

Cards Take Lead as Burleigh Grimes Allows Two Hits

REVENGED OR 1930 DEFEATS

No-hit Game in Sight up to Seventh; Simmons Robs Him of Shutout

By ALAN GOULD. SHIBO PARK, Philadelphia, Oct. 5.—(AP)—The grizzled old war-horse of the mound, Burleigh Grimes, whose twirling arm came out with a two days' growth of beard today, held the Athletics to a pair of hits and pitched the Cardinals into the lead for the baseball championship of the world.

Witnessing world series play for the third straight year, President Hoover was among nearly 33,000 spectators who saw Grimes come close to a perfect masterpiece, as he held the Athletics hitless for the first seven innings and beat them, 5 to 2, in the third game of a dramatic intersectional war. It was the same score by which Grove defeated Grimes in the first game of the 1930 series.

Grimes was robbed of a shutout in the ninth inning when the mighty Al Simmons emerged from his slump to bang a home run over the right field wall, with one on and two out, but his old-time rivals with almost ridiculous ease up to this final gesture by the home forces.

The Cardinals conquered none other than the great Robert Grove as they pounded the ace south-paw's delivery for the second straight time in the series. Grimes, on top of his superlative pitching, struck the blow in the fourth inning that proved to be decisive. It was when with two out, scoring runners from second and third, and gave the Cardinals a commanding lead of 4 to 0.

Nationals Lead First Time Since 1926. The Cardinals rode the crest of their dashing, triumphant wave as they beat the world champions for the second straight time and took a 2-to-1 lead in the series on the home grounds of the Athletics. It was the first time since 1926 that the national leaguers were a game up on their American league rivals.

Again the spectacular young outfielder, Pepper Martin, was a thorn in the side of the winning drive. Martin connected for two hits, running his total for three games to seven. Altogether, the Cardinals shelled Grove for 11 hits in eight runs in eight innings, concentrating their scoring drives in the second and fourth frames. They tallied once more in the ninth, off young LeRoy Mahaffey.

Grimes, however, was pretty much the whole show in the subdued slugging Mackmen, who have had only five hits in two straight games against the combined hurling of Bill Hallahan, who blanked them Friday, and Grimes. Old Burleigh was not considered in good enough shape to start the series. He never looked better than he did this afternoon, mowing down the Mackmen with consecutive ease as he gained revenge for two heartbreaking defeats in the 1930 series. He closed the game dramatically by fanning Foxx, his 1930 nemesis.

Mixing his spittle with a fast curve and a pace, pitching smartly all of way, Grimes was in sight of the all-time goal—a no-hit world series game—when he completed seven innings without allowing the semblance of a hit. In that seven-inning span only two Mackmen had reached base, on walks, and in six of the seven innings only three batsmen faced the veteran.

Grimes, wary of Foxx, walked him for the eighth and then Bing Miller broke the spell with a line single to centerfield. Old Burleigh retired the next three batsmen in order, including Cramer, pinch hitting for Grove. There were two out in the ninth when Cochrane, after a long duel with Grimes, received a pass. Simmons, whose only previous hit in the series was his homer in the opening game of the season, caught a fast ball and walloped it over the right field barrier. Eric McNair, pinch running for Cochrane, came in ahead of Simmons.

Foxx was fanned for the final victim and Grimes walked off the field with his first world series victory since he pitched for Brooklyn against Cleveland in 1920. Burleigh's two-hit stunt was the sixth of its kind to be recorded in a world series. The first was achieved by Ed Walsh of the White Sox in 1906 and the last by Walter Hoyt, then with the Yankees, in 1921. The closest to a perfect game in series annals was Ed Reulbach's one-run triumph for the Cubs over the White Sox in 1906.

It was not Grove's day. Whether the blister on one of his pitching fingers bothered him or not—and Mack said afterward it didn't—the famous southpaw lacked his usual fine control. He started his own downfall in the second, by passing Jim Bottomley, and he couldn't do much the rest of the day with the bottom half of the Cardinal batting order.

Sock vs. Social Lure

By HARDIN BURNLEY

HOPE is not dead that Gene Tunney will return to the ring from which he retired as world's champion three years ago to marry into society quite happily and enjoy the life of a gentleman of leisure. But that spark of hope is faint, even though it is being scientifically fanned by Promoter Damon Runyon of New York's famous Milk Fund and other adroit masters in the art of boxing's ballyhoo. The dazzling Damon and his astute confederates the philosopher Mr. Farnsworth and the scholarly Mr. Corum—have persuaded Mr. Tunney to the point where he has promised to fight for that worthy milk charity if he ever returns to the glove wars.

