STEIWER EYES RUSSIAN ISSUE

Forced Labor There Menace To Free Industry of America, Held

Senator Frederick W. Steiwer warned his hearers at the chamber of commerce luncheon Monday against the menace of Russian export of goods produced by forced labor. His general topic was "Oregon's situation at the national capital," but he climaxed his address with a stirring plea for routing to the problem faced by this soviet competition.

He said he was not a "Russian hater" but the experiment of collectivism and communism in Russia makes a new situation which Americans must heed. Here we have the right of free labor which gives labor a preferred status and higher standard of living. We compete with similar systems in other lands, but in Russia the land pays no taxes for it is state-owned, labor receives no wages save what the government distributes, and the shipping goes at lower rates because of the government control.

"The American laborer can't compete with the forced labor of Russia," was Steiwer's assertion. "In this country in the lumber industry there are taxes, plant expense, and labor cost. The timber is nationalized in Russia, and the workers under discipline load vessels at the ports. We ought to shut out the products of self labor from competition in this country."

Formality of Capital Marked—Senator Steiwer referred to the emphasis on rank and seniority in Washington, describing the capital as the "headquarters of formality." This insistence on rank is rather irksome to the westerner who is more accustomed to settling matters on merit, and it has a serious effect on the method of work. It encourages "stuffed shirt statesmanship." In this atmosphere it is hard to get definite committal or promise on a matter.

Oregon suffers two handicaps: its great distance from Washington being a difficulty hard to overcome, and its lack of population giving it only three members of Pedestrian Injured—Flo Mijla, 22, of 9017 Court street escaped with scratches around the eyes when struck by an auto driven by Thomas Segulan, Lacombe, Sunday morning.

Stolen Car—A Chevrolet sedan licensed 188-069 and owned by Eck Dutoit of Route 8 was stolen from Ferry street Sunday, according to police records.

Attention Pythian Sisters—Pythian Sisters will meet at the home of the Most Excellent 70 Chomeketa today at 12:30 to attend the funeral of our Past Grand Chief, Elizabeth Stinson, from the Rigdon Mortuary at 1 p. m. By order of Most Excellent Chief, Norma M. Terwilliger.

Did Not Stop, Charge—Oscar Long and Donald Oregon, both of Salem, were arrested Sunday for failing to stop at stop signs, according to police records.

Recovered Car—A coupe owned by Swift and Company was recovered in West Salem Sunday by a state traffic officer; it was stolen last week.

Demurrer—Defendant has filed demurrer to complaint in case of Virginia Maude Gorline and others vs. Walter Earl Sears and others.

Marriage Looms—License to wed was issued here yesterday to R. J. Varley, legal, 570 Hood street, and Loretta Barr, legal, Mt. Angel.

Visiting Here—Mrs. J. W. Hammond of San Francisco is here to visit for a month with her sister, Mrs. C. A. Eldridge and Miss Zelle Ruble.

Short time investments, 6, 9, or 12 months to yield 6.3 per cent. Hawkins & Roberts.

CANNERY OUTLOOK GOOD; RUN STARTS

First quantity deliveries of Marshall strawberries reached Salem canneries on Monday but the peak of the season is not expected for another 10 days. An average crop is expected by the growers and so far no material damage by spittle bugs has been reported. Reports regarding the damage by the small pest vary widely and many fields are reported infested with them but actual damage to the berries is slight.

The berries coming to local plants are hulled as the growers get 7 1/2 cents per pound for these instead of the 4 1/2 cents for those not hulled.

Both growers and packers are optimistic and declare that the outlook for a profitable year is exceptionally good.

Shirley Brush Ship Pilot For Smedley Butler

Shirley E. Brush of San Francisco came down from the air to visit his father-in-law, Paul Hanson, 1645 South Commercial street, Sunday. Brush had spent the week in Oregon as pilot for General Smedley D. Butler when the latter wished to use the Standard Oil tri-motor Ford airplane which Brush provided for him.

The young man makes his home in San Francisco and has been assigned to the pilot's job by the Standard Oil company, making frequent trips to various parts of the coast. Four years ago he married Eulalia Hanson.

Brush visited for a short time, returned to the airport and started south. His mechanic accompanied him.
