Ramp's throw ended the game, It was all the more spectacular because Ramp had suffered serious injury to his face when he tripped over a drag which had been left in the field, just as he got his hands on a fly ball early in the game. Several minutes time had to be taken out for him, and he remained in the game at the cost of considerable suffering.

LAUGH AT CARAWAY AND THEN FAN OUT

"They laughed when I wound up to pitch the baseball—" says Cecil Patrick Caraway.

But the lanky hurler of the Chicago White Sox has been throwing baseballs past American league batters all spring in a manner far from comic, though productive of broad smiles of appreciation from Manager Donie

Bush first took notice of the six-foot two-inch Texan when the Sox were training in San Antonio in 1930. "Cecil the Seed" was demonstrating his octopus-like windup, weaving arms and legs all over the mound, but invariably delivering the ball where the catcher wanted it.

Another thing that made Pat an object of comedy in his apprentice days was his lack of a good fast ball.

But Pat, minus a fast ball and with his flailing windup, has turned out to be the ace of the Sox slab staff this year.

Batters say it's Pat's odd delivery that makes him effective. They never know from what corner of his angular frame, or when, that ball will come shooting plateward.

Caraway allowed only 17 hits in four successive games recently, an average of 4% hits per game.

Colleges in northeastern and western states showed little enrollment changes, while schools in the north central and southstates gained slightly during 1930.

"Little Phil" Cellins, Chicago referee, formerly fought as a lightweight. So did Eddy Purdy, rated as one of the outstanding referees in the country.

People go to athletic contests for thrills and they don't care so much about the actual abilities of the contestants as they do about the comparative abilities, which determine whether it's going to be a walkaway or a battle.

Over at Silverton yesterday the actual abilities were about all you could look for in lads 16 years old or less, but those teams were so evenly matched that a big crowd got all the thrill it could stand and we're still fearful a report will come in that somebody died of heart failure.

Silverton certainly gathered together a gang of hitters, and they if Silverion figured they were a bit lucky at that. -0-

And it may be even hotter today.

Silverton's boys didn't all have uniforms. Every time a harmless ooking kid in overalls with hay sticking out of his pockets came up to bat, it was a pretty sure sign the ball would go sailing most of the way out of the lot. Maybe Downie had 'em disguised that way to fool Frisco and his Grossman, Seattle, was second gang.

Hope it doesn't rain too hard and drown out today's games.
