SOVIET DISCUSSED IN AD CLUB TALK

Lenin Admits Communism is Inadequate, Raymond Robins Relates

Colonel Raymond Robins delighted 25 Ad clubbers yesterday noon at the Gray Belle with a graphic word picture of the Russia of 1917 and 1918 and the impression of the soviet plan as outlined to him by Lenin. While his listeners listened intently, Robins outlined the situation in the United States, expressed his faith that the spirit of America would pioneer a way out of our economic morass and meet the challenge of a new economic day.

Robins prefaced his remarks which followed an address given at the Willamette university chapel exercising by declaring the day of the westward trek by pioneers had passed. Instead the youth of today seeks his adventure and his development in cities or instead of going west goes east. Instead of the rugged individualism of the past, the new age demands a greater spirit of cooperation, Robins explained, because of the increasingly urban trend of western civilization.

Lenin was one of the greatest thinkers of his age in Robins' opinion, who knew the soviet leader shortly after the bolshevistic regime came into power. While Lenin was a severe critic of American life and a strong believer in "communism" without rat, interest, profits or capital wealth, the soviet founder conceded in talking to Robins that the purely communistic ideal had not made adequate provision for the variance in man's abilities.

Robins then described a recent dinner for outstanding bankers in New York where American industrial and agricultural leaders just back from Russia, gave high praise to the producing efficiency of the new country.

"You can shut the doors of trade to Russian goods coming in this country but that is a temporary barrier," said Robins. "One million bushels of grain dumped into Liverpool is just as disastrous to the American farmer as if it were sent to the United States."

Robins was introduced by Rev. Hugh B. Fouke.

SCHOOLS REGISTER FEW LATE IN WEEK

Few pupils enrolled in Salem schools after the first day, according to word given out at the city superintendent's office yesterday. It was believed scarcely more than half a dozen children had entered the grade schools since Monday. Registrations at the high school increased by about 25, Miss Myrtle McClay, secretary in the principal's office, said.

The fact that the increase during the week was so small, is laid to the unusually large enrollment on the first day. School officials expect a considerable number of entrants on Monday, although state fair time may hold off final registrations until the following week.

An accurate check on grade school enrollment will be made at the superintendent's office on Monday. The high school check will not be made until Friday, Miss McClay stated.

SOUTH LIBERTY TO BE OPENED OCT. 16
The 59-foot concrete approach to the South Liberty street bridge, on which pouring was completed last Saturday, will be opened to traffic on October 16, according to W. S. Low, city street commissioner. Because of the cool weather, it is not necessary to keep the concrete moist, he said, but it must be left to harden for 23 days from laying time before being used.

Commissioner Low's crew is now putting in the final grade on Gaines street between North Summer and Winter streets. Pouring of the 20-foot concrete roadway will be begun there next week.

The approaches to the North Winter street bridge will be paved during the fall or winter.

Under the Occurrences and Gossip at the center of Oregon's state government

Oregon football teams are getting under way in fast order this year. Tonight both Willamette university and Oregon State will play their second games of the season. Willamette will take on the University of Oregon at Eugene, while Oregon State will test its great strength against Colorado at Portland.

It is beginning to look as though getting will not be one of the new-fangled subjects to be taught in schools. One teacher down in Douglas county, perhaps more ambitious along this line than the rest of the world, found out it didn't pay to practice getting along with the teachers, let alone perhaps teach it. He was "disbarred."

Today opens the big event at Salem. The state fair will swing wide its gates immediately after the parade this morning, and all children will be admitted free. The rodeo will feature the fair the opening day as well as be an additional feature on Sunday and again the high light Monday. There are some keen riders in this lineup.

Just as was feared—the writer and perhaps even A. L. Lindbeck, not mentioning some of the girls in the various state departments, have overestimated, and they will be lucky to be able to get onto a horse today for the parade, let alone ride. Too much horseback riding therefore may permit the use of substitutes for some of these "star performers" for the big parade.

