"No Favor Sways Us; No Fear Shall Awe" From First Statesman, March 28, 1851

THE STATESMAN PUBLISHING CO. CHARLES A. SPRAGUE, SHELDON F. SACKETT, Publishers CHARLES A. SPRAGUE - - - - Editor-Manager SHELDON F. SACKETT - - - - Managing Editor

Member of the Associated Press The Associated Press is exclusively entitled to the use for publica-tion of all news disputches credited to it or not otherwise credited in

Pacific Coast Advertising Representatives: Arthur W. Stypes, Inc., Portland, Security Bidg. San Francisco, Sharon Bidg.; Los Angeles, W. Pac. Bilg. Eastern Advertising Representatives: Ford-Parsons-Stecher, Inc., New York, 271 Madison Ave.; Chicago, 350 N Michigan Ave.

Entered at the Postoffice at Salem, Oregon, as Second-Class Matter. Published every morning except Monday. Business office, 215 S. Commercial Street.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES:

Mail Subscription Rates, in Advance. Within Oregon: Daily and Sunday, 1 Mo. 50 cents; 8 Mo. $1.25; 6 Mo. $2.25; 1 year $4.00. Elsewhere 50 cents per Mo., or $5.00 for 1 year in advance. By City Carrier: 45 cents a month; $5.00 a year in advance. Per Copy 2 cents. On trains and News Stands 5 cents.

The Grange and Farm Indebtedness

GRANGE over in Benton county took action recently abundance the vitims A B C D E. endorsing a moratorium on farm debts. This action amounts the essential minerals, seems out of accord with utterances of grange leaders. The such as calcium, phosphorous and Statesman recently quoted the comments of A. S. Goss, mas- iron. 6. Should be composed of ter of the Washington state grange. We notice in the last foods which are plentiful and reanews letter from Fred Brenckman, representative of the na- a "Fad Diet"; B. Should not retional grange in Washington, D. C., an article which con-quire mineral accessories, such as demns the moratorium idea which the Benton county gran- pills or medicines in order to gers endorsed. The following is the Brenckman article:

CANCELLATION OF FARM DEBTS IMPOSSIBLE

Obstacles to Such a Plan Too Serious to Overcome

That a moratorium with reference to the farm mortgage debt, however welcome such an arrangement would be to many farmers under prevailing conditions, is outside the realm of practicality is the epinion of most well-informed students of the subject.

In a recent statement, F. H. Klawon, president of the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, pointed out that while the farm mortgage debt of the country now totals more than $9,000,000,000, the mortgages held by the Federal Land banks total only $1,156,000,000, or about 12 per cent of the "Yet it is sometimes suggested that relief should be extended to the farmers through the Federal Land banks," says Mr. Klawon. Continuing, he says:

There is a much stronger argument against any general moratorium activities, or the government declaring a debt payment holiday in connection with Federal Land Bank loans, and that is that the government does not own these banks, as is frequently thought, even by well-informed people. This misinformation probably became current due to the fact that in 1916, when the Federal Land Banks were established. Congress advanced practically all of the money necessary to start these banks in business, some $9,000,000; but all this money, with the exception of a few thousand dollars, has been returned to the government.

In the meantime, the farmers themselves have become the owners of these banks, and they own about 99 2-3 per cent of the stock in these institutions. That it will be sound business policy for the land banks and other mortgage holders to be as lenient as possible in collecting the interest and principal that is due them where the borrowers are in distress may readily be seen. Wholesale fereclosures could have no other effect than to further depress land values, thereby imperiling the security upon which all farm mort-

KOAC Suffers Extra Cost

RADIO station, KOAC, which is owned and operated by the er in winter than in the summer. Cod liver oil is a rich source of order to retain its license. The radio commission issued its order to that effect and refused to grant the appeal of Pres. which we have too little during Kerr for postponement of the order for a year. It has been our winter season. In the true the plan of the state board of higher education, approved as we understand it by the state administration, to make KOAC but excessive amounts should not an all-state radio, operated strictly for the public benefit. An extension is planned to Eugene so the university could broadcast; and another to Salem for the use of state officials and institutions here. But in the present financial predicament of the state and the educational institutions it was not possible to expand the station service this year.

