CAUSE OF SUMMER DISEASES OUTLINED

Prevalence of Insects one Reason; Heat Promotes Growth of Germs

Why certain diseases increase during the summer and how their seasonal appearance may be prevented is the subject of a bulletin just released by the state board of health. It discusses the cause and prevention of these diseases as follows:

"Diseases that can be prevented by proper environmental sanitation show a rapid rise during the summer months. One reason for this is the abundance of insects that carry certain disease germs. Another is that the temperature, moisture and weather conditions are favorable to the growth of certain disease germs. A third factor, of most importance to vacationists, is that many persons leave the well situated urban areas of the country for rural sections where a lesser degree of sanitation has been reached.

"When selecting a summer home or camp in the 'wilds,' there are a number of matters to be considered in order that a public supply which is under the supervision of the state department of public health, at least three samples of water from the supply, taken under various weather conditions, should be sent to the state department of public health laboratory or to a private laboratory for examination. However, these samples should not be taken until the water supply has been protected from surface pollution. If the first sample shows good water, another should be taken later and then a third check. One of these three should be taken a short while after a rain.

"One bad sample is not indicative of impure water, as water may have been contaminated in collecting the sample. If the water supply is found to be unsafe, the sanitary officer, if the supply is located in a county with a county health unit, should be consulted regarding the best means of protecting the water supply. If not, a competent sanitary engineer might be consulted. Much helpful information concerning the selection of private water supplies may be obtained from the state department of public health literature.

"2. Proper disposal of wastes, both for the premises and on adjoining property, is of primary importance. Human wastes should be disposed of either by a public sewer system, a septic tank or an approved sanitary privy. Information concerning these and literature regarding their construction can be obtained from any full-time county health department or from the state department of public health.

"3. The house should be properly screened with 16-mesh galvanized wire. Proper screening will keep disease carrying insects away from inhabitants and out of the house, provided the screens are used properly. This item is of special importance in sections where malaria carrying mosquitoes are found.

"4. Proper ventilation of rooms, especially sleeping quarters, is a consideration in any home. These are but a few of the many factors that should be given serious consideration in selecting a summer home. There are a number of others, but good common sense is always a good guide.

County Paving Plant Working At Rapid Rate

The Marion county paving plant at St. Paul is pounding out hot stuff for market roads at the rate of 50 to 60 loads daily. Judge John Siegmund reported yesterday after an inspection tour made in the St. Paul district. The market road into St. Paul is being paved which will complete a loop with the present paved market road out of Woodburn into St. Paul.

About three miles of paving will be laid there this summer, two of which are already done. Headers for the remaining work will soon be down but it will be several weeks, in the judge's opinion, before the pavement is all laid. The county owns and operates its own plant.

BROTHERS REUNITED AFTER FIFTY YEARS

The Iowa state picnic held in Seattle recently gave George W. Fisher a touch of home-sickness which resulted in a reunion with his two brothers whom he had not seen for 50 years. Stirred when he talked with someone from near home at the picnic, he wrote a letter to the postmaster in Atlantic, Ia., who forwarded it to Salem, where his brothers, Fred, 75, and Henry, 74, were living.

Upon receiving a reply from his relatives he lost no time in coming to Salem, where in addition to his brothers he met a niece, Faye Ann Sherman. Mr. Fisher left his home in Atlantic at the age of 15 with $12 in his pocket. Since that time he had not been in communication with his relatives.
