Gooseberries First; Crop All Contracted and Outlook is Good

Salem canneries are expected to go into the cans, according to present indications.

per pound and growers are very cheerful over the prospect. Gooseberries have sold as high as seven cents but for the most part producers are satisfied at the five cent price.

Improved methods of culture and of canning have contributed to the popularity of the gooseberry and last year about 350 tons were packed by local can-neries. The crop this year promises to be much better than last year and a heavy pack is anticipated.

LETTUCE STRONGER

Lettuce and asparagus strengthened Thursday. Imperial Valley lettuce, which has exerted a depressing effect for the past 2-3 weeks, is now complotely cleaned up; and Yuma track holdings are also nearly depleted. This leaves central California as the main source of current offerings. Shipments from that district are light, and little increase is expected for another week. Best lettuce sold to retailers today as high as $3.50

Asparagus sold about 25c per crate higher today. Tuesday marked the low point of the season, with brokers' sales to jobbers as lo was $1-1.25 per 30-lb. crate of California grass. Mid-Columbia receipts are light, Tuesday's offerings moving at 12c per lb. Local cauliflower is almost depleted, and no more local production is anticipated until June. Rhubarb supplies are liberal, with sales as low as 2 1/2 c per lb. bulk. Spinach is in only moderate supply, but much young growth will be available for market within a few days.