It is costing the state college $10,000 to expand to the full twelve hour schedule as it is. The added matter which it is broadcasting is not essential to its service; is largely duplicated by other broadcasting stations operating in the state. But the expenditure was necessary for it to hold its license. Otherwise the commission would have cancelled it and the wave length would probably have gone to some greedy commercial station.

The radio commission is taking a very narrow attitude in not showing more favor and consideration to the stateowned station which is non-commercial, and which is directly educational in character. The radio is the modern substitute for the old farmers' institutes which reached comparatively few farmers. In a radio poultry course put on by the college last year there were six hundred enrolled, to say nothing of the army of listeners on the farms and small tracts in the state who listened in but did not enroll. Similar valuable services are rendered other farming interests in the state. The radio commission should have permitted the station to al thoughts. operate as much as it could without requiring it to go to the expense of twelve-hour operation; in the hope that in another immensity of the show. Since year or two a university connection could be made which would let the university bring to the state educational offerings through this modern vehicle of university extension.

The privately owned stations are fast becoming media just for advertising. Joy Elmer Morgan, chairman of the national committee on education by radio, last week declared that radio in the United States had sunk to the lowest level of its development, and added: "It is evident to me that the public is disgusted with advertising on the air."

In the face of this why should the radio commission | There are stock barns filled to threaten the life of the one non-commercial, strictly educational radio station in the state?

Tongue Loose Again

MEDLEY BUTLER, now retired from the marines, is celebrating his release with a tale as lurid as the yarn he told on Mussolini. This one is to the effect that a group of multimillionaires are seeking a form of beneficent dictatorship and are ready to give up half their fortunes to promote

What silly chatter, and yet what dangerous matter too. There is no more talk of a "beneficent dictatorship" in this country than there is of a revolution; and no pressing need for either. We have a hunch that Butler was looking in a wool and mobair; products of formirror when he said these plutecrats were planning to head up their dictatorship "by a man without capitalistic or partisan ties." And undoubtedly the laundry mark on his shirt

Well, Smedley, you better go back to your radio gotohells; the country is in no need of your "beneficent dicta-

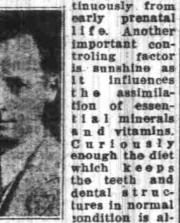

J. K. Gill, who died in Portland Thursday at the age of 90, was prosperity. The commonwealth intimately connected with Salem of Civil war days. He married Miss does not stake its chances on any Frances A. Wilson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Willson, who were among the founders of Salem; he taught in Willamette univerhim to go to Portland, where he built up one of the largest bookstores that impressed us. It was the Oregonians can do ing. The evidence sity; and later operated a bookstore here. William S. Ladd induced

If an old bird like Ghandhi can raise such a crowd attired as he what couldn't Aimee de if she'd follow suit?-C-J "Sips."

Bathing suit, Don?

Diet and Teeth

By ESTILL L. BRUNK, D. M. D. Marion County Dept. of Health It has been abundantly demonstrated that teeth will not decay if the proper diet is supplies con-

influences

Dr. E. L. Brunk

so most helpful maintaining general body health. A complete diet which will help the prevention of dental cares is characterized by the following: 1. Should contain sufficient protein to insure proper growth and repair; 2. Should contain enough calories or heat units for full activity; 3. The residual ash should be neutral; 4. Should contain in 5. Should contain in abundant make it entirely adequate.

More specifically such a diet for a growing child who would have sound teeth and straight bones should consist of the following: One quart of milk daily. (May be plain or in cooked dishes). Two servings of fruit daily. (One fresh fruit such as apples, bananas, dates, prunes, peaches, grapes, oranges, berries). Two or three servings of vegetables daily one or more of which should be green leafy vegetables, (Vegetables suggested are tomatoes, carrots, celery, cabbage, beans, water cress, squash and pumpkins and the others which grow abundantly in the Willamette Valley.) One egg or meat daily. (Among the meats should be included beef, fowl and fish, as well as mutton, liver and sweet breads. Several servings of cereal, cereal products or bread daily. These should not be used however in ing that housed them was torn of the river, having run the disexcess. The cereal foods may be down in 1856, to make place for tance of 40 miles." made from wheat, corn, rye, rice the plant of the Willamette or barley. Butter and fats may be given in moderate amounts. Some interesting experimental work is now being conducted on the effect of excessive fat diets on the teeth of children.

