Missing Wife Mystery for Detroit Man

Whether his wife and two children left his home willingly or whether Emmett Dutton and Harold "Doc" look them away was puzzling W. H. Baughn of Detroit yesterday. Unable to answer his inquiry he came to Salem to swear out a complaint and to ask for warrants of arrest against both men.

Baughn told the justice of the peace that he came home from work above Detroit early this week and found his wife and children gone. Neighbors reported that the two men had come to the house and while one "Doc" about 30 years of age and minus one leg stood guard with a gun, the other entered the house, got Mrs. Baughn, the children, the household goods and $45 in cash and got away.

Baughn told local officers he had waited three days before making a complaint to see if his wife would return voluntarily. She did not and Baughn feels there has been foul play. He said he had had no difficulty with his wife. She is 35; Baughn is much older. He has a son 18 and one 19 besides the three and five year old children by his present wife.

HOLMAN TALKS AT CLUB MEET

Popularity and Efficiency Not Compatible Says State Treasurer

Beginning and concluding his address with the declaration that no man in public office can seek popularity and gain efficiency at the same time, Rufus Holman, state treasurer, outlined to members of the Lions club yesterday noon ways in which he is seeking to cut operating costs of state institutions. "I can demonstrate where I have reduced expenses $1200 in a year and the end is not yet in sight," he said.

Holman repeated his recent suggestion to the state highway commission that state road work be done by force account rather than by contract. "This method would better aid unemployment," he said. "At one of the heaviest road construction jobs in the state is not giving employment to local men. We want to get not only roads but also work for our own people."

Holman reported that within the last 90 days he had visited every state institution in the state. "My personal contribution to reduction of state expenses," he said, "is that I'm not charging the state with expense money in my travels."

Maintaining that there is a tendency in public works to be slack, he mentioned he had discovered that a whistle on the Cottage farm was being blown at 5:30 p. m. every morning and that his blasts disturbed the sleep of the patients at the tuberculosis hospital, as well as the surrounding countryside. He said he had conferred with Dr. R. E. Lee Steiner, superintendent of the state hospital, concerning the whistle. "And in there any reason why the Southern Pacific railway should blow its train whistles on entering the city every morning, disturbing the state hospital. That is a relic of the stagecoach days in England when a man on the coaches blew a horn to advertise their arrival."

The state treasurer chided the service clubs for posting their signs at highway entrances to the city, averring that they are of no interest to other persons than club members and that the latter already knew that there is such a club and what time its meetings are held.

Holman declared he believed wages of statehouse employees should be standardized, so that workers in one department will not receive higher salaries than those doing the same type of jobs in other offices.

"While I am here, I want to really do some good to relieve the tax burden. It is not difficult to do if you strive for efficiency and don't court popularity," Holman concluded.

FEDERAL POSITIONS ARE NOW AVAILABLE

Civil service positions in five different federal departments have been opened to Oregon applicants according to Paul Miller, secretary of the Salem board of examiners. The jobs range in salary from $2000 to $5600. The circular received by Miller states that Oregon is one of the many states which has not received its full share of appointments in the appointed departmental service at the national capital.

Salaries for positions available range from $2000 to $5600 a year. The list of positions includes: senior foreman poultry feeding, fattening, dressing and storing, bureau of animal industry $2000 to $2500; assistant veterinarian (bacteriology), $2600 to $3200; junior veterinarian $2000 to $2600; agronomist, (sugar cane) $2400 to $4000; assistant agronomist, $2600 to $3000; assistant pathologist (cereal smuts), $2600 to $3200; assistant statistician (public health), $2600; principal examiner, $5600; senior examiner $4600; associate chemist (industrial hygiene investigation) $2800 to $3300; assistant chemist $2600 to $3200, bureau of mines; associate chemists (any specialized branch) $3200 to $3800 a year.

Further information may be secured from the local examiner at the postoffice.

Under the Occurrences and Gossip at the center of Oregon's state government

FINE weather prevailing the past week has been the subject of most conversation around the capital, and the hope expressed is that it will continue for the state fair which starts tomorrow. Fair week bids fair to be a lot more enjoyable than the grounds to see.

An interesting situation resulted at the state board of control meeting yesterday. Rufus C. Holman, state treasurer was the only member present, yet his own motion was lost, not for want of a second, but because he was actually outvoted. So Holman as chairman was forced to order the opposite motion.

Hal Hoss got out of riding a horse in the rodeo parade here Saturday by going to Marshfield and Myrtle Point in Coos county. Hoss was listed as speaker at the Coos and Curry county fairs. There are a couple of others who have been training once or twice who are now looking for such an excuse to be on the sidelines.

Holman has started a campaign against noise around state institutions, and cites such as 5:30 whistles in the morning near state hospitals. The noon bells and sirens could also be eliminated as far as state house employees are concerned, because as soon as 11 o'clock comes there is plenty of noise as hundreds rush for doors and elevators.

