Walsh went to Coos Bay three years ago after graduating in law at Williams university. Business is quiet in Coos Bay due to depression in the lumber industry, Walsh reported.

LOCAL PRODUCT USE IS URGED BY LABOR

"Use only local products" is urged upon "all members of organized labor, their friends, and anyone interested in the progress and prosperity of Salem, in a communication being sent out to the merchants and buying public" by a special committee of the Salem Trades and Labor council. The committee, which was appointed last Tuesday night by F. J. Boardman to combat the importation of products which are now manufactured here, consists of Clarence Townsend, Frank Marshall and Chris Hampshire.

"A condition exists in Salem which we believe the people of Salem are entitled to know. It is a condition of great injustice on our local industries and thereby preventing from 20 to 30 families from being given employment, through the fact that outside workers are preparing 12,000 loaves of bread, worth of dry goods and hundreds of pounds of butter each week which are being purchased by the people of this community reads the statement of the committee. "The Salem-Trades and Labor Council is going to exert every possible effort in an attempt to correct this condition. The letter declares that in periods of unemployment each community has a sacred service to perform in taking care of its own people and that refusing to purchase imported products will result in more work here which will support at least 20 to 30 families.

LARGE ACREAGE OF TIMBER IS BURNED

Approximately 100,000 acres of private lands under the state forestry department were burned by forest fires this season, according to an announcement made Saturday by Lynn Cronemiller, state forester.

The victim was Eugene Fields of Medford. There were several deaths in the national forests due to fires, but these were not reported to the state forestry department.

A report received here Saturday indicated that a fire had broken out on the Siletz river, seven miles south of the town of Siletz in Lincoln county. A large crew of men was fighting this blaze. Several small fires reported in different sections of the state were said to be under control.

FRAUD CLAIMED IN INSURANCE PLAINT

Alleging it was bilked of a $750 accident insurance claim, the Union Automobile Insurance company has filed a complaint in court against M. M. May, "J. E. Dole and other aliases." The claim was falsely made and J. E. Dole never existed, the plaintiff alleges, and lists 10 different names which it maintains May has appeared under at diverse times. May's alleged activities constitute an insurance racket new to court records here. According to the plaintiffs, May in November, 1929, took out an insurance policy with the company. In the following January, the complaint charges, the defendant represented to the company that one J. E. Dole had received a personal injury due to the negligence of the defendant, May, who said he had caused the injuries to Dole in a collision at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. The insurance company states that it investigated the claim, interrogated Dole and as a result paid him $750.

The complaint further alleges that May's and Dole's statements were false and that they were one and the same individual. Consequently, the company seeks to recover the $750 it alleges it had paid under the policy, which it claims was the expense of the investigation.

FRANCHISE MOVES ARE NOT OPPOSED

Negotiations between the city of Portland and the streetcar company, looking to the adoption of a satisfactory operating franchise, are in no way embarrassing to C. M. Thomas, public utilities commissioner, because of the streetcar franchise now being tried in the United States district court. This was announced by Thomas Saturday, after his attention had been called to newspaper stories that certain members of the Portland city council had considered it inadvisable to proceed with franchise negotiations until the fare case was completed.

"There is nothing in these negotiations that will embarrass my department," Thomas said. "On the contrary I am gratified to receive the information that the Portland city council and streetcar company are attempting to reach a public meeting Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock in the auditorium of the First Methodist church here. He is reputed to be a brilliant orator and one of the foremost speakers on prohibition in the United States.

DISTRICT TO HOLD MEETING TUESDAY

The bondholders committee of the Warm Springs irrigation district and state reclamation commission will meet here Tuesday for the purpose of taking final action in connection with the reorganization agreement regarding the Warm Springs project. The district is located in Malheur county and contains approximately 18,000 acres of irrigable land. The original bonds of the district aggregated $1,550,000. Under the reorganization plan the holders of these securities have agreed to accept $400,000 in cash and refunding bonds totaling $450,000. The cash already has been made ready for distribution, while the courts have passed on the legality of the refunding bonds. Reorganization of the Warm Springs irrigation district was made possible under an act of the 1927 legislature.

HONOLULU has nothing on Oregon. A recent dispatch reports a horse has been found there with a mustache. Well, so has Oregon a Hoss with a mustache. Anyone wishing to verify the statement need but call at the secretary of state's office before the middle of this week and the custodian of the state capitol grounds will prove it.

Halbert E. Hoss, secretary of state, who has been enjoying what he called a lazy vacation at the beach, returned yesterday and really, the mustache doesn't look at all bad on him. In fact Hal looks good and he says if the mustache gets a little longer and the light is right, it takes on a reddish hue. He says the adornment will not be permanent.

With that explanation the mystery of why Hoss officiated at the Red-head affair at Taft last Sunday has been cleared-up. Hoss has nothing to say on the affair, however, so perhaps the subject should be considered closed. Mrs. Hoss though may have something to add.

Speaking of horses reminds that the governor failed to appoint Hoss as a member of the horse show advisory committee for the state fair. However, Salem is well represented on that committee, even though it is just another advisory committee. E. F. Slade, T. A. Livesey and H. R. Crawford are on the committee.

