factor than the truck in which the deputies collected the machines.
"If this raid does not stop use of these machines and devices, this office will proceed further in ridding the county of them," Sheriff Bower declared yesterday afternoon.

"The deputies have instructions to seize machines anywhere they find them; if it can't be done in the daytime, we'll do it at night," he declared. Owners Also May Be Prosecuted

He indicated that many of the machines are owned by men outside the county, and said that he sees no reason why the owner of the machines, as well as proprietor of places where they are found can't be prosecuted.
The seven arrested yesterday were instructed to appear in justice court at 10 o'clock this morning. All equipment taken will be confiscated.

According to the statutes, persons operating, owning or playing such machine are subject to fine of from $10 to $100, and in case of failure to pay fine, jail may be substituted at rate of one day for each $2 of the fine. The law does not provide both fine and jail sentence for this misdemeanor.

Moore, formerly owner of Playmore park, was fined $25 a year or so ago for operating a slot machine.

Chief of Police Minto sent two of his men over the downtown business district yesterday in search of punch boards, following receipt of news that Sheriff Oscar Bower was raiding a number of establishments in the north part of the county.
Minto's men reported that they visited all downtown billiard parlors, confectioneries and restaurants without finding any slot machines, punch boards or games of chance in operation.

Minto said he conducted a similar raid with some success a year ago. He said both city and state laws prohibit the conduct of any games of chance in the city.

power. In view of this opinion, the attorney general did not answer the further query of the governor as to whether the executive had the right to revoke such an order of suspension.

License Insurance
Back to Normal
With the issuance of 150,000 license plates to date, the secretary of state's office Tuesday stated that the percentage of new automobile licenses this year rated favorably with last year. On July 24, 1930, the total number issued was 134,000, that date being the first in which totals were compiled.

The issuance of plates the first week of the new license year was reduced somewhat by the announcement of Governor Julius L. Meier that he would pardon any arrested for not having new plates, the department of state announced, but the purchase the last part of June kept up the high percentage. There are always a few who wait until the end of the first month to secure their plates, the office declared.

To date the governor has had no notices of arrests necessitated.

EDISON'S AIDE FOR 50 YEARS

Rare it is to find the kind of true and devoted service personified by William H. Meadowcroft in his half century of association with Thomas A. Edison as his confidential secretary. This pleasant white-haired man of 77 years has grown old in the trusted employ of the "Wizard of Menlo Park," the while he has been a distinguished developer of decorative electric lamps, the first to experiment with the X-ray and a contributor to developments with electric signs. Rare with employe and employer, too, is the light in which Mr. Meadowcroft holds the noted inventor. "They say no man is a hero to one who is close to him. But this is an exceptional case." These are Mr. Meadowcroft's words and they aptly describe the type of devoted service which he has rendered throughout 50 years of loyalty.

POST-GATTY FLIGHT RECALLS ITS PREDECESSORS

U.S. ARMY 'ROUND WORLD FLIERS'

With Wiley Post's and Harold Gatty's record-smashing globe-girdling flight fresh in the country's mind, it's an appropriate time to glance over their attempts to circumnavigate the world. Ferdinand Magellan perhaps caused the greatest excitement when he announced that he would sail around the earth. And his ship did it, too, although he was robbed of the climax by death in the Philippines. Jules Verne had a lot of fun sending his fictitious character, Phineas Fogg, around the world on a fictitious trip of 80 days. Then Nellie Bly came along as an adventurous newspaper woman and set a mark of 72 days, 6 hours and 11 minutes to shoot at. The U. S. Army round-the-world fliers in 1931 set an enviable record of 14 days, 15 hours' actual flying time in circling the globe during 17 1/2 days. Then along came John Mears and the late Capt. Collier, who flew and shipped around the world in 23 days, 15 hours and 21 minutes. The record, until Post and Gatty smashed it to bits, was held by the Graf Zeppelin, which negotiated the globe in 21 days, 7 hours and 34 minutes. But it won't be long until some ambitious soul will be out trying to lower the mark just established.

ing pardoning or remitting of fines, Meier announced. Other than the arrests in Oregon City, upon which action was expected Tuesday, no other official acts have been reported to the state capital.

