LEADER POINTS TO SCOUT GOOD

Boys Trained in Program First in aid and Citizenship, Needham Says

With the annual finance campaign to maintain the Boy Scout movement in Marion county only two days off, F. E. Needham, one of the local men interested in seeing the council continued here, has made the following statement on scout work:

"The welfare of any community demands certain definite standards of ideals and of conduct. Such standards ultimately rest on habit. To expect such habits to be the by-product of accident or unweighted chance is to expect the unnatural. An instance of the deliberate planning of the fixation of desirable habits is found in the program of weekly meetings, camping, games and inexpensive awards of the Boy Scouts of America.

"Habit becomes an instinctive force for good or evil. Just the other day a Salem citizen lay bleeding to death with an outer jugular vein severed. A former boy scout stepped forward with his knowledge of first aid to save the citizen's life. Last winter local youth was thrown from a bicycle and was in danger of death from shock. A boy scout came along with his skill gained in hours of training. Last summer a boy was drowning in the Rickreall river. A Dallas scout, trained in life saving, rescued him. Habits, built by practice and knowledge of what to do in emergencies, were responsible.

"Patriotism and community service are closely linked together. To see boy scouts marching in the Memorial day parade, caring for old soldiers' graves in local cemeteries, and building and decorating a memorial boat to float on the Willamette in commemoration of our sailor dead, seem to be practical exercises in citizenship. Gathering Christmas toys, assisting local police on Armistice day, serving as messengers during conventions, and daily practice of the individual good turn are not undesirable methods of developing habits of community service."

First Leslie Field Day Huge Success; 9B Class Takes Perpetual Trophy

Leslie junior high school's first field day, held yesterday was a huge success, and none will say so more quickly than the members of the 9B class.

For the 9B pupils carried away most points in inter-class competition, and by virtue of their point-scoring ability received the large field day pennant, a perpetual trophy offered by the associated students. Each year's winning group is entitled to place the class numerals on the back of the pennant.

Highlight of the day's events was the soccer game played early yesterday morning, in which the 9B team met the 9A outfit to play off a tie for the championship. But the tie wasn't broken, the play ending 1 to 1. In the championship baseball game between the 9As and 9Bs, the 9A players won, and in the boys' track competition, the 9B athletes amassed the most points.

All students gathered by classes at the noon hour to hold a picnic lunch, and following class singing and roll call the classes lined up outdoors for the annual song contest, with June Johnson, song leader, directing. The 9A class won this contest.

The remainder of the afternoon was devoted to contests in dancing, tumbling, pyramid building and relays, at the close of which the students held a pep rally preliminary to attending the baseball game at the Parrish field between Parrish and Leslie. Leslie lost the game, 14 to 6.

Judges of the various competitive events were: Kathryn Topping, O. S. C. student; and Curtis French and Muriel White, both of Willamette. Class advisors of the 9B winners are Phebe McAdams, Nell Doege and Vivian Carr.
