Engineers say job Will Defer Wast of Valued Lands Near Scio

SCIO, Aug. 25—Bids for re-vestment work at Sanderson bridge spanning the South Santiam river a few miles southwest of Scio are to be opened at 10 a. m. August 29, by the county court of Linn county, according to recent decision of that body.

Work is to start as early as practicable in order that the bridge and farm lands adjacent thereto may be protected from the ravages of high waters during the coming winter and spring, the court announces.

Petitions bearing names of many farmers and others residing in the vicinity of the threatened bridge have been circulated, requesting the county court to take action to maintain a bridge at the site of the old Sanderson structure. The petitioners contend that many taxpayers and others are vitally interested in a bridge at that point, as it links that section with the western part of Linn county.

Engineers and experienced bridge men have advised the county court of the feasibility of the re-vestment remedy as a means at least of deferring devastation of valuable lands in proximity of the bridge and the ultimate elimination of the bridge as a public utility.

Salvage Not Favored
The proposal of Marion county to salvage the Jefferson bridge for use where the Sanderson bridge now stands seems not to have been considered favorably by the Linn county court. Suggestions looking to the utilization of the railroad bridge which spans the river also were rejected for the assigned reason that results would not justify the expense of such a plan.

It is considered by experienced men that the re-vestment plan will at best prove only of temporary value, but it is believed to be the most feasible plan at present.

ROYALIST HOPES RAISED

COUNT KAROLYI

ARCHDUKE OTTO

BETHLEN

Monarchists, never tiring of trying to place their royal patrons back on the thrones most of them left in haste, have received new hope that a Hapsburg, represented by Archduke or "King" Otto, will once more wield a sceptre over Hungary. The resignation of Count Stefan Bethlen as Premier of Hungary after ten years' service under Regent Admiral Horthy and the appointment of Count Julius Karolyi, a strict legitimist, as his successor, is the event which royalists feel may give them a long-awaited opportunity to return Otto to the throne of his forefathers. Otto, handsome 18-year-old son of the late Emperor Charles, has been expelled far by his ambitious mother, Zita of Bourbon-Parma, who has kept close watch for every chance to place the young prince back into a position of power. Maybe his and her time has dawned.

Wire Down!

Jots From Some of the Hop-yards Along the River Road

Pickers will invade the large Roberts' yards near Roberts station, a few miles south of town, Thursday morning. This will be the first work done in this yard, and will be on the early crop.

Fifteen families were already camped in the Roberts' yard yesterday, awaiting the first call of "wire down!", theme song of every hop picker. A special train from Portland is said to be chartered to bring in hop help for this yard, which will see a throng of between 1,400 and 1,500 persons pulling away at the trellised vines.

Donald McCarthy, hop "king" near Oreville, is doing his bit to help along those who are absolutely down and out. He has purchased and had put up 40 new tents for use of campers who investigation shows to be unable to furnish their own tents.

Although the earlies have been harvested at the McCarthy yard, fully half of the pickers from distant points are staying at the camp until the late pick starts, about September 1. But there's plenty of amusement for them, what with special events (even to boxing matches) arranged for each evening. No, it's not dull.

Two yards near this side of the river will start work on the late September 1. One is the Chittenden yard, the other the Hillbrand.

Other prune men plan to start picking Friday or Saturday of this week. This will start the drying about Sunday or Monday. The average run this year for the driers will vary from two to three weeks with a few longer.

The fact that the hops and prunes are being harvested at the same time this year will, give employment to many who would not otherwise secure work. With the start of this work the unemployment situation is relieved around Dallas for a short time.
