BUYING MOB NEEDS POLICE ATTENTION

"Police, police!"
The sale of the Fulop Bros. stock of men's clothing which was begun yesterday by Bishop's at the former Fulop location on State street attracted such a crowd that police had to be called to keep the jam in order. Before opening time the entry way and street were crowded. When the doors were opened so many rushed in the clerks were crowded out at the back so the front doors were locked until the people inside could be waited on.

"The people were certainly interested in the bargains," said Ralph Cooley, manager. "They bought not only the smaller items like shirts and neckties and underwear but suits, overcoats, hats. We used a lot of advertising and the results certainly justified the spread which we gave the sale."
Double truck ads in The Statesman with posters printed therefrom and widely distributed were used in putting on this sale by Bishop's who purchased the bankrupt stock.

City 'Hotel' Is One-Night Flop, Ruling

That the "Bums Hotel" under the city hall has been closed to unemployed men was denied by Chief Minto of the city police, Tuesday. There has been a rumor to the effect that it was closed circulating about the city.
Chief Minto explains that the policy now is to lock the occupants in the room and in the morning, let them out and direct them out of the city. There have been men who stayed in this domicile for nearly a month; hence the new policy.

Transients during the winter have been allowed to stay in an indefinite period and even do small bits of cooking in the basement, but this policy is discontinued. The aroma of frying bacon and boiling coffee is too demoralizing on the city employes, say authorities.

Several hundred transients have been given shelter during the winter months.
Included in the regular patrons of the "hotel" have been hobos and tramps, illiterate men, college educated men, loafers, and those who were anxious to patronize a little morchant of your own neighborhood.

When you take the Oregon Statesman from a carrier boy, you are patronizing a little morchant of your own neighborhood.