The feature in news at the state capitol yesterday would have been to take a roll call of state officials and department heads, and notice the lack of response. The entire board of control, corporation commissioner, budget director, utilities commissioner, supreme court, personnel, bonus commissioner, and others were in other parts of the state.

The matter of naming the college at the feeble minded institution has not yet been definitely decided, although the tentative title of Holman College, named for the state treasurer, seems to stick, and may be adopted. Rather than reject, Holman is apparently enjoying the checks brought out as a result of the title.

When the name was first suggested, Holman replied he believed calling the college in honor of Hal E. Hoss, the oldest member in the point of service on the board of control, the proper thing. However Hal objected on the grounds that should they call it Hoss House people would think it a stable. His objection was sustained.

provided the council orders the work done, he said. Approaches to the South Church street bridge will not be in condition for paving this winter. Further filling in on the edges of the roadway remains to be done.

MARION L. FRANZ DIES NEAR HOSKINS

MONMOUTH, Sept. 25. — Marion L. Franz, 59, Polk county native, died late Thursday at the family home near Hoskins, southwest of Monmouth. He was born September 12, 1872, near Hoskins, where he lived virtually all his life. He engaged in a general mechanics business there for years.

Graveside services will be held Monday afternoon at the Kings Valley cemetery, Rev. Edgar A. Fogg officiating and the Smith funeral parlors of Monmouth in charge. Mr. Franz leaves his widow, Matilda Franz, and two sons, Orville and Samuel, both of Hoskins.

Need of Permit Was Not Known

Clarence W. Stacey told Justice of the Peace Hayden yesterday he knew nothing about a state law which requires raisers of fur-bearing animals to obtain a state permit. As a result Hayden fined Stacey $25, remitted the fine and assessed him only the costs of the hearing.

Stacey, who raises silver foxes was arrested by state police.

About $2,000,000,000 was spent on new buildings in the United States in the first half of 1931, compared with $2,500,000,000 in the same period last year.

BYERS LOSES HIS TEACHING PERMIT

"Affectionate" Caresses to Subordinates Cause of Certificate Loss

All Oregon teaching certificates held by David Lee Byers, principal of the Sutherlin schools in Douglas county, were revoked yesterday in an order issued by Charles A. Howard, state superintendent of public instruction. Revocation of the certificates followed a hearing held in the state educational department in Salem last Saturday. It was charged that Byers had been "over-friendly" with certain teachers in the Sutherlin schools and had spent more time in their rooms than required. There also was some testimony at the hearing that Byers had brought up suggestive topics and had placed his hands on the teachers' knees and shoulders.

Among the teachers who testified against Byers were Jeannette Sloan, Iva Curtis, Constance Weinman and Blanch Slater. Byers denied any improper acts in connection with the conduct of the school, or that he intentionally had done anything to embarrass the teachers. He admitted that he might have patted the shoulders or knees of the teachers while conversing with them, but that it was in a friendly spirit and was without improper motives.

The hearing before the state superintendent of schools followed an investigation by the Douglas county school authorities last May. The charges against Byers were dismissed at the previous hearing.

Mr. Howard said his decision was based on a "careful study and investigation of all complaints filed against Byers."

Ideal Weather Here Contrast To East's Heat
Salem has reason to be thankful for its usual beautiful fall weather. Mrs. W. C. Hawley, wife of the congressman, received a letter on Thursday from her sister, Mrs. John M. Davis, at Kansas City. Mrs. Davis wrote on Monday last, and she said Kansas City was enduring its 20th successive day of terrific heat, during which everything was scorched and soared, even the foliage on the trees having been dried up and destroyed.

By the same mail, Mrs. Hawley received a letter from her daughter at Providence, R. I., of the same date as the one from her sister. But the Rhode Island letter came by air mail.

Congressman Hawley was yesterday sitting in at Portland with the congressional committee considering river improvement projects.