Activities are opening up at the fairgrounds, and for the next month that site at the edge of Salem will be a busy place. The new canal will be completed some time next week, the painting of the buildings is progressing, and the new horse barns are fast going up. There will follow exhibits and concessions, to be ready for the big event.

UPSHAW TO SPEAK HERE ON TUESDAY

Sponsored by local prohibition organizations, Will D. Uphaw, crusader for observance of the 18th amendment, and for congressmen from Georgia, is to address a public meeting Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock in the auditorium of the First Methodist church here. He is reputed to be a brilliant orator and one of the foremost speakers on prohibition in the United States.

Of Mr. Uphaw, when he made an address before congress and President Harding's governor's conference, the Literary Digest said, "To Congressman Uphaw belongs the credit of awakening the conscience of America on sober officials." In this speech he called upon the president to "issue a ringing Christmas proclamation calling every citizen, and especially for the common good." Uphaw is said to be a fiery speaker of wide experience.

TWO DIVORCES ARE GRANTED SATURDAY

Judge L. H. McMahan granted the benefits of divorce yesterday to two estranged couples. Freta M. Fisher, married June 6, 1920 to Leon E. Fisher in Polk county, received decree of divorce, custody of their boy and girl and $30 a month support money. She told the court Fisher was mean, cruel, inhuman and often was drunk. Francis G. Folger, married August 5, 1927, to Roger G. Folger, received back her name of Frances Gay Chance. She has been separated from Folger for four years. Shortly after marriage he told her, Mrs. Folger alleged, that he did not wish to live with her. His mother joined in the attack, Mrs. Folger claimed.

LAKE AUTHOR

Stanton C. Lapham, Marshfield, author, whose book, "The Enchanted Lake," published by The Statesman and on sale in Salem and throughout the state, describes the wonders and mysteries of Crater Lake. The book contains 156 pages, 21 full page illustrations and is very desirable for gifts.

'ENCHANTED LAKE' BOOK GETS PRAISE

Favorable Comment Comes From Many Sources; Sales Going Well

Press praise for "The Enchanted Lake," new and only book devoted entirely to Crater Lake, Oregon's own world wonder of nature, has been forthcoming in different newspapers of the state in the last fortnight, following publication of the book by Stanton C. Lapham, Oregon author. Sales of the book, which is published by The Statesman, have been reported as quite favorable considering the limited time the work has been out. In Salem the book is on sale at all bookstores and at The Statesman.

"In 'The Enchanted Lake,' a book just off the press, Stanton C. Lapham has assembled an array of fact and legend that constitutes a valuable addition to the scanty literature of Crater Lake," writes Mrs. Lois P. Myers of the News-Telegram. "Mr. Lapham wisely makes no attempt at the writing. His opening sentence admits the inadequacy of words to express the beauty and mystery that abide in this gem-studded chalice lifting its blue liltation to the sky."

Thoroughness of Research Lauded
Of the book, Robert W. Sawyer of the Bend Bulletin says: "The book is about the scenic wonder, its history, Indian legends relating to it, the geology of the park area, a record of the flora and fauna found in the park. An account of the origin of many of the place names. It is a guide book to a super attraction of the Oregon country. Quite properly much space is given in the book to the part played by Will C. Steel in securing the designation of the region around the lake as a national park and his connection with the park and its progress ever since."

Writes David Piper in The Oregonian: "Much remained to be done from the standpoint of gathering and correlating all known facts and legends. This Stanton C. Lapham of Marshfield has accomplished in a strikingly thorough manner. The 21 photographs which are used were not retouched, and from these the readers who have not visited the lake will get some idea of its

TOMMY BLUE IS DEAD

At Ripe Old Age of 21; Clever Cat Mourned

TRICKS WERE DELIGHT

Tommy Blue is dead. His long life of 21 years is ended. For you see, Tommy is a cat, and for longevity the heralded Texas cat had nothing on him. Tommy's god-parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. F. Hammer who live on a farm between North Santiam and West Stayton, accorded Tommy Blue a fitting burial recently, and now no longer do the children of the neighborhood thrill at the tricks performed by Tommy, a large blue Maltese weighing 14 pounds.

One day no long ago Tommy ate a good meal of beefsteak; he added to that a rat which he had caught. Then he took himself to the barn to die. Who can say he was not thoughtful of his mistress whom he first knew at the magic and those who have visited it will be carried back in memory. The book is well written, and with a feeling of reverence for the subject. Those who already love the lake and those who expect to visit it will find the book valuable."

VISITORS PRAISE SALEM'S CLIMATE

"Beautiful and serene." "Soft and lovable." Thus do visitors to Salem describe the weather here in the summer according to reports filed with the Salem chamber of commerce. Salem's weather record for July was well-nigh ideal, figures released yesterday in the weekly chamber of commerce bulletin reveal.

Twenty-three of the 31 days in July were totally clear. Partly cloudy days numbered five and cloudy days totalled three. There was no rainfall during the month. The mean day temperatures was 85 and the mean night temperature 48.
