

SCHOOL STAFFS GETTING READY

"Big Push" to Arrange Last Details set This Week; September 21 Date

ter of getting three high schools and nine grade schools into motion appears to be a herculean task.

Little change is expected in the school boundaries over those of last year. Transfer of teachers from one building to another will be at a minimum.

Numbers of new students continue to come to the high school principals' office and the offices of the other schools to get registered. Fred Wolf, high school principal, expects to be able to announce the schedules for the school buses this week. R. W. Tavenner, secondary school supervisor and assistant high school principal, is directing the organization work for the three secondary schools.

All of the newly purchased textbooks will be catalogued and covers put on them by the opening day of school. Covers already named and numbered, for the old books donated the pupils' parents, will be put on by the students themselves in their classes next week. This plan, it is said, will both save the administrative staff a great deal of time and give the students first-hand acquaintance with care of the books.

LIVESTOCK SPACE AT FAIR ALL GONE

Pomona will close its horse show two days earlier than usual to allow prominent eastern exhibitors to reach Salem by their special train on Saturday, September 26, the opening day, to permit them to rest their horses and themselves for the opening horse show Monday night.

The Rodeo-Bucaroo program for the first three days of the fair will have several world's champions from the rodeo circuit on the program, Clarence Warren of Concord, the director, said Saturday. He said besides Frank E. Studnicka of Stayton, world's champion bucking horse rider, there will be Lloyd Saunders of Powder River fame, all-around cowboy champion for several years; Rose Smith of Pendleton, world's champion woman trick rider; Tex Cover, fancy trick rider; Reba Roberts of California, trick rider and roper; and the Pendleton Round-Up cowboy clown, "Peanuts" Poseninger.

Mackie to Speak At Monday Meet

J. E. Mackie, structural engineer for the National Lumber Manufacturers' association of Washington, D. C., will be the speaker at the Salem Building congress meeting Monday night at 8:00 o'clock in the chamber of commerce rooms. His topic will be "Why We Have a Building Code." This is a meeting for the entire membership and others interested in building problems are invited to attend.

LONDON ALARMED BY 21 MURDERS

LORD BYNG OF VIMY SCOTLAND YARD.

What would be cause for surprised satisfaction in the United States, New York, let's say, in particular, is supplying vehicles in the news of London's law enforcement officials. The cause of the disquietude in London is due to the fact that 21 murders were committed in 1930 in the area supervised by the London metropolitan police. That area has nearly 12,000,000 people. In New York, for the same year, 421 homicides were committed. And yet the English fret. Where all but one of the 21 slayers in London were either arrested and punished or committed suicide, the 421 murderers in New York escaped almost as a body. Out of that stupendous number, 280 arrests were made and less than 20 per cent of those resulted in convictions. Lord Byng of Vimy, London's Commissioner of Police, decries the increase in English crime, but he should look across the Atlantic if he wishes to see the underworld at its best—or worst.

Mr. Edwards was nine years in Los Angeles.

Adventists Plan Project to Help Relief Program

Making charity interest an active thing rather than something to be talked about, the Seventh Day Adventist church members to the number of about 100 will go to the Clyde Boise farm today where they will pick prunes which will be brought to Hunt Bros. cannery where they will be processed. When processed and ready for consumption they will be placed in the homes of needy people, according to Rev. J. M.

Water Firm Here IS NOT AFFECTED

The financial status of the Federal Water Service company, holding company for the common stock of the Oregon-Washington Water company and allied concerns, is unaffected by the recent receivership of the Tri-Utilities company in New York save for a "sympathetic decline" in security prices occasioned by the news.

Water Firm Here IS NOT AFFECTED

Word to this effect was received in Salem this weekend from E. C. Elliott, president of the Oregon-Washington Water company. Elliott arrives in Salem on Tuesday for a conference with J. T. Delaney, northwest manager of the Oregon-Washington Water company. Elliott's visit is in no way connected with Tri-Utilities' status.

Word from Christopher Chenery, president of Federated received here last week explains that only Class B common stock of Federated is held by the Tri-Utilities people. Earnings on Federal stock have continued reasonably good and ample to meet debt interest and preferred stock claims throughout the last year, Chenery stated.

