Chemeketa Turned Back—Thirty-two out of 38 Chemeketa and friends reached a point 500 feet in elevation below the summit of Rocky Mountain peak, northeast of Niagara in the Cascade range, despite the fact that the outing was one of the hardest taken by the group. The hike started at 9:30 Sunday morning from the city and a half up the Santiam river from Niagara. It was decided to turn back at 3:15. The descent was made in approximately three hours, through rain most of the way. Brush and logs were encountered during the first mile of the way.

Board Meeting—The regular monthly meeting of the Y. W. C. A. official board will be held this morning at 10 o'clock at the association club rooms. Miss Pauline Schaefer, national finance secretary in charge of that work in 10 western states, will meet with the board and give the main talk. She also attended a finance committee meeting yesterday afternoon.

Crop Outlook Good—Crop outlook for fruit in California are good this year. W. G. Allen of the Hunt brothers firm reported this week upon his return from San Francisco that the peach and prune crop will be 25 per cent less than a year ago, Allen said it would approximate a normal yield since the 1930 crop was a bumper one. Rainfall for the year has been below normal and there is every indication some areas will suffer from this situation.

Cross Elected—Wendell Cross of Salem high school was named secretary of the organization perfected in Portland Friday and Saturday by vocational education shop students over the state. Thirty attended from Salem. The Salem boys were placed in charge of arrangements for the 1932 conference. The organization has been named Future Craftsmen of Oregon. Local units will be formed over the state.

NAVAJO SHOULD BE LEFT ALONE

Lipps Favors Permitting a Continuance of Arts, Native Customs

No attempt to absorb the Navajo Indian into the white man's civilization should be made, Superintendent O. H. Lipps of Chemsuta told chamber of commerce members Monday night. Rather the tribe, now 40,000 in number, should be left in its native territory of 12,000,000 square miles and there should be allowed to pursue the native arts and customs which have made the Navajos one of the finest Indian groups left.

Lipps said that the problem of the northern tribes, now largely "civilized" was different, and advocated that as long as past educational practices had worked towards absorption of these Indians into American life, the process should be carried on and completed.

Lipps sketched the history of the Navajos and told about many of their customs. He illustrated his remarks about their rug weaving by a display of a number of different Navajo rugs he possessed.

The Navajo, ethnologically an Indian from the north, moved into the south and replaced an ancient Pueblo tribe which had developed a civilization, he said. Here the Navajo distinguished himself as a virile Indian, big game hunter and self-reliant.

He was able to take from a desert land and rough frontier a civilization by the whites sufficient to support a race which grew from 9000 in 1869 to 40,000 at the present time.

Retaining a civilization primarily pastoral, the Navajo added the art of rug weaving which he probably learned from the Pueblo tribes who in turn acquired the industry from the Spaniards. These rugs, now known throughout the world, are mentioned in the support he made by agriculture.

Lipps said the Navajos were a religious people, working out their religious beliefs in great festivals. Some of their rites have been shown in patterns in their rugs.

Among the peculiar customs of the race is that a son-in-law never looks into the face of his mother-in-law. A Navajo Indian will not eat fish, believing that Building Alteration—Steeves and Moore were issued a permit by the city Saturday to alter a three story store building at 189 Liberty street. The job will cost $2,900.

Under the Dome . . . Occurrences and Gossip at the center of Oregon's state government

SEVERAL things of note occurred at the dedication of the new Cottage Grove armory Saturday night. Adjutant General George A. White of the Oregon National Guard said on his return to Salem. Not only was the large building crowded with visitors, but Brigadier-General Thomas Riley made his first public address on the program, and did it with credit to himself, White said.

But the reaction must have been too much for Riley. He fell ill with "flu" Sunday, and although reported better Monday, was unable to report for duty. It is expected he will be confined to his home for the entire week.

Twelve cases will be heard by the supreme court this week, giving the jurists an additional three to take under advisement over the usual weekly quota. Nine of these were appealed from Multnomah county while one each came from Klamath, Polk and Washington counties.

Frank H. Chates of Pendleton, was the first one to make application to the secretary of state for his annual automobile license for 1931-32. The license is due July 1, and the blanks will not be issued until May 15. Chates used his last year's blank to make application, which was accompanied by his check.

Prisoners discharged from the state penitentiary wear the latest style of shirts when they leave the institution, it was revealed at the meeting of the board of control Monday. Samples for shirts with new vest styles were sent from the east for consideration of the board in purchasing this piece of wearing apparel.

F. L. Lilburn, chief deputy insurance commissioner, who announced today he had resigned his position effective May 1 to take up work with the Capital Life Insurance company, will maintain his residence in Salem, though his headquarters will be in Portland. Mrs. Lilburn is active in organizations here.

Dr. R. E. Lee Steiner, of the Oregon Insane hospital, returned from New York Monday where he took several inmates last week. Steiner says business apparently is not improving. He noticed that eastern cities were much harder hit by the depression than western points.

The new state game commission held its first of a two day meeting here Monday, when among other things it requested the resignation of about 124 employees of the commission, or the entire payroll. Many of these will be re-employed the members stated, and their names will be considered among other applications.

At the star chamber session of the commission, meeting with Governor Julius L. Meier, Marshall Dana was elected chairman of the new group. Sportsmen's representatives appearing before the commission started their talks by complimenting the personnel. Plans were started for moving the headquarters of the commission to Salem from Portland. Today's meeting will be held in Portland.

Lois Faye Burr, age 8, died in this city April 12. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Burr; sister of Mrs. H. H. Burr, 14; Thomas Henry, 16, and Douglas, 12, all of North Bend. Announcement of funeral later by the Clough-Barrick company.

Funeral Wednesday, April 15, at 10:30 a. m., at Belcrest Memorial park under direction of W. T. Rigdon and Son.

Henry Kuhl of Woodburn died in this city April 11. Funeral Wednesday, April 15, at 1:30 p. m., from W. T. Rigdon chapel, Rev. P. W. Erickson officiating. Interment City View cemetery.

Leading parts in the production by Joyce Phelps, Frances Houston, Mary Jane Adams, June Director, Clara Belle Burnside, Ward Elliott, Ervin Pottler, Robert Clark, Harold Beall, and Vernon Domagala. The Parrish glee club composes the chorus for the operetta.

The plot concerns the affairs of Miss Jimmie Steel and Prof. Alvin Flint, rival operators of private schools on opposite sides of Lollypop Bay.

Contract With Blaine Devers Now Forfeited

The state reclamation commission yesterday declared a forfeiture of its contract with Blaine Devers, for the sale of the Weimer ranch, consisting of 132 acres, in Deschutes county municipal improvement district. The property was a part of the lands purchased by the state which was to be used as a part of the Tumalo reservoir.

The contract was executed in 1926 and the failure of the purchaser to pay the taxes due was given as the cause for the commission's action.

Letter to Governor Points Out Various Classes of Expenditures

The cooperation of Hal E. Hoss, secretary of state, in a program of economy directed by Governor Meier, was pledged by the former yesterday in a letter received at the executive department. Hoss as a member of the state board of control passes on all regulations for state supplies.

"I classify requests coming before the board of control for material and services into three divisions," read Hoss' letter. "First are requests originating in any of the state boards, commissions or departments over which the governor exercises jurisdiction. With this group over which exclusive jurisdiction rests with the executive, I pledge 100 per cent cooperation in denying any request which does not meet with his approval.

"If the second group are the elective state officials.
