SPEAKER

Col. Alfred E. Moudy of Indiana, first of Flying Squadron trio, who will speak at First M. E. church tonight.

FLYING SQUADRON IS HERE TONIGHT

Col. Alfred E. Moudy Will Speak at First Church On Constitution

The first of a series of three Flying Squadron meetings will be held at the First Methodist church here tonight at 7:30 o'clock to hear meetings will be held Sunday and Monday evening at the same hour.

Col. Alfred E. Moudy, of Indiana, who after more than 20 years as a teacher and superintendent of schools, saw service in the Nation, and has been covering the world since his return from Europe at the close of the World War, will open the series with an address on "The Constitution—Its Making and Operation." Students of history and civil government will find this discussion particularly helpful and classes in these subjects might well plan to attend in a body prepared to take notes on the lecture.

On the second evening Miss Norma C. Brown, vice president of the Flying Squadron foundation and associate editor of the National Enquirer will speak on "The New Era of Law Enforcement." She is a young woman of unusual experience, having campaigned every state in the union more than once, and having made her first journey through all of her before she was 24 years old. She was quoted at length by the Literary Digest recently on a supreme court decision.

Will Tell Work Of Commission

Her address, with the open forum which is to follow, will give those present an opportunity for vital information on the status of prohibition legislation, the work of the law enforcement commission, and recent efforts in behalf of the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment. It is especially desired that all those interested bring their questions and suggestions for the open forum which will be a feature of this second meeting.

The final session of this community rally will bring to the city Oliver W. Stewart, long and well known as a veteran leader of the prohibition movement. With a national reputation of more than 30 years standing, with broad experience growing out of his long service on the platform as a member of the Illinois legislature, and as a recognized leader among the dry forces today, Dr. Stewart's coming will assure the community a down to the minute discussion. He is president of the Flying Squadron Foundation and editor of the National Enquirer.

In view of the fact that the question of prohibition and its enforcement is the dominant issue before the country, the coming of the Flying Squadron to this community is timely and doubtless will be appreciated by many of our people.

GENERAL STORES THIRD UPON LIST

Department, dry Goods and Variety Establishments Sales are $1,710,000

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of a series of short articles based on 1928 census figures showing how dollars among retailers in 1929.

The general merchandise group of retailers stood third from the top in their proportionate receipts from the buyer's dollar in 1929, but they were far below the food and automotive group and were closely followed by the group of merchants who handle apparel. The general merchandise stores made total sales $1,710,000 or nine and one-half per cent of the total year's business done in the city.

Fifteen local establishments were classed in the general merchandise store group. They included three department stores doing $109,000 or more gross business annually, eight dry goods stores, three general stores and the one variety store then operating in the city.

The 15 firms employed a total of 187 workers, spent $212,791 on wages and had stocks on hand at the end of the year of $623,901.

Sales of the three department stores totaled $1,176,632, of the dry goods stores $217,000, and of the general stores $228,660.