The secretary of state received queries from the commissioner of police of Idaho relative to action necessary on old Oregon plates there. The office here replied the custom was to issue a warning, and if not complied with within a few days, to follow with arrest. The secretary of state warned motorists that other states would adhere strictly to the letter of the law, and that the safest procedure was to secure license plates at once, if autoists contemplated entering those states.

Milton Krims, the author of the original story upon which is based "Dude Ranch," the Jack Oakie comedy-smash at Warner Bros. Elsinore today, is a young man who got a taste of his "atmosphere" before he incorporated it into his book—rather than practice what so many authors do, namely, putting into words realism where realism never existed before.

As a reporter for a Los Angeles paper Krims was sent out to cover a government war with smugglers on the Mexican border. In this way he gained eye-witness knowledge of the practices of western outlaws of our modern times.
When he wrote his humorous book, "The Lone Rider of the Mojave," he portrayed faithfully the deeds and diodes of the desperadoes so familiar in fiction and film. But Krims went far here and conceived the idea of setting these characters in the background of a "dude ranch"—a place where vacationing eastern folks spend their hours hoping to see the real life of the real west.

In the story a visiting troupe of traveling actors, headed by Jack Oakie, puts on some scenes in the vicinity of a dude ranch operated by Stuart Erwin. The guests are much inspired by the thrilling bravado of the two-gun Oakie, and the bluff business for Erwin until a group of real outlaws arrive on the scene fresh from a bank holdup in the nearest town. That's where the plot thickens and double-thickens, with some of the amusing situations thrown in for laughs.

Japanese police in Korea killed and wounded many Koreans in repelling mobs which attacked police station in Seoul and suburbs to seize hundreds of Chinese who had taken refuge there from rioters.

Fearing the Koreans' outbreak against Chinese might be diverted into an attack upon Japanese rule over Korea, the Japanese authorities placed soldiers about army magazines and store houses to prevent arms being seized.

ADVENTURE TRAIL OF WALKER FADES

Soldier, Editor, Rancher, Humanitarian Dies at Home in Brooklyn

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP)—John Brisbane Walker, 34, whose life led him over trails from soldiering in China to pioneering in the new west, died today at his Brooklyn home.

His interests at the height of his activities a score of years ago included control of steam automobile patents, and editorship of Cosmopolitan magazine. He was rancher, lecturer, road builder, humanitarian, politician and a farmer.

Walker was born in Pennsylvania. Educated at Georgetown College, Washington and West Point, he went to the Orient and for two years served in the Chinese army. In 1870 he went into the iron manufacturing business in West Virginia. Three years later, when he thought he had won a fortune of $500,000 the great panic left him penniless.

Walker then turned to journalism. His first efforts were for the Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette, a series of articles on business topics. He later was managing editor of the Pittsburgh Telegraph and editor of the Washington Daily Chronicle.

Built Up Fading National Magazine He introduced alfalfa on a 1,600-acre farm near Denver as his initial venture in farming. For tracts in the Platte river valley, which he devised a means of reclaiming, railroads paid him a reputed profit of $900,000 on a $100,000 investment.

He paid $350,000 for Cosmopolitan magazine, then in need of new blood, and quickly jumped its circulation from 16,000 to 151,000, with William Dean Howells as his literary adviser. He later sold it to William Randolph Hearst. He was the first president of the Automobile Manufacturers' association, and the organizer of a company to construct cheap motor highways, whose operations had an effect on the growth of the motor industry.

During the World war as chairman of the national convention of Friends of Peace and Justice at Chicago, he headed an organization of German-American societies.
