Infantile Paralysis Reported—A case of infantile paralysis, the first in Marion county this year, was reported to the county health department Saturday from the district above Scotts Mills. The patient, a 17-year old boy, who has been ill for a week, seems to have only a very mild case of the disease. Health authorities believe he contracted the disease from some visitor in the home. No further cases are expected to spread from that at Scotts Mills, according to Dr. Vernon A. Douglas, county health officer, because the disease usually occurs as an epidemic in the summer and scattered cases are rare.

Producers Cannery will resume packing prunes Tuesday morning, Sept. 22. All workers employed in early part of pack may return.

Dr. Douglas Named Chairman—Dr. Vernon A. Douglas, county health officer, will represent the Willamette chapter as "safety first" chairman at a regional meeting of the American Red Cross which will be held at the Portland hotel, Portland, next Friday. Dr. Douglas is a former Salem resident, and director of the Commonwealth demonstration of child health in Marion county. He will be the principal speaker at the meeting. He was one of the Red Cross directors in the drought relief work.

He made it a practice, she declared, to "sit as close as he could possibly get" to her in these conferences, and on one occasion had placed his hand on her leg above the knee and under her dress. Byers, she charged, had patted her on the knee on several occasions and had repeatedly placed his hand over hers.

Byers on the stand in his own defense admitted that he might have "tapped" the knee of his teachers occasionally but that if so it had been done unconsciously and with no immoral motive.

Prof. L. V. Durham of the Salem schools, Mrs. B. L. Church of the Sutherland school board, all testified to the good reputation of Byers who has been a teacher for more than 22 years.

ENGINEERS REPORT ON SHORTCUT PLAN

The report is based on a reconnaissance made by H. N. Hackett, reconnaissance engineer for the highway department and is transmitted to Roy A. Klein, state highway engineer, in a letter from W. D. Clarke, division engineer in charge of construction work in the northwest section of the state.

Admitting that the proposed Scappoose-Vernonia route has some advantages over the Wolf Creek-Hamlet route, principal among which would be the more direct connection with the Longview bridge across the Columbia river highway, for the better accommodation of north and south traffic, this feature is more than offset in the opinion of Clarke by advantages which are presented by the Wolf creek route. In any event the new reconnaissance "definitely eliminates the Vernonia-Hamlet route from further consideration."

"As between the Wolf creek route and the original Vernonia-Hamlet route of which it is a modification, the two elements of primary importance—length and cost of construction—appear to leave no question as to the choice," Engineer Clarke declares in his report to Klein. "The Wolf Creek-Hamlet route is so far superior in these respects as to definitely eliminate the Vernonia-Hamlet route from further consideration."

The New... Washington Wood Burning Super-Furnace

Scientifically Built
To Standard
Specifications
For Double
Heat Capacity

DOUBLE RIBBED
LONG LIFE CAST IRON
HEATING UNIT

The heating unit is extra heavy, extra thick, and double ribbed inside and outside, and further strengthened to prevent warping or cracking. It has been purposely built extra heavy to withstand heavy firing and hard service.

Economy of operation as well as long and satisfactory heating service is insured on account of the extra heavy double ribbed long life cast iron heating unit. It is designed with the maximum amount of radiation surface so as to insure maximum of heat in the home with minimum fuel burned. This scientific construction insures against fuel waste. The cast iron fins both inside and outside of the heating unit induct the heat more rapidly from the fire and provide more rubbing surface for the air to brush off the heat. The heat inside of the furnace is intercepted by the larger radiating surface, and utilized for heating the house instead of passing up the chimney as it does in circulating heaters which do not have heating units built in accordance with the standard code.

Satisfactory heating service and enduring economy are features of the Washington Wood Burning Super-Furnace. The pipe collar is placed in the back to hold gases and smoke in the top of the combustion chamber until entirely burned. The cast iron water pan is located in the back panel at the correct height to insure proper addition of a healthful amount of moisture to the circulating warm air. The feed door and ash door are oversized to insure ease of firing. Cold air intake is through the bottom in order to provide longer air travel across the heating unit to insure uniform and satisfactory heating of the entire house.
