The right of a county to levy taxes for market road purposes is not taken away by an act of the last legislature eliminating the one-mill market road tax, according to an opinion handed down by Attorney General Van Winkle Wednesday.

The attorney general held that a county always has the right to levy taxes for the construction of roads, whether they be designated as market roads or not. He said he found no law which would prevent the use of general fund money for redemption of market road warrants. In reply to another question, Attorney General Van Winkle held that any market road tax would come under the six per cent
