Good Lord Bill

If you ever expect to be a golfer you simply gotta keep one foot on the ground when you go to hit that ball.

There's a certain guy around this town

that we'd give six-bits to beat playin' golf, so we hired us a feller that knows golf goin', and comin', figurin' of course that a couple of lessons would be about all we'd need, bein' smart like we are.

But after that little experience of gittin' both our feet off the ground at the same time just about convinced us that store keepin' is more in our line than playin' golf. As a matter of fact, if we remember correctly, we've been told that a couple of times already. The longest distance we ever hit one of those balls was 350 yards—hundred yards up, the same distance down of course makes 200 yards, doesn't it? Yeah, it does, but where did the other 150 yards come in? That's the question. Oh, heck, we remember now, 50 yards ahead and 100 yards off to one side, puttin' most of the accent on the off side. Even at that we know some fellows that would be tickled pink if they looked as purty as we do standin' there waitin' to slam that ball to parts unknown. Our stance is the envy of everyone that spies us sneaking up to the tea. Maybe they don't spell golf tee like the tea we drink, but they're both some patent. One or the other of 'em keeps us awake quite a considerable.

And now if this isn't about the best grocery ad anyone has seen in recent years we're a worse ad writer than we are a golfer, and we figure we're no slouch at either one of 'em. In golf we don't stay on the fairway and in writin' grocery ads we don't always keep on the subject at hand. Yours Truly.

Busick's AT THE Market NOT A CHAIN STORE

"My, my. You folks sure have a lotta nice things here in your store. Never saw so much nice fruit or such a nice lot of fresh vegetables. Why, where we come from you wouldn't see that amount on display in the whole town." That's what a lady said to one of our boys the other day.

We've been asked a number of times about what bread made in Salem do we consider the best, and almost invariably we answer Busick's Oven-Fresh.

Of course now, makin' it fresh every day in our own shop may influence us just a wee bit, but our customers have told us that there's no other bread in gun-shootin' distance of it for a nickel a loaf.

Now we'd like to do a little braggin', but darn it, every one in this whole country would catch us at it. We know that because our customers know about as much about the Market as we do, and more'n that we don't like to hear someone braggin' all the time about havin' the best store in town, even if we do have. Do you?