FINAL PHOTOGRAPH CONTEST DAY SET

Next Wednesday, September 17, has been set by Miss Doris Bacon, manager of the Kennell-Elliott studio here, as the final photograph day in the free contest being staged jointly by that studio and The Oregon Statesman. The following Saturday, September 19, will be the last day for submitting proofs.

Improvement Upon British Dole System Talked at Carpenters' Meet

labor, Leo Flynn, Seattle, president of the Washington Federation of Labor, pointed out the importance of a cash and door manufacturing plant in Tacoma which daily put out 30,000 doors, when the demand was for only 10,000 per day.

Ben T. Osborne, Portland, executive secretary of the Oregon State Federation of Labor, whose convention will begin here tomorrow, addressed the carpenters.

One speaker at the carpenters' meeting declared that business and professional men are now meeting in the so-called depression the same conditions which organized labor has had to contend with for years in the form of the unemployment problem.

The carpenters' convention was concluded with election and installation of state officers.

F. H. Allen, Portland, was re-elected president of the state council; G. H. Baker, Bend, was selected as vice-president, and David Duff, Portland, was re-elected secretary-treasurer. District representatives elected are as follows: L. Peterson, Astoria; Edward Kammerer, Corvallis; C. D. Long, Klamath Falls; Soules, Portland; and Alex Manning, Pendleton.

HOGG PASS RUMOR IS REVIVED AGAIN

ed with railroad invasion every now and then during the past 10 years. That long ago, Colonel Hogg surveyed a cross-state line by way of the Pass and actually did some construction work before the Hogg survey was abandoned. A few rails and fishplates are still rusting in the mountains from his venture.

Word that a railroad through Hogg pass to link eastern and western Oregon brings especial interest to Salem people who since the days the Oregon Electric was first projected by the Hill lines have looked for the ultimate connection of this line with a cross-Cascades service which would connect the Hill interests with a line leading to California.

When the Oregon Electric started its extension from Lebanon east to Cascadia it was free predicted that the line would soon be extended over the mountains, into Bend, there joining the soon-to-be completed Great Northern extension through Klamath Falls into California. In northern California the Western Pacific will be met and the Hill lines will have made their long sought connection with California.

When and if this extension takes place, it means two north and south California, Oregon and Washington railroad lines through western Oregon.

buildings which will include administration headquarters, heating plant, kitchen and dining room, hospital and the quarters for the men which will be numerous small houses instead of one large dormitory as soldiers' homes used to be built. Then architects will make plans. Bids will be called for and after bids are awarded a period of time will lapse before contractors will be forced to begin work.

Hawley denied reports that a million dollars was the limit of money to be spent at Roseburg. "Congress is only allowed to appropriate funds to meet during the year following the appropriation," Mr. Hawley stated. "We felt that one million dollars was all which could be spent by the end of 1932 at Roseburg. The law provides that appropriations up to two million dollars can be levied. If the capacity of the Roseburg home is soon utilized, authority is already available with which to go to the appropriations committee—the ways and means group in the house—and ask for additional funds."

To the congressman's knowledge the veterans' hospitalization board in Washington last week made no other recommendation to the president than the one for Roseburg. He said neither President Hoover or General Hines had notified him of any disagreement between the chief executive and the board on the matter of location.

Mr. Hawley said he thought any press reports to this effect were issued solely to support Eugene lobbyists claims to fees. Hawley said he had not communicated with Mr. Hoover regarding the home since he sent an extended message a few weeks ago pointing out sentiment in Oregon the value of the Roseburg site and the necessity of holding for Roseburg as had previously been decided upon.

"It was Roseburg who originated the home idea and it was Roseburg which had support when the appropriation bill was up on the floor of congress," Hawley declared. "When I went to the White House in 1930 to see if the bill would be signed, and when I secured Mr. Hoover's agreement, I talked only Roseburg and we agreed to Roseburg. The bill was changed only when precedent of other bills made it necessary. I felt all the while that I must stay with my promise. Whatever political consequence it has I am willing to take.