Children should not as a rule contains an excess of carbohydrate foods which are converted in the body into simple sugars. In the winter months cod liver oil may be given since the vitamin content of many foods is lowseveral vitamins and is a good substitute for the sunshine of sense it is a food, not a medicine,

What health problems have you't the above article raises any question in your mind, write that question out and send it either to The Statesman or the Marion county department of health. The answer will appear in this column, Name should be signed, but will not be used in

上ditorial

From Other Papers

GREAT SHOW, WONDERFUL STATE! One cannot visit the Oregon state fair without coming away with a deeper appreciation of the commonwealth's greatness. For such an unusual show an unusual state is required. As we left the fair grounds ate last night, after we had attempted to see as much of it as we could, we carried away sever-

The first one dealt with the early afternoon, we had visited the main agricultural building. the 4-H club exhibit building, the automobile show, the poultry division, the rabbitry and the stock took us and the horse show. And after the horse show we attempted to see more of the fair, but before we had made the rounds. it was time to go. Truly the show is fashioned on a grand scale, overflowing. Wonderful exhibits of cattle, horses, hogs and sheep. And in all the classes we found Linn county exhibitors, who were winning purple and blue ribbons galore. Not only did we feel proud of our state but of our county,

We found ourselves marveling, also at the diversity of the products of Oregon. Surely no state could show greater variety. Products of farms and gardens galore, nuts, fflberts as large as horse chestnuts, almost; wonderful vegetables, wonderful grains. ests and mines. Everything necessary to our type of civilization was there, except cotton. We did not see any cotton but we would not be surprised to hear somebody say that it's there

And as we were reflecting on this diversity of Oregon products, there came to us a fuller realization of the cause of Oregon's one number of color. It plays loyalty of Oregonians to their big ing. The evidence is on every fair. There was a tremendous hand. If the outside world could crowd yesterday and everybody see an Oregon state fair, it and privilege to serve on juries, "Pa" Stribling. seemed proud to know that Ore- would soon recognize the reason they should regard this as a priv-One could see pride in their faces Democrat-Herald.

HERE'S HOW By EDSON

Tuesday: "Measuring the Moon's Temperature"

BITS for BREAKFAST

By R. J. HENDRICKS -

"The parsonage" again: 5 5 2

SUSON

In Thursday's Bits column the fact was announced that the second building in what became Salem that was used as a dwelling is still standing, at 1325 Ferry forming another trip to Vanstreet. Just as the first one stands at 960 Broadway.

Both houses were built by the Methodist mission, after the construction of the saw mill and grist mill opposite what is now 960 Broadway—where the Larmer warehouse is now. The mills 7 o'clock p. m., encamped on a were under one roof. The build-Woolen Manufacturing company, pioneer factory of the kind on this coast.

4 4 4 Methodist mission, arrived at eld not far from a half mile from the blind, perilous night.

Fort Vancouver June 1, 1840, "the parsonage", standing where As he swung round there came ery for the mills They were housed and set to work in the fall of 1840, and work on the Jason Lee mission house was near the present site of Newberg. inches away from him. started as soon as lumber was turned out from the saw mill near by. That first dwelling was

The next task was the construction of the Indian manual labor school building that bechange of name became Willamette university, and "the parsonage", some rods to the east to serve the needs of those who were to supervise the work at the Indian school.

The fine oak trees that stood there perhaps helped to decide the location of "the parsonage" It became the second dwelling house in what was, nearly a decade later, to be named Salem by plats. There is a dispute as to who furnished the name of Sa-

The third house, built at about block surrounded by Commercial, Court, Liberty and Chemeketa streets, was begun in 1842. We know this, because it is a well recorded fact that Rev. James Olley, who was building it, was Willamette river while rafting down logs to make finishing lumthe mission mill for sawing. The column. drowning was on December 11,

Mrs. Olley, who was thus made widow, was a sister of Rev. L H. Judson, who finished the house and lived in it for years, and Mrs. Olley was a member of barns. Then the evening over- the Judson household there until in 1844, when she became the wife of Rev. David Leslie, the first wife of Mr. Leslie having died February 1, 1841.

