

G. E. ELECTS 10 SALEMITES

County Unions Close Convention With Address By Rev. C. P. Gates

Declaring that "Christian Endeavor is going to live by the accomplishment of an impossible task and that the blessing of victory is in the job to be done," Rev. C. P. Gates, pastor-counselor of the Oregon Endeavor union Sunday delivered a challenging address on "The Assurance of Victory" to the delegates of the Marion county C. E. convention in the closing session of the three-day meeting at the Silverton Christian church.

"Jesus has challenged us to a great service; it is a greater blessing to call out a service than to satisfy a want. I used to ask my father for a quarter, and he'd give me a job," said Mr. Gates.

"Christian Endeavor young people must get a consciousness of the spirit of God in their lives so deep that nothing can root them from it, and go forth to victory," was Rev. Gates' challenging statement.

Viola Orden, state secretary, made the awards, presenting the county banner to the First Christian young people's society of Salem; the pre-registration award, a picture of "Christ in Gethsemane," to the Labish Center Evangelical society; and the silver loving cup for attendance and registration likewise went to the Labish Center society. The Middle Grove society won second place in both of the last two contests.

Installation of the union officers for the ensuing year was in charge of James Henderson, state president.

They are: President, Ella Smith; treasurer, Blayne Scheuerman; social, Elva Ault; missionary, Jessie Plowman; evangelistic, Roscoe Plowman; Quiet Hour, Edith Grimes; C. E. Bischoff, Oak Ridge; secretary, Grace Klampe, Labish Center; citizenship, John C. Gage, Silverton; Tenth Legion, Gladys Carse, Silverton; and publicity, Valmor Klampe, Labish Center. Four offices remain unfilled.

Genevieve Martin and Howard Cole of Salem were leaders of the Sunday night prayer meetings, which discussed "Powers and Possibilities of Organized Christian Youth."

Attendance at nearly all sessions of the convention was good, the registrar, Mrs. John C. Gage, reporting the largest registration in many years.

Monmouth Took Learning Sponsor Role While in Swaddling Clothes; Diversity of Interests Featured

By BEULAH HESSE CRAVEN

Monmouth is located in the southeast part of Polk county, on the West Side highway. It is two miles west of the Willamette river; four miles northeast of the Luckiamute river; and at an elevation of 129 feet above tide water. It is 15 miles from Salem, the capital city, via paved highway.

Monmouth was founded in 1855, primarily to provide a home of education. A majority of the pioneers who first settled here were from Monmouth, Illinois, and their influence motivated a choice of the name, "Monmouth," which is said to be of Welsh origin.

Monmouth University was opened in 1881. In 1885 the name was changed to Christian College, and the school retained this name until the property became, in 1882, the first state normal of Oregon. The school with its requirements and activities, is largely responsible for Monmouth's business affluence.

Agriculture, dairying, and production of poultry and livestock—sheep, goats, and Jersey cattle—are the chief enterprises of the surrounding community. In earlier years many importations of highly bred dairy cattle were made to build up local herds. More recently the livestock imported has been sheep—Lincolns from England, and Romney Marsh from New Zealand. William Riddell Jr., a Monmouth farmer, introduced the first Romney Marsh sheep ever brought to North America into this section, from whence they have been widely distributed throughout the west and Canada.

Monmouth has a brick and tile manufacturing plant operated by G. M. Partridge & Son; Monmouth's Cooperative Creamery and Warehouse association; and produces everything for which the Willamette valley is so justly noted, except hops.

Walnut and flint culture has been brought to a valuable commercial appreciation here; and flax, in recent years, has been a growing factor. All sorts of berries dominate the highlands west of town; and A. J. Shuter has made a marked success of commercial asparagus production. Alfalfa has taken its place among the various grasses and grains. J. B. Stump has a large holly acreage.

Monmouth was incorporated in 1880. The 1930 census records a population of 900, which the transient student aggregation amounts to about 1,600. The city has a majority of brick and tile plants; and is supplied with electricity, gas, pure mountain water, a standard new sewer system, and fire fighting equipment approved by the national board of underwriters of fire insurance. There is a weekly newspaper and a student publication.

Organizations include a Lions club; a Civic club; a Business and Professional Women's club; a large and active grange; several lodges; several women's social clubs; and a golf club. There is a city park maintained by the civic club. Four miles south, on the West Side highway, is Helmsick State park containing beautiful natural picnic grounds and good swimming in the Luckiamute. Adjoining this is a Boy Scout cabin, financed by local endeavor, which will accommodate more than a hundred scouts.

Among the newer buildings of Monmouth are the I. O. O. F. hall; the First National Bank building; a new city hall, and several apartment houses utilized as student homes.
