FORMER RESIDENTS VISIT SILVERTON

BRUSH CREEK, June 27—When Mr. and Mrs. Orin Williams of Cottage Grove drove to Pendleton recently to attend a convention they brought their two small daughters with them as far as the J. C. Larson home.

The Williams and Larson families were next door neighbors in Silverton a few years ago before the former moved to Cottage Grove and the latter to a farm in the Brush Creek district. The little girls were happy guests at the Larson home during their parents' absence. Mrs. Marit Brendon, mother of Mrs. Williams, came with her daughter and son-in-law as far as Brush Creek, also where she spent a few days with Mrs. C. I. Benson. Mrs. Brendon has not yet returned but is visiting other relatives and friends near here.

Upon their return to Cottage Grove where they have a store and filling station, Mr. and Mrs. Williams were accompanied by Miss Esther Larson of Silverton.

INMATES' KEEP RETURNS EYED

Will not Reach $750,000 as Predicted by Solons, Ben Wing Finds

How much money will be realized by the state of Oregon through a new law providing that relatives and estates of persons confined in the state home for the feeble minded and the state hospitals, shall contribute to the support of these patients, is now being investigated by Ben Wing of Portland.

At the time the law was enacted it was argued by legislators that approximately $750,000 would be returned to the state through this source. This argument was based on the law covering the state tubercular hospital and some other institutions under the jurisdiction of the board of control.

A preliminary investigation by Mr. Wing indicates that this total will be reduced materially, and that the state will not receive more than $200,000 during the biennium. This amount of money is not as needed by the state, and will go far toward reducing the cost of conducting the two institutions.

Law is Elastic With $20 Maximum

The law, as enacted by the legislature, is elastic, and makes it possible for the state to demand a maximum of $20 per month from the estates and relatives of patients at the feeble minded home and the state hospitals. It was made plain, however, that in cases where the relatives of patients are not able to pay the maximum amount, they will be asked to pay a lesser sum. In many cases, where the relatives are without means, no charge will be imposed.

Mr. Wing said the relatives of the patients are widely scattered, and that some time will be required to determine whether they are able to pay. In all cases, the money derived under the law will go into the general fund for payment of the state's current obligations.

A survey of the institutions shows that there are approximately 2500 patients in the state hospitals, while approximately 700 charges are in the state home for the feeble minded. Of the patients receiving treatment in the state hospitals, more than 1800 are in the Salem institution.

Relatives of many of these patients cannot be located. It was said, and in these cases the state will not be able to collect. As soon as Mr. Wing has completed his survey he will file a statement with Governor Meier showing the aggregate amount of money that may be expected biennially. This figure will be based on the present population of the institution.

Law Works Well in Washington
 Reports from the state of Washington where such a law is in operation the return from these collections has been satisfactory and has aided materially in defraying the cost of operating the institutions. Much of the Oregon law was copied from the statute now operative in other states.

Mr. Wing occupies desk room in the state board of control office, and the expense of his activities is limited to his salary and one stenographer. Records showing the names of the patients at the institutions involved in the new law, have been furnished by the respective superintendents. Reports that the new law would cost Marion and various other counties as much as $50,000 a year, are not believed to be based on facts, according to officials who have studied the act and have access to the records of the institutions affected. If these reports were true, the state would realize more than $750,000 during the current biennium. The new law was requested by the state board of control, and also in Governor Meier's message to the 1931 legislature. The late Thomas B. Kay, state treasurer, especially was interested in the passage of the law.

REUNITED AFTER 27 YEARS

A touching reunion, but a happy one, took place on the S. S. Portland at San Francisco when a 60-year-old Russian woman met two of her sons for the first time in 27 years. She had spent years trying to get a passport from the Russian government, saw her husband die of disappointment, and after great suffering arrived in the U. S. to find two grown-up sons who were mere lads when she last saw them. The mother, Mrs. Lazar Lachman, and her two sons, Maurice (left) and Abraham Lachman, are shown above.

Prior to coming to Salem Mr. Wing had lived in Portland for several years. He was recommended by State Treasurer Holman.

BEST BUCKEROO EVER, PROMISE

Molalla Completes Plans For big Event set July 3, 4 and 5

MOLALLA, Ore., June 27—Molalla is rapidly completing plans for the most colorful show in her buckeroo history. Never before has the support of the people in the community been as strong as it is this year. Communities outside of Molalla are lending a hand to put over this year's buckeroo as never before.

A civic enterprise, promoted by a community for a community, it is a small link in the chain of the "On to Oregon" movement, and represents an unselfish effort of the business men of Molalla to advertise not only their own little community but the Willamette valley and Oregon as well. These men work without compensation, donating time and money toward making it a success. Profits made are used for community work.

Livestock Already On the Grounds
 Art Seal of Condon is furnishing the stock for this year's show, consisting of one carload of Mexican Longhorn steers for the bulldogging events, one carload of saddle horses, one carload of bucking horses, one carload of wild horses, calves for the calf roping events, and one carload of stage coach race teams and chariot race teams. The stock is already on the grounds, having arrived Saturday, June 20.

The bucking horses to be used this year are some of the toughest roughest outlaws ever seen at the buckeroo. Topping the list is Sloopie Dick who certainly belies his name. He is the meanest, fiercest piece of horse flesh in captivity. Closely following are the Duchess, Cactus Kate, Deacon, Sky Rocket, Vagabond, and Orphan Annie, a round half dozen of the wildest horses a cowboy ever tried to ride in an arena. Barnacle Bill, Amos n' Andy and a dozen others make up the greatest string of bucking horses that ever tried to make a cowboy pull leather at the Molalla buckeroo.

Only new applicants for operators permits will be required to submit to the examination. The examination includes both physical and mental tests, together with the applicant's ability to handle a car.

More Indians and More Color Promised—The Simeoneo Indians, headed by Chief Powette, will lend more color to the show than they ever have. There will be many more of them this year and they will be featured in the street parades daily in their regalia and rich and colorful trappings as well as in the arena. Saturday night the buckeroo association presented the annual cowboy and Indian dance at which time the Indians were present.

The prize list offered by the association this year is large enough to attract the best talent in the game and already many have written in to sign up for the major events. The following prize list, together with the many other features described will make the best buckeroo Molalla has ever presented.

Approximately 23,000 returns had been received when the time for filing expired at midnight Thursday. More than half that number of returns, which were placed in the mails Thursday, had been received since that time. These returns are being worked out as rapidly as possible.

It had been estimated that approximately 40,000 returns would be received and that the total tax would aggregate $2,500,000. Money derived from these taxes will be applied toward reducing the property levy.