Thus it is well established when the first three dwellings in what became Salem were built, and where. Which was the fourth one? The Bits man would like to hear from any one who can throw light on the matter. The Olley-Judson house was the first one owned individually; the first one not belonging to the mission.

There was some kind of house, the Bits man believes, near the present 14th and Conter streets, that was at first occupied by employees working on the Indian manual training school of the mission. have been the fourth. The Rev. J. L. Parrish house, still standing on Capitol street, a few doors north of Mill creek, was among the 11 dwellings in the village in the fall of 1847. It may have been the fourth dwelling built. But the writer thinks not.

Rev. Gustavus Hines, then liv-ing in "the parsonage", the third dwelling, wrote in his book, 'Oregon", published under differ-and in their bearing. It was as though each one were thinking to the Metropolitan baseball fans them all and by so doing it is himself, "Well, see what we can has become a reality. The long ent titles two or three times, this time in 1857, the following:

Signo On Three Adjoining Buildings

"January 16th, 1843. Left home in company with L. H. Judson, for the purpose of percouver. We took a light canoe belonging to Mr. Lee (Jason Lee), and shot out of a little cove which runs up within a half mile of our house, into the strong current of the Willamette, and, the water being high, we glided down with great rapidity, and at 4 4 8

The "little cove", the Bits man believes, was in North Mill creek, near the Lee house and the mis-The Lausanne, carrying the Lee must have kept his boat, to There were no streets then: only

There are traditions that the around the horn. The Bits man does not believe they are correct. The timbers of both the Lee house and "the parsonage" were hewn. The workmen no doubt came the Oregon Institute that by found they could fashion them thus faster than they could saw them in the small mission mill. But all the lumber no doubt came from the mission mill. Also, all that for the door, and window frames. The mission carpenters and cabinet makers were good workmen.

In "the parsonage" there some nice built-in work of cedar; red cedar. There was plenty of cedar here in the early days, and the people who filed the first this work was no doubt all done by the mission workmen. But the windows no doubt came around lem. The writer holds that Rev. the horn on the Lausanne. They David Leslie had the deciding were small; had small panes. You can see samples of these now, in "the parsonage" woodshed that was built years later, at the presthe center of what became the ent location. They were replaced and the discarded small panes were used in building the wood-

There are many still available drowned in the Eola rapids of the facts and conclusions to prove the identity of "the parsonage". some more of which will be menber for the house; to be taken to tioned at a later time in this

Y esterdays ... Of Old Salem Town Talks from The States-

October 4, 1996 NEW YORK-Charles Evans Hughes tonight formally accepted the republican nomination for governor and declared that the issue in the forthcoming camciples but of good government.

paign was not one of party prin-NEW YORK-The Independence League which nominated William R. Hearst for governor, today received his acceptance of the nomination and declaration time," he told himself, his habitthat the people must by the ballot

VIENNA - On the "ladies only" compartments on trains of Bavarian railway notices have been posted to the effect that smoking is strictly prohibited. The action became necessary, an announcement states, because complaints have become incleasingly frequent of ladies smoking cigarettes in the listening with strained ears, not compartments, forcing ladies ob-in the non-smoking compartments where they had to put up with the presence of the, other

box do away with the corporation

control of the government.

October 4, 1921 NEW YORK-The dream of Judge Percy R. Kelly told mem- headquarters in Atlanta.

"The Czarina's Rubies" By SIDNEY WARWICK

CHAPTER XXXV Before he reached it he knew that someone was inside the boathouse - someone evidently moving there with a flash lamp; and it was through a little hole where a knot of wood had fallen out of one of the boards that a momentary gleam had shown from that moving light.

As he drew nearer, his footsteps soundless on the grass, Jim Wynter could hear the faint furtive movements within. Evidently, the man inside had no suspicion of those nearing footsteps.