Shakeup Due For Staters Mentor Says

CORVALLIS, Ore., Oct. 5.—(AP)—Coach Paul J. Schissler and his Oregon State football squad returned today from Los Angeles where they suffered a 30 to 0 defeat last Saturday at the hands of Southern California. Schissler announced that so far as he was concerned the 1931 practice season would begin tonight and that most of the men upon whom he had pinned his hopes would be sent to the bottom of the list until they again prove themselves worthy of first-team positions.

intelligent Tunney. For Runyon & Co., are fast becoming the paramount promotional factors in New York City boxing. All their Milk Fund shows have been big successes, astically and financially. While Madison Square Garden is teetering in the throes of business depression and matchmaking ingenuity—and Jimmy Johnston has been skimming what cream there is through featuring Primo Carnera—Runyon & Co., have lined up the pick of heavy talent—namely, the way from Champion Max Schmeling through Mickey Walker and other contenders for 1932's title event. And so, if Tunney decides to have another go at it, it will be for the Milk Fund.

CURT COMMENTS CURTIS. The state fair, we hear, lost money. Why shouldn't it? The whole thing is out of date. It was a laugh to put on those "comedy" stunts of the past-century at the horse show when the "serious" part was just as antiquated.

And just what was the object of concentrating a thousand or so dime-pullers in one spot to take small change away from people some of whom will have to be supported at public expense before the winter is over? There's only one ray of sunshine in that; the dime-pullers mostly didn't make expenses.

Last Saturday's football scores were in a few cases surprising, even though Oregon State's failure to do better against U. S. C. was a disappointment to Oregonians. We note that it was hotter than blazes down at Los Angeles and that may have had more to do with it than most people might figure or all-by-partisans claim.

We still figure that Oregon is going to have a top notch team by the end of the season, despite its failure to get going against Idaho. Remember that Coach Calland has been building up over there at Moscow for three years whereas Spears is practically starting at the bottom. It seems that Lillard may make the big forget Kittlinger after all. But we doubt if Oregon is ready for Washington this weekend.

With the offensive linemen presenting what looks from the sidelines like a solid wall, you'd think it could hold out the defensive players; but there really is never a play, in a game between

CANTONWINE TO WRESTLE HERE

Noted ex-Grid Star Meets Another Behemoth on Friday Night Card

Bigger and better wrestlers seem to be the slogan of Harry Plant, matchmaker, because he has now billed none other than the famous Howard Cantonwine to appear here Friday night at the armory.

Plant considered booking Cantonwine to wrestle Salem's new grappler, Charley Mason, but the discrepancy in size is too great. With all of Mason's 200 pounds it was decided that a heavier man would be more fitting for 240 pound Howard Cantonwine.

Cantonwine, another of the football stars from the mid-west who has gained such a name in professional wrestling. Harold Rumberg, just out to the coast from Chicago, will wrestle Cantonwine in the battle of the giants.

Friday night's bout will feature two of the largest matmen to appear in Salem for a number of years. Now not only are the cauliflower-eaters Salem is getting now the biggest in the country, but also the best. Cantonwine's fame has spread wherever wrestling news travels.

Passball Season Opens But First Clash Forfeited

The first game of the passball intramural league at Willamette was forfeited to the Alpha Psi Delta team by the International house team Monday noon as the latter group did not have sufficient men on hand to play.

More life and spirit was shown at football practice by the Bears today and the squad appears to be gaining in strength. Fred Smith who has been out with an injured ankle, returned and is again making a bid for his old position at guard.

Several of the men were unable to be at practice on account of an English classifying examination held for freshmen Monday afternoon, but the full squad will be out today, closed practices will start soon with concentration on play perfection.

Several of the Bears are hitting a better stride at football now and are improving. Julian Smith is going better now and seems to be learning to handle the extra weight he has added this season. Ed Tweed shows up well part of the time and is a good man when he exerts himself.

The Seals won the last half of the league's split season while Hollywood ran off with their second pennant. Gibson and Shellenback worked through most of the schedule before they faced each other.

High Eleven Works Upon Pass Attack

Duane DeMaris and Andy Halverson, on the injured list at Salem high, have returned to football practice eager to show their wares before the Silverton game.

More attention was placed on the passing attack in Monday's practice with Johnny Bone and Johnny Perrine doing the sending. Perrine showed exceptionally well at passing while playing for Parrish last season and looks fair now.

The team is still confused on a number of plays and a large part of the time Monday was spent in signal practice. Competition for positions is stronger than usual and a number of good men are working out with the second team.
