

SHARP ADVANCE IN HOGS NOTED

All Grades but Feeders and Stockers Gain $1.15 On an Average

PORTLAND, Ore., June 20.—(AP)—A phenomenal boost in hog prices was caused by the outstanding movement of the general market here this week. Portland prices reflected sharp advances in the east and all grades but feeders and stockers responded with an increase of about $1.15 as compared to last week's close. Hoesives from 250-280 lbs. were 6.90-7.00 compared to 4.85-5.35 last week; mediums, 200-220 lbs., were 7.00-8.00, up the same amount, and lights, 160-220 lbs., were 7.00-8.00, up the same amount, and lights, 160-220 lbs., were 7.00-8.00, up the same amount, and lights, 160-220 lbs., were 7.00-8.00, up the same amount...

Cherries and Berries Find Good Outlet At Portland

PORTLAND, June 20.—(AP)—First of the season's new apples from the home territory were brought to the east side farmers' market during today's session. They were of the Yellow Transparent variety and of exceedingly good quality. They were even better than the first northwest apples recently received by a wholesale house from Rufus. Sales were at $1.35 small lug. Market for strawberries was active with limited offerings. Sales were showing a spread of $1.50 @ 1.80 with the better class fruit mostly $1.70 @ 1.80. Raspberries were easier at $1.25 @ 1.50 with only a nominal supply at the high mark. Loganberries moved $1 @ 1.25 crate, with the bulk $1.10 @ 1.20. Blackcaps moved $1.50 @ 1.55 with most sales $1.50 @ 1.50. Currants sold $1.50 @ 1.75 crate with the bulk of the good stuff $1.65 @ 1.75. Peas were in good demand with sales mostly $5 @ 5 1/2 c pound. New potatoes moved fair at 3 1/2 @ 3 c pound. Cabbage sales were 75 @ 80 c large crate. Bing cherries found a fairly good call at 7 @ 8 c pound with Royal Annes 4 @ 5 c pound. Cauliflower sales were $1 @ 1.50 crate with most of the supply of indifferent quality at the lower mark. Lettuce moved 80 c mostly for good locals. Rhubarb demand was good and up to 65 c box. Root vegetables were easier, with carrots $20 @ 25 c, beets 20 @ 25 c and turnips up to 50 c for best.

Source Believed More Substantial now; Hoover Helps

CHICAGO, June 20.—(AP)—Buoyancy developed in the grain markets today simultaneously with a steep advance of securities. Wheat purchasing appeared to come from more substantial sources than for some time, and belief spread that an organized movement was afoot to enhance commodities and stocks. Prospective improvement of Germany's financial position received much notice, and there was talk that Canadian crop damage now amounted to almost calamity proportions. Wheat closed strong at about the day's top level 3/4 to 2 1/2 cents higher, corn 1 1/4 to 3 1/2 up, oats 1/2 to 3/4 advanced.

Relief in Heat Wave is Noted After Two Die

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 20.—(AP)—Heavy wind and rain storms in Minnesota and western Wisconsin last night brought relief from an extended heat wave, which had caused more than a score of deaths in the midwest since Tuesday. Some damage from the storm was reported in the twin cities where the temperature had reached 94 early in the afternoon. More than two inches of rain fell at Owatonna, Minn., and Eau Claire, Wis. Two men died from the heat in Minneapolis.

Ginseng is Profitable Say Oregon Growers

Ginseng is an extremely profitable Oregon crop. (Above) a flourishing bed shaded by lath, on a city lot at Gresham. (Below) an outside view of the hand-cut "shakes" that shade the beds at Estacada, the ginseng center of Oregon.

At least one Oregon crop yields at the rate of $6,000 per acre! This crop is ginseng, a medicinal root grown for the vast Chinese trade. Growers near Estacada, Clackamas, and Gresham, are demonstrating that $6,000 is not exceptional. Rather, it is an understatement. The Chinese use ginseng as a cure for brain, nerve and stomach ailments, and the well-to-do Chinese will match ounce for ounce in gold for a ginseng root that strikes his superstitious fancy. Korea produces most of the ginseng for China, while the United States exports more than $2,500,000 worth a year. The slopes around Estacada are decorated with the peculiar flimsy structures that furnish shade to the tender foliage of the ginseng. J. S. Osborne, one of the largest growers in the state, has three acres under cover. He has done much to encourage his neighbors in the culture of this valuable crop.

The fact that ginseng takes five years to grow to market size deters most farmers from cultivating this crop; but once established, with a few beds maturing every year to level out the income, the ginseng farmer finds himself in very fortunate circumstances. Ginseng requires shade, as it withers under the direct rays of the sun. This means that shelters must be built that will cut off at least 25 percent of the sunshine in the Willamette valley conditions. East of the mountains the shelters cut off 75% of the sun. Shelters are made from panels built of lath or 1x4 lumber, which are supported by posts and beams at about seven feet above the beds. These screens may be hinged, and hung down in the winter, or removed entirely to protect them from the wind and snow. The ginseng foliage dies down in the fall, and in the Willamette valley the beds need no protection, no matter how cold the winter. East of the mountains it is customary to cover the beds with straw in winter. Weeds must be kept down, and the plants examined frequently for disease and root rot. For this reason, ginseng is usually planted in beds about eight feet wide to facilitate weeding. When the roots have come to market size, they are dug, trimmed, washed and laid out to dry in simple drying houses. Then they are shipped to New York markets, or handled through a local buyer or wholesaler druggist. The green tops and broken roots were formerly not marketable. Now, an outlet has been found for these wastes through a soft drink factory in Estacada that makes a ginseng drink. This adds a few dollars to the income, and also the seed crop is marketable every fall. Growing methods used in Wisconsin and other middle western states are applicable to eastern Oregon ginseng culture, while a slightly different procedure is found more successful in western Oregon. A prospective grower is advised to visit one of the successful farms before engaging in any expense.

COUNTRY KILLED MEATS STRONGER

PORTLAND, June 20.—(AP)—Market for butter showed no change whatever in price or general appearance for the weekend either on the open trade or on the produce exchange. Receipts appear fairly ample for all needs. Trifle softer trade trend is reflected for eggs locally as a result of the weak situation in California and the failure of the eastern markets to continue improvement.

No Fears Held As to Fate of Glacier Priest

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, June 20.—(AP)—Airway officials here Friday denied the report plans were being made to send planes in search of Father Bernard Hubbard of Santa Clara university, and three California students, who started out a few days ago with him to climb Aniakchak, largest open volcano in the world. Pacific International airway officials, who provided a plane being used by Father Hubbard in his Aniakchak exploration on the Aleutian Peninsula, said they were not uneasy concerning his safety. Hubbard and his young companions started to climb the mountain on foot, after making a flight across the mammoth crater, it was reported from Chignik four days ago.

Pope Continues Restoration of Worship Rights

ROME, June 20.—(AP)—The pope continued Friday to restore in various parts of Italy the right to hold religious processions, and government officials, for the first time talked about special negotiations being conducted with the view of re-establishing accord with the Vatican. The government contends that, in the exchange of notes with the Vatican, it has done its share toward a solution of the controversy by satisfying the Pope's demand for apology with something equivalent to "reassuring words."
