met a girl she liked as well, trusted as deeply and found as companionable as Mary Lou Thurston. But the real Delight? Where was she living somewhere, the wife, perhaps of the man who sat here, watching Mary Lou's least gesture with an enchanted eagerness?

She put the question from her, the problems it aroused, and everything, to distract her troubled thoughts. But the problem was not to be set aside as easily as that.

Shortly before Christmas Dr. Mathews, dropping in at tea hour, watched from the windows of the library the slight flurry of snow which came suddenly from an apparently cloudless sky and departed again, leaving the horizon clear, cold, blue; watched, too, Mary Lou and Lorrimer ride up the driveway, watched them from the main entrance, listened to the sight, heard them dismount, at the main entrance, listened to the faint echo of voices and laughter and the clatter of hoofs on the frosty drive and turned over to Mrs. Lorrimer who was watching him.

"He's better, isn't he?" he asked.

"Astonishingly so. They ride every day. She's managed to get him up early and to bed early by, merely, example. He's going to teach her to play squash. Yes, he's much better. Sleeps well, and his appetite has improved enormously. He still has those—well, spells of brooding. He's quiet then, abstracted, living over things. She pulls him out somehow. They read together, French English and a little German.

"Neither of them is an accomplished German student. I think she started that to try and get him to a more rational memory of—war, prison, all the rest. She told me that if he could read of the new Germany in the original language she thought it would help; for she felt he'd gotten to thinking too much about what he had suffered, and did not realize that there were men on the other side who had suffered as greatly. So she got grammars and dictionaries and they have started. It's been interesting to watch them. And she's reconciled him to Jenny and her crowd. They come over now and then."

"What have you told Jenny?" asked the doctor.

"Just that Delight is a girl Travers knew during the war and that I've asked her to live with us, as my companion, as she is now alone in the world."

"She believes you?"

"Yes. Suspects a romance, but says nothing about it. Jenny is hard boiled—or so she thinks—but she is discreet."

"And if," Mathews asked slowly, "if Jenny should be right, and out of this experiment of ours romance should come—what then "

"Oh," Margaret made a little helpless gesture, "I don't know! I—I'd wish it, of course. For my own sake as well as for Travers! But until we know for certain. ."

Mathews started to answer, but at that moment Travers and Mary Lou came in, booted and spurred, with a hint of winter winds about them. Lorrimer's sallow face glowing and Mary Lou's like nothing so much as a rose.

"We're starved, aren't we, Lorry? I hope there's lots of tea! No, I'd rather have milk if Peter doesn't mind," said Mary Lou, changing her mind, "and so would you, Lorry. You need to get some fat on that rack of bones," she assured him. "Dr. Mathews, I don't suppose you approve of stuffing between meals?"

"I seem to be making an impression on this plate of toast," the doctor told her. They were old friends by now. "And in your case, Delight, I certainly do approve, for you use up enough energy for six girls in 24 hours, and this household is so fashionable it dines late. But what about your figure?"

"What about it?" asked Mary Lou, laughing. "I stay the same weight year round almost. Remember, I'm riding every day—and Lorry is going to let me jump next spring. And I've my daily dozen. And do a lot more besides. And so I'm hungry most of the time," she confessed.

There was a scratch at the library door and an inquiring whine.

"Oh, please, may he come in?" Mary Lou begged. "He's been awfully good about waiting outside."

Lorrimer rose and opened the door. Konig bounced past him, loped across the room and sat sat himself down at Mary Lou's feet, with a huge sigh of relief, his red tongue flickering across her hand and his entire body one welcoming waggle. Mary Lou tickled his pointed ears and gave him a forbidden lump of sugar.

Mathews raised an eyebrow at Margaret Lorrimer, remembering the long years when dogdom had been banished from this house.

First Shipment Comes From Eugene and Quality Fancy

PORTLAND, May 20—(AP)—First of the season's Oregon grown raspberries are here. The initial supply came from Eugene and was of very fancy quality. The supply consisted of but a single crate of 20 boxes which sold for $5. At the same time fancy quality artichokes were received from the same grower.

While there is gathering weakness in the local cube butter market with accumulating supplies indicated in the local territory, no change in the price was made for the day generally. Undertone of the trade is considered not only extremely slow but really weak with receivers vainly peddling their receipts.

Butterfat values continue stationary, but badly mixed with only city prices more or less uniform.

Market for eggs continued during the day without general price changes. Locally there was no chance whatever in regular prices but a wide spread of selling values continues with varied qualities.

Live chicken market is again doing better. After a period of severe depression, killers have actually advanced their buying prices about 1c lb. from the recent low mark with the best call for lights and mediums.

Weakness is generally continued in the market for country killed calves with more or less selling of tops below extreme quotations. Hogs are also easy and there is little strength in the lamb situation.

At least full steadiness was reflected in the market for strawberries during the day with better quality more generally available. Practically all California stock is out of the way.

New potato prices continue to slide with a further cut in the price list generally. Both red and white are down to 3c top.

With lighter supplies, due to the cool weather locally as well as along the mid-Columbia, asparagus is showing a strong tone. Most sales 90c-$1.00 doz. bunches.

With increasing supplies of both outdoor stuff from the south as well as local hothouse offerings; market for the latter is showing a generally easier tone with shaded prices.

Lettuce demand is better for locals although California is still in supply.

Old potatoes are still finding a fair demand.

SILVERTON PUPILS HAVE BUSY WEEK

Operetta and Junior Prom To be High Lights in Schedule

SILVERTON, May 20—Two high school events of a little more than usual interest are scheduled for the coming weekend.

The first of these, to be held Friday night, is the high school operetta, "Pickles" which is under the direction of Miss Fay Sparks. Practices for the operetta have been going on for more than a month. This will be given at the Eugene Field auditorium. This is not a money-making affair but expenses amounting to about $25 have been entailed with the production of the operetta and to cover these those in charge have decided to charge 10 cents admission.

Max Lindholm as J. Jennison Jones, an advertising expert, has the chief speaking role, and Donald Burch, as Arthur Crefont, a young American artist, has the principal singing role.

The cast of characters is: Charlie Wigle, Hans Maier, proprietor of the Wurtzelpraeter Inn; Myrtle Johnson, Louisa, a waitress; Norman Kolin, Captain Kinski, chief of the detective bureau of Vienna; Jesse Arbuckle-Bumski, a sleuth; Max Lindolm, J. Jennison, Jones, an advertising expert; Ralph Langley, Jigo, a Hungarian gypsy; Frances Nelson, Ilona, a gypsy girl; Donald Birch—Arthur Crefont, a young American artist; Diane Moors, June Pennington, an American heiress; Elvin Almquist, Jones W. Pennington, proprietor of Peter Pepper Pickles, Ethyl Smith, Lady Vivian Delancy, a charming English widow; chorus, tourists, burgers, Viennese, waiters and gypsies.

The second event for the week is the junior prom which will replace the customary junior senior banquet at the senior high school. This will be held at the Eugene Field auditorium Saturday night and is only for the members of the junior and senior classes, the faculty and a group of patrons and patronesses who have been invited.

Miss Mae Coffey is chairman of the prom. Miss Ellen Christensen is in charge of decorations. Miss Esther Larson has charge of refreshments. Miss Mildred Van Buren is outlining the program and Miss Alice Barkhurst will be in charge of the entertainment for those who do not dance.
