Food and Health
By C. G. DAUER, M.D.
Marion County Health Dept.
About one hundred years ago there was a book published in which the author stated: "It has always pleased me exceedingly to account for our good eating so often made the subject of vulgar and irreverent jesting. A matter of so much importance to all as a support of life by delicious nourishment ought, once a h o u r I think, to be treated with some seriousness and gravity."

"MAKE BELIEVE" By FAITH BALDWIN
Pretty Mary Lou Thurston pretends she is Delight Harford to help Travers Lorrimer, shell-shocked son of the wealthy Margaret Lorrimer, regain his health as Travers had mistaken Mary Lou for Delight, whom he is supposed to have married in England. No trace can be found of Delight. Travers agrees to start all over with friendship. Months of happy companionship follow with Travers more in love with Delight than ever. At Christmas he presents Mary Lou with a sapphire ring, referring to her not wearing the "real" ring. This leads Mary Lou to believe that he really married Delight, using a real ring. Mary Lou loves Travers and finds deception hard.

Five to Four Decisions
IN times past radicals have denounced the "autocracy" of the supreme court where the will of one man might declare legislation unconstitutional. Occasional 5 to 4 decisions were pointed to as proof that the power of the court should be shared. Now that the balance of the court has turned 4 to 5, we may expect the progressives now to cry out: "A Daniel, a Daniel come to judgment." That it should be Chief Justice Hughes who would join those long in dissent to give them a majority must confound those senatorial conspirators who sought to defeat his appointment.

The Price of Fear
THE coupon rate of 3 1/8% on the forthcoming issue of $800,000,000 in government bonds represents not only the credit rating of the United States but the price of fear. So timid is capital in the present juncture that U. S. bonds with a 15-18 year maturity and an extremely low interest rate will probably be oversubscribed. Fear rules the business world. The securities of the strongest industries are being dumped overboard in a cold chill of unreasoning fear.

The Minnesota Case
THE supreme court's decision invalidating the Minnesota gag law is a great victory for the freedom of the press. The Minnesota law gave courts the power to suppress a publication before its issues were printed under color of attempt to suppress publication of matter that might be libelous. Under this law the "Saturday Press" was actually suppressed. This was an obscure weekly, sort of a "scandal sheet," but newspaper editors saw in this case a grave menace to their liberty of publication.

Daily Thought
"it is related by a peasant that he had persuaded himself that beyond his fields there were no others, and when he happened to lose a cow and was compelled to go in search of her, he was astonished at the great number of fields beyond his own few acres. This must also be the case of many theorists who have persuaded themselves that beyond this field or little globe of earth there lie no other worlds—simply because he has not seen them."—Spinoza.

New Views
TUESDAY reporters of The Statesman asked this question: "What feature of The Statesman do you like best and what feature do you like the least?"
Hert Macy, attorney: "I don't know. There's nothing bad about it. I never read the rumble. I never read the rumble."

BITS for BREAKFAST
By R. J. HENDRICKS
Methodist semi-centennial:
The records of the intervening years until 1857 are not at hand, but it will be remembered that the multiple ministrations were shared by Reverends W. S. Roberts, J. H. Wilbur, David Leslie, John Filina, A. F. Waller, Thos. H. Pearne and F. S. Hoyt. The following comprises the pastors since that time.

and distribution? The useless expense saved could go to the producers and the price level would be reduced to the minimum to the great benefit of the producers and to those who assist in production. This of course would cut out many useless distributors but it would furnish them a better job in the easier, more rapid and more equitable method of production with modern publicly-owned machinery. In other words, when we are civilized to the point of wearing into the scrap-heap our costly, wasteful methods of production and distribution and the workers learn how to govern themselves and produce things for their own use, then the wages will be as high as the social cost of production and prices will then be "on the level," the economic problem will be solved, and our government will be of the people, by the people and for the people.

BOTH ON THE LEVEL
SILVERTON, May 29—(To the Editor.)—In your today's editorial, "Wages and Prices," the truth is brought out very nicely, that under present conditions, we cannot see that the high and low price levels low. And this is a very important economic problem for our people to solve. If it is not solved soon, our trouble will continue and more and more trouble keep coming. But why not change conditions by eliminating the price level excessive cost of production?

continued to tear out when he was able and, when he was not able, to frantically phone Jenny that as he would have an hour off she'd better meet him in town!
But the Wynnes insisted that Jenny come south for the last two weeks in February.

CHAPTER XXXI
"It's all been the best possible thing that could have happened to him," Mathews told her, "you and your healthy, normal interest in life, the routine he has followed through you, his encounter with McEwan. He's won a lot of victories over himself, and we have to give him credit for them. To a sound person nerves seem something to be dismissed with a gesture of contempt or a joke, as something which really does not exist save in the imagination. But they are perfectly real and play wretched tricks on their miserable owners. Nerve-ridden people suffer incredibly and with reality."

caught the spirit of the times, and it must keep pace with the developments. A subscription paper was put in circulation. The quick response was $16,000, some subscribing $3000 at once. . . . It was the intention of the builders that the church should cost only the modest sum of $20,000.