Jim crept up; found that knothole in the white painted planking. The building housed a motorboat of modern construction that looked a model of efficiency and strongly enough built to take rough water. And a figure there seemed to be examining this craft with very great care and interest by the aid of a small electric torch, the gleam of which alone broke the darkness inside the boathouse.

At first the figure behind the ight was too shadowy for Jim to distinguish his features even faintly. That tiny glowing bulb seemed to intensify the darkness beyond its immediate radius. Could that intent figure be Martin? And if Martin what on earth could he be doing with such evi dent stealth?

Recognition Not Martin! Suddenly, as hough some faint sound from outside had caught his ears warningly, the stooping man straightened himself with a start, involuntarily swinging his lamp round; and for a second its beam of light touched and revealed a tensely listening face to Jim on the otherside of that spy-hole.

Almost the last face that Jim Wynter in that amazed moment man calling himself John Ilsham, would have dreamed of seeing. The man from Sing Sing, John Ilsham!

But no longer the crippled figure helpless without his crutches; known nothing of what was hapa man standing erect, patently as pening outside—exceut that with- fallen giant of a tree that some independent of any such air as if out warning a couple of bullets those crutches were no more than in rapid succession had ripped a blind—John Ilsham!

the same uneasy aprehension that suddenly replacing the peace of judged it to be. A journey of a lisham's face betrayed had infect- the night—had made no sound, few feet only—yet keyed up aled him, too, Jim Wynter swung betrayed no sign of his presence high bank on the left hand side suddenly round, with a faint there after those two shots. sound creeping over the edge of But it was not Ilsham but Jim silence to his ears. A sound not Wynter whom that unknown gun- had been heard. far away, like the snapping of a man wanted: the man crouching (To be Continued Tomorrow) dry twig under a passing footstep. And in an instant that warning instinct had swept back sion mills. That is where Jason on him again; a sense as of hidden eyes in the dark, of some 'great reinforcement" for the be handy to his residence. It was stealthy menace looming out of

be encouraged to take sweets and in its cargo was the machin- the Kay mill water tower is now. a sound scarcely as loud as the popping of a cork. Something open prairie. The high bank on sang by his ears, to bury itself in the left side 40 miles below was theside of the boathouse not two

And Jim Wynter saw the wisdom of dropping very promptly lumber that went into the Lee and full length in the long grass, finished soon; no doubt by early house and "the parsonage" came knowing that a killer was abroad in the grounds of Beggar's Court tonight. That bullet from a weapon fitted with a silencer had been deliberately meant for him and only by a bare two inches had been the margin between life hard to enforce. The rulers and murderers, crime increases; and death.

War declared now on him, too. had not dropped just when he did. Almost immediately out of the the gods of the "heathen" with usual failure at the end. Bank dark encompassing night folowed a second shot. The smack of king of the chosen people. The as they know anything that they the bullet on the side of the boathouse sounded unnervingly close.

The momentary flash revealed no more than the direction from which the shots had come. The dense blackness under the trees. that the dim, misty starlight could not penetrate, screened any signs of movement there.

Only Jim knew that not far away an enemy lurked, a silent stealthy moving shadow hidden in the deep still shadows, waitingby larger windows, as you can see, waiting. That unknown killer, whose unseen presence some instinct in him had sensed earlier near the ruins, who must have dogged him step by step through the trees into the open here by the estuary.

The estuary was at flood-tide, out on the turn, swirling and foaming between wide banks. An effective means for a dead man with a bullet in him to be disposed of; swept down by the racing current and out into the open sea. a dead man would tell no tales! Hardly a pleasant thought for Wynter, as he crouched there, with every nerve and sense strung up to an almost intolerable strain-but had that been the fate designed for him?

A fate that might yet be his. That he was in a position of appalling disadvantage he was only too well aware. But his nerves before now had proved themselves uncommonly steady at close quarters with stark danger and he could trust them not to let him down now.

"Rank bad shooting, anyway, to have missed me that first ual cheerfulness reasserting it self even in a situation none too cheerful -"such a target as I must have made.