For some reason or other there have been many visitors to the capitol dome recently, and they are accommodated by

SWAT THAT FLY!

It would take a Babe Ruth to swat this fly. It is a mechanical one produced by the Department of Agriculture in Washington. Two feet high, an electric motor enables it to move its wings, walk and suck air. All this ingenuity was brought into play to demonstrate how flies carry germs. The mechanical fly will be exhibited at State fairs throughout the country.

Herbert Hauser of the public utilities commission, will go to Crabtree, near Albany, today to conduct a hearing on the suspension of the Southern Pacific agency at that place. Residents of Crabtree have protested the removal of the station.

Well, it is time now to don heavier apparel. More sirens last night informed the waiting public in and about Salem that fall was here. The official opening of this season was a success and many people were on hand to herald it and to do a lot of window shopping. It looks like a tough season for the parade.

He who dances must pay the fiddler, or words to that effect. Anyhow Mayor George Baker has learned as much. He had a great time, drinking toasts in France and other sections of Europe. He returned amid much acclaim and welcome to Portland. Now the court says he must return $600 of his salary. Oh, well, such is life.

Exhibit Blanks Being Sent in By 4-H Groups

Exhibit entrance blanks are coming in very satisfactorily for 4-H clubs in the county. Wayne B. Harding, club leader, reported yesterday. Many of the former exhibitors from this county will be late in making their reports but a liberal representation of boys and girls from this group is expected at the fair next week.

Harding announced a 4-H club rally to be held at 1:30 p.m. Sunday. Boys and girls from all parts of the state will attend but only those who have completed a club project this year will be eligible for free tickets. These members will have the right to bring two friends as their guests.

HENRY STEVENS LEGION'S CHIEF

Schoolboy Soldier Elevated To Highest Position In Veteran Ranks

DETROIT, Sept. 24 (AP)—The American Legion today selected as its national commander one of the school boy soldiers of the World war.

He is Henry Leonidas Stevens, Jr., 23-year old attorney of Waukegan, N. C., a overseas veteran of the 318th machine gun battalion, who left the University of North Carolina to go to officers' training camp and studied law at Harvard after the war.

Stevens was elected by acclamation after an incomplete roll call of the department's at the closing session of the thirteenth national convention showed its strength far ahead of that of six opposing candidates.

Emmet O'Neal, of Louisville, Ky., interrupted his remarks with a motion Stevens' election be made unanimous. The other candidates supported his motion. Five national vice commanders were elected without opposition. They are Richard F. Paul, Canton, Mass.; Colonel Harold Plummer, Madison, Wis.; Forest G. Cooper, Indianapolis, Miss.; Roy Cook, New Mexico, and Frank Brooks, Bellingham, Wash.

Father Darsche is National Chaplain. The Rev. Father H. A. Darsche, of Bradley, Ill., an overseas veteran and a member of the French Legion of Honor, was elected national chaplain. Commander Stevens received his office amid an enthusiastic ovation and promised his full devotion to carrying on the program of the Legion. His first duty was to preside at a meeting of the National Executive committee, held immediately after adjournment of the national convention.

At that meeting, James F. Barton, of Fort Dodge, Iowa, was reappointed national adjutant; Bowman Elder, of Indianapolis, was reappointed national treasurer, and General Eben Putnam, of Wellesley Farm, Mass., was reappointed historian, the only new appointee being Remond Bingham, of Indianapolis, who was named national judge advocate.

November 16 and 17 were fixed as the dates for the next executive committee meeting, to be followed by a three-day meeting of commanders and adjutants, both in Indianapolis.

Thornton Wilder, the novelist, is listed as a "visiting faculty member" at the University of Chicago for next year. He will teach English.

RE-SUBMISSION OF PROHI LAW BACKED

Ohio Senator Favors This Rather Than Party's Taking any Side

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—(AP)—A plank in the 1932 democratic platform pledging the party's members in congress to vote for re-submission of the eighteenth amendment was proposed by Senator Bulkeley of Ohio.

The proposed plan, as outlined today by the Ohio democrat, would stipulate that the repeal amendment must be acted upon by state conventions rather than legislatures.

Bulkeley, one of the outstanding opponents of the eighteenth amendment in the democratic party, said he would seek to have his party adopt this plank rather than commit itself on the merits of prohibition.

Under this plan, he said, neither party nor its members would be pledged on the prohibition issue. Democratic congressmen would be required as a matter of party loyalty to vote to submit a repeal amendment to the states, but would be free to go back to their constituents and work against its adoption.

Bulkeley said the plan had the support of a number of prohibition supporters as well as its opponents within the party. He said friends of the eighteenth amendment could consistently vote for re-submission and then oppose it in their states.

Coming from a man who has been mentioned as possible democratic presidential material, Bulkeley's plan was expected by observers to receive serious consideration from democratic leaders.
