Tot is Stowaway—That there can be stowaways on land as well as upon the sea and in the air was proven yesterday morning when Alvin Madsen, former Oregon State college wrestling champion, who lives in the Spring Valley district, about eight miles north of Salem on the Wallace road, arrived in Salem. He happened to look in the back of his car and discovered his three-year-old son, Robert, sound asleep. The little fellow, plan to accompany his daddy had been refused but he went along anyway. Madsen immediately telephoned his wife to inform her of her son's whereabouts, so that she would not think him lost.

HERROLD WINS SUIT OVER PAVING PLANT

L. O. Herrold, Salem contractor, has been successful in a lawsuit in Jackson county concerning his ownership of a $40,000 paving plant and $15,000 in cash, according to advice received here yesterday. Herrold was sued by C. A. Hartley who claimed he was a partner with Herrold in his paving enterprise and was thus entitled to a proportionate share of the profits.

Herrold contended Hartley was simply an employee, receiving a $200 a month salary and a bonus which was to be determined by Herrold. The court sustained Herrold. Hartley failed to offer evidence other than his own statement to support his contention.

Under the Dome . . . Occurrences and Grievances at the center of Oregon's state government

DRYS have been mentioned at times in this column, so in order to keep the balance a little moist reading will be injected by discussion of the prohibition department's annual report for last year, just received. The county failed to lead in any phase of liquor law violations—which in itself is not so wet.

Marion county's rating in the annual report places her 18th in the list of 88 in the number of persons arrested, with 66; tied with Lane county for sixth in number of stills seized with 18; ninth in number of days sentences in the county jail with 1020; 12th in total fines assessed, with $8735.

The county rated low in the number of gallons of mash destroyed, or 234 with 570 gallons; 14th in gallons moonshine destroyed, or 116 gallons; but up to fourth place in gallons wine destroyed, or 241 gallons; 18th in gallons beer destroyed, or 38 gallons. Only one gallon of alcohol was destroyed, rating the county in a tie with Harney county for 14th place. No cars were confiscated nor men sent to the penitentiary on liquor counts.

The next highway meeting, tentatively set for Thursday, may be held in Portland, it was indicated here yesterday. It is doubtful whether any advance publicity will be given on the meeting as the commission stated its desire to clean up much unfinished business. An advertised meeting, members say, brings in a lot of delegations to take up the time.

Abraham Lincoln wrote checks in his day, and at that time some form of check protector was used. A photostatic copy of a check written by Lincoln August 11, 1863, was sent Rufus Holman by Jefferson Myers. The check, made on Riggs & company in Washington, was written out to a "colored man with one leg." It was for five dollars.

The state treasurer was absent the latter part of this week from his office. He attended the Western Douglas county fair at Reedport, and also visited points in Coos and Curry counties. He was speaker of the day at the Reedport affair.

Jerry Owen of the bonus commission says he will be at home in his new quarters as soon as they get properly settled. Mrs. Owen and their daughter have joined Jerry here, and are now living on Kingwood drive in West Salem. William Einzig, of the purchasing department, said he would have his family here before very long.

The approaching football season holds intense interest for one member of the staff at the state hospital, Miss Gerlinger of Dallas, who it was

Waitress Loses Driving License

Margaret Graham, local waitress who was arrested September 6 for reckless driving, was fined $35 and her driver's license was suspended for one year when Justice of the Peace Hayden yesterday afternoon found her guilty as charged. For 24 hours Hayden had under considerable an ordinance providing that South Winter street be a "slow" street. Counsel for Miss Graham insisted that this street's designation made Natha J. Swain, driver of the car which Miss Graham hit, negligence.

Saturday morning from 8:30 to 10 o'clock, regular toxoid and vaccination clinic.

Chalmer George Works on Royal Teeth is Report

One of the two New York dentists who worked on the King of Siam's teeth while that dignity was in this country was Dr. Chalmer George, until two years ago a Salem resident. George wrote to relatives here of the king's visit to the offices of him and his partner.
Only the two dentists were permitted in the office while the king was a patient, and as the king made the ride up on the elevator all other visitors to the building were excluded from the lift.
