Junior Symphony Orchestra Concert Friday

The outstanding musical event of the spring season is the first appearance of the Salem Junior Symphony orchestra, Friday eve-ning at 8 o'clock, in the armory on Ferry street.

Under the able leadership of Professor William Wallace Graham, whose experience and success has placed him foremost in the line of conductors, the organization of youthful musicians have a real treat in store for music lovers. Professor Graham for eight years studied in Berlin. three years of which he was the leader of the Professional Men's Symphony orchestra of Berlin. For seven years Professor Graham has been second concert master for the Portland Symphony or chestra, which has given him invaluable experience as a conduc-

Appearing as guest artist on the program is Ferenz Steiner, principal 'cellist with the Portland Symphony orchestra. Mr. Steiner will bring with him a rare old Italian Amati 'cello, which has an estimated value of $12,000. This wonderful instrument produces a deep, mellow tone, the richness of of which is most delightful and pleasing to the most sentisive musical ear. This Amati was made in Italy in 1615 and was first exhibited in this country at the time of the St. Louis exposition. Mrs. A. A. Schramm, prominent

Salem pianist, will accompany Mr. Steiner in his program. Those who have contributed to the success of the organization in addition to a large number of individuals, are the Salem Woman's club, Rotary club, MacDowell club, Salem Music Teachers' association and the Business and Professional Women's club. A large number of tickets have already been sold and more are anticipated before the opening selection. Following is the program as it will be given Friday evening: Sulte, "Egyptian" . . . A. Luigini
