Conditions Here no Cause For Complaint Avers Russell Brooks

This country hasn't much to cry about in the shape and form of hard times; not when comparisons are made with some conditions in European countries. So declares Russell M. Brooks, consul in London who is home to spend two months with his mother, Mrs. Mildred R. Brooks, county treasurer, and other relatives.

He said the wall of depression was noticeable as soon as he got on the train to come across the country, and that it continued, much to his wonderment.

President Hoover's new plan to suspend payments of war debts for one year is a splendid move and will stop considerable agitation in foreign countries for the present, Mr. Brooks believes. It will help Europe on her feet again.

Business depression in this country, though not as bad as situations in foreign nations, will not improve until the rest of the world is relieved of suffering, in his opinion.

Taxes Here Held Comparatively Light Taxes in this country are after all comparatively light. For England 20 per cent of the income is taxed as one item; in France people pay heavily, especially in their bonded wealth, through depreciation of French currency.

Relative to the war debts, Mr. Brooks said there seems to be a general feeling in every European nation involved that if one country will cancel debts, every other one will. In England, the war debts have not increased the tax, and even payments to the United States are covered by monies received from creditor nations, he says.

England's gravest problem is unemployment, with two million persons, at least 800,000 of whom were coal miners, out of work. Unemployment has reached such a point there that the nation has virtually accepted it as an established fact and permanent one, though not to the large extent of the past few years. The British financial system is so sound that in spite of adversities of employment, there is no thought that it will be shaken, the visitor said.

Packing Industry Is Now Built up One move that England has adopted to alleviate unemployment has already found, whether it is realized or not, echoes in this country and even in Salem, Mr. Brooks pointed out. That is establishment and building up of a packing industry. Last year between 60 and 100 million cases of peas, beans, carrots, loganberries, blackberries and strawberries were canned.

Other British industries are being encouraged, including automobile, rayon and radio. Strangely enough, radio production is controlled by the government with a license fee of $2.50 necessary before installation can be made. Few American radios enter the country. Radio programs may not be used to discuss politics and there is no buying

Under the Dome...

GOVERNOR MEIER has a new hat. A ten-gallon covering was presented to him yesterday by a delegation from the Veterans of Foreign Wars at Oregon City who are staging a rodeo there July 4 and 5. The presentation was made by H. R. Beatie, commander. Meier was also invited to attend the big event.

The state highway commission holds its first regular session in Salem today. Two highway bids will be awarded and several county delegations are expected, but the meeting is scheduled to be short. The session will be held in the hearing room on the fifth floor of the state office building.

Among matters believed to be coming up is the reported dismissal of M. A. Lynch from the commission and the appointment of William Hanley of Burns. Future meetings of the commission will also come up for discussion. The move to hold sessions in Salem rather than in Portland has been forwarded.

Yesterday was apparently a day of delegations at the capitol. Another group from the state grange called upon Max Gehlar in an effort to secure cheaper lime than now being furnished by the state penitentiary. Sam Brown, Marion county senator, was with this delegation. Gehlar took the matter under advisement.

C. C. Hulet, state grange master, was here. He stated that at the executive committee meeting of officers from Idaho, Oregon and Washington state granges at Portland this week, a northwest council was appointed to study uniformity and regulations which would benefit the organizations of the three states.

Salem as the state capitol made another move forward yesterday when the state industrial accident commission announced all hearings of cases involving the accident commission, will be held here. Previously these hearings have been held in Portland and other parts of the state.

Many parties waited upon the governor yesterday. Among those at his office were Former State Senator Sam Garland of Lebanon; L. L. Thomas of Marshfield, who once ran for the senate against Charles Hall, and Fred R. Sefton, one of the candidates for state printer. Sefton came here from Portland.

The successful candidate for state printer, however, was Dr. E. C. Hobbs of Corvallis. His appointment by the state printing board, was announced by the governor yesterday. He has been in charge of the college press at the Oregon State college, which position he has held since 1917. He was born in Illinois.

H. S. Bosshard, state printer since 1919, was relieved of his office by the same motion, made by Rufus Holman, that elected Bosshard. Bosshard has been in that office since 1919. His resignation, as well as those of the entire printing staff, was requested on July 1. The new printer has the privilege of reorganizing the entire staff.

Major-General George A. White returned to Salem yesterday instead of going to Fort Lewis. He reported the encampment at Camp Clatsop this year the best the Oregon National Guard has ever held. No accidents were reported.

The condition of Captain Kelly, who underwent an emergency operation Sunday, was reported very serious.

Alger B. Ellis, assistant legislative counsel for the state of California, was a visitor here on his vacation. He made inquiries of methods used in Oregon. Ellis is a former newspaper man, and during his stay here made extensive study of Oregon legislative procedure.

Trout pools are replacing mis-lature golf in California, says Jerry Owen, who returned from a trip there. In Sacramento a pool has been placed on a former mis-lature golf site. Here a person may catch his own fish in a few minutes, take them to the counter, have them cleaned, then pay the high privilege fare, and go home from his office, a successful fisherman as well as having done a day's work.

Newberg Bridge Headers Will be Finished Friday

Laying of 850 feet of headers preparatory to paving approaches on either end of the joint county bridge at Newberg will be completed tomorrow and paving will be started Monday, according to report to the county roadmaster.

Marion county is laying this paving, and other work needed at the bridge will be cared for by Clackamas county by recent agreement.

Weather permitting, paving on the old Champeog road will start Monday. Sand, gravel and asphalt has already been hauled preparatory to work.

Eugene Ronsal of Iron Mountain, Mich., is the first sophomore in 30 years to win awards in three major sports at Marquette.
