High School Lists 70 in First Week

MONMOUTH, Sept. 28—An enrollment of 70 has been reached in the Monmouth high school which opened a week ago. This number comprises just three classes: sophomores, juniors and seniors. The freshman class lists in the ninth grade of the junior high at the training department of the Oregon Normal school.

Such an unusually large number have entered the typing classes that additional machines were procured from the normal school where the commercial department has been eliminated this year.

Gundersons Return From Trip to East

SILVERTON, Sept. 28—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gunderson and children have returned from an extended visit in the east where they were guests of their mother, Mrs. Martha Gunderson, and a sister and brother of Mr. Gunderson. Another brother, M. G. Gunderson, who is president of the Coolidge and McClellin banks here, and his wife are also in the east but are expected home within a few days' time.

North of Monkey Island

Who can't find something to interest him or her at the 77th Oregon state fair? Variety enough—from rain to peanuts—to keep everyone a-going. But when it comes to getting the old scribble working on a little of everything, oh, such. You try it!

Notice, that youngest who, when everything else fails, hitches a huge turkey tom to a little painted wagon and struts about the grounds? No sir, he's not advertising a thing; he's just exercising Little Willy and that of tom. His father's a big turkey exhibitor from down Junction City way.

Why turkeys should lead to biblical subjects may be a conundrum, but anyway, a group of Marion county Sunday schools have done some good work with their new, enlarged booth. And that Jewish tavernacle modeled by LaVern Cain is worth looking at. Oh yes, did you get your aster?

Maybe it's an aftermath of the milk war, but who cares, as long as there's such a spread of dairy products as is found this year. Oregon State college's booth has plenty of things to keep one looking, not to mention other exhibits of milk, cheese, skim milk powder, butter, and so on through 'em all. Believe it or not, one and one-quarter billion pounds of milk were produced in Oregon in 1937. The sign says so.

A long jump again, and we're with the Oregon National Guard. Not fighting—sham or otherwise—this time, but just looking at the first booth the Guard ever set up at the state fair. Nifty, isn't it? And now more people know those soldiers' aren't in. Boys from Salem companies are on hand to answer questions and riddles about the guns, helmets, flags, signals, ensignia and whatnot that is on hand.

The Oregon Congress of Parents is on hand in a large booth, with Mrs. N. E. Abbott and Mrs. R. L. Wright, both of the Lincoln Parent-Teachers in Salem, in charge. Of course there is an interesting exhibit of school work lined about the walls, and due share of it is from Stayton, Aumsville and Salem schools. There'll be found that popular sign: "Check your children free with the PTA." Translated, it means: "You may leave your children here for short periods, we'll see that they get the best of care while you see the fair. No charge."

Pupils of the state school for the blind yesterday started a series of interesting demonstrations of their school work, including use of the huge 46-piece sectional map from which they learn geography; weaving; canning; chair bottoms; and running of the sewing machines. Brooms, dresses, embroidery, other sewing, desks and weaving are a few of the articles found on exhibit in this booth in the grandstand pavilion.

The state training school for boys has another exceptional exhibit, with handwork displayed along the way from pot-holders to leather boots. And in the adjacent booth is an artistic bit of landscaping, handled also by the training school boys from Woodburn.

Strayed and found: A cute little black kitten, Mrs. G. Ed. Ross, police matron, Monday afternoon rescued the tiny creature from the heels of persons who were hurrying along the "main drag", but up to late that evening no one had inquired for it. Yes, the kitty was a wee bit scared and frightened, hunting its way out from all those long legs. Incidentally, Mrs. Ross says she has been pretty busy, but only one case, theft of a girl's pocketbook, was particularly bad.

"Twain't no surprise, that first little shower, old timers declare. If it dampened their spirit, it certainly was not evident. After the first Pluvius up-set, who could "kick" about Nos. two, three, and so on into the night?
