agricultural head, but other names have superseded his of late. So far no guess appears definite enough to bank upon.

Last Guffaw Is Credited To F. Spears

He who laughs last laughs loudest and longest, Frank Spears, high school student, will attest.

It was like this: Frank and some young friends went for a ride in his father's car Thursday night. An argument on speed waxed warm as the boys rode along the river bottom district. The upshot was that Frank got out to show the other boys he could keep up with the car traveling at 30 miles per hour for a certain distance.

He got out. What "foul balls" the fellows turned out to be, they sped down the road at well, they sped. Frank hid. The boys came back to hunt him. He remained obscure. At last a passing car picked Frank up.

The other boys—well, at midnight they decided he was lost and a call to the Spears home so informed the father. Came back over the wire the word that Frank was home, asleep, unmindful of pranks and pranks.

In the early hours of morning the group, still worried, returned the car, with word that Frank was still missing. The first boy who called Mr. Spears had neglected to inform his companions of the good tidings!

Maybe there were two "laugh lasts".

"A straight line is the shortest distance . . ."

YOU need a flashlight or an alarm clock. That's one point in a common geometrical problem. Somewhere a manufacturer is making, a store is offering for sale, exactly the flashlight or alarm clock you should have. That's the second point in your private problem . . . And advertising is the straight line that shows the shortest distance between the two!

Day after day, in the advertising pages, you'll find straight lines drawn direct to the products you need.

Look for them. Follow them. They may save you hours of searching.

And more than time, they'll save you money. Advertised products are those whose honest worth has made them popular. Merchants and manufacturers who advertise regularly have passed the public's test of fair dealing and reliability. By studying their announcements in the light of your own needs, you can buy most wisely and well.

PLAN SURVEYS FOR ROAD'S EXTENSION

Two surveys will be made on the market road extension through Mission Bottom to connect with the Salem-Chambers highway before a definite route is decided for changes in the old road, it was said at the county courthouse yesterday following a trip over the route by party consisting of Oscar Cutler, state market road engineer, Hedda Swart, county engineer, Roadmaster Frank Johnson and Commissioner Jim Smith.

Nothing definite will be outlined until after the survey, but it is understood the engineers would like to take a short cut through the Best Jones hopyard between Hubbard and Wheatland.

There is also some question on the route to be taken at the old Hubbard house, one survey to be made up the bank southwest of the old house and the other to follow the old road, which has about an 18 per cent grade. Change here will be made, of course, to effect a better grade.

The surveys will also be a move to cut as many corners as possible from the route.