Now no longer silhouetted against the pale blur of the white painted boathouse that reflected what little light there was, he was as much hidden from that unknown enemy as the latter was hidden from him-and that at least was in his favor.

Jim Wynter crouched there, only for sounds of his enemy, but fecting to smoke to seek refuge for the sound, too, of the coming of a motor car in the side lane that bordered these grounds, and for the signal of two hoots from the horn that would tell him Bill bers of Kiwanis club yesterday.

National econmy will prevent hoped-for world series battle be- any further organization of new Yes, indeed, see what we as tween the New York Yankees and national guard unites in Oregon for the time being acc George A. White, adjutant gen-

"Pa" Stribling, fight promoter, gon is such a wonderful state. for the state's greatness,—Albany ilege and not shirk the duty, has established his home and

As he swung 'round there came a sound scarcely as loud as the popping

Grayson was here at last. very considerably. In his pressing personal worries Jim had almost forgotten the deed. whom he had surprised just now in the boathouse busy on some furtive business of his own.

The man there, who could have And almost in that surprising house as if through paper, and moment of recognition, as though that disturbing excitements were in hiding knew that beyond ques-Bill's opportune arrival on the tion. Knew too, that unless he scene would ease the situation could find cover of sorts before the next move in the game his chances might be very thin in-

> Fortunately cover was available close at hand. It was too dark for Jim's eyes to make it out with any certainty, but he remembered noticing that afternoon a gale had uprooted lying near the boathouse. After an effort to re-call the lie of the land, he began to drag himself very softly and cautiously in the direction he most to the point of torment, prepared for a sudden shot or a rush of feet to tell him his movements

ETHICS AND EXPERIENCE "But he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, . . . for Amon sacrificed unto all the carved images which Manasseh his father Quite a common phrase is that in the literature of the kings of Israel and Judah: "he did that as the priestly chroniclers which was evil in the sight of the second commandment, against live his life, must learn from his idol worship. It must have resembled our own 18th amendment, and have been nearly as know all about prisons for thieves seemed quite as lax as many of though they know the text-book our wet-dry legislators and dry- lesson that sooner or later the Speedy death would have been wet police officers. The tale is guilty will be caught, they forget im Wynter's portion then if he often told of the setting up of the lesson and blaze out a reckimages and idols, or worship of less path for themselves, with the the favor or the connivance of the clerks and cashiers know as well narrative frequently concludes can't juggle the funds and the > the sacred commandment. bible story, why these kings did must be built up strength of of the Lord." Plain as day, it may seem, they were bringing misery to themselves and their hapless people. Some might claim they were victims of priestly historians who assumed to break the wrath of the Lord upon them because the kings would not follow The example of these wicked old the priestly dictation. But leaving that speculation out, the same story may be written in the 20th century A. D. as in the 7th, B. C. The phrase in biography imputing bank clerk from gambling with the doing of evil may be as pertinent now as it was then, even though it be not set down in print.

> Yes, the old sinners have pleneration doesn't seem to profit the frequently reiterated phrase; greatly from the experience of the "he did that which was evil ..."

> is the personal possession of the one who lives it. The pattern of his problems, his associations, his tive choices, is his own. A youth may read about old Mannasseh that they were wicked kings just scribe them: but as horrid exam-Lord." There seemed to be a suc- ples they fail to get him to steer cession of kings who violated the his own course aright. He must > own experience. with the visitation of divine pun- books indefinitely without being ishment upon the king and the apprehended, but that doesn't nation because of this violation of seem to decrease the enrollment of ex-bankers at the penitentiary.

> Knowledge is not enough; there "that which was evil in the sight character to resist temptation. It is weakness, not lack of knowledge, which brings on the trouble. There is no pedagogical substitute for rigorous discipline to cultivate strong character; and there is no generation which does not need the discipline for liself. kings may do for a Sunday school lesson; but it takes more than that knowledge to keep a boy from stealing from a peddler or a depositors' funds. It is because each generation finds it so hard to accept the formula: "the wages of sin is death" without first testty of descendants; and one gen- ing it by experience that we have

Over Miller's Store

Homer H. Smith

Tel. 9181 Merrill D. Ohling