

FISHERMEN GET MANY POINTERS

Trio of State Officers Appear Before League Meet at Mt. Angel

MT. ANGEL, Oct. 10.—A rally of sportsmen under the auspices of the local chapter of the Iszaak Walton League was held in the city hall Wednesday evening. Among the speakers were H. L. Kelly, state game supervisor, Matt L. Ryckman, state superintendent of hatches, and Ernest L. Crockett, in charge of educational work in connection with the game commission.

Mr. Kelly outlined the commission's ten-year plan to make Oregon a fishermen's and hunters' paradise. He said it is inherent in human nature to blame someone else if things are not right. If the hunting and fishing is poor, the game commission is the one blamed. He said he was raised at Oregon City and in his boyhood days game and fish were plentiful.

Mr. Ryckman gave the sportsmen a list of the different fish available at the Roaring River hatchery suitable for local streams. He said they had 18,000 cutthroat trout that are now ready for planting.

The educational program was explained in detail by Mr. Crockett. This program has been seriously handicapped this year because of a $60,000 decrease in income. The commission is financing the program from funds received from licenses and fines. When the sportsmen know of conditions he believed they would respond by buying more licenses.

Favor One Season
Several matters of importance were brought up by Ben Claggett, former game warden. The sportsmen were asked to join a movement in Marion county to have the game commission make the blue grouse open season coincide with the Chinese pheasant season. This would prevent the slaughter of pheasants during the grouse season, as many hunters go out under the pretense of hunting grouse and shoot everything on wing.

Another important matter was the closing of all small streams to fishing after July 15. After that date the water in these creeks is low and the fish congregate in the deeper holes and fishermen fish these holes out during low water each year. Depleting the streams each summer in spite of the propagation work of the commission.

Close Small Streams
Mr. Ryckman was also highly in favor of closing the smaller streams, saying it would give the planter a more ample time to plant fish in the early fall and they would then be protected until the following year. It would also give the fish time to spawn and held in propagation work.

After the program of the sportsmen was completed the league passed a resolution endorsing the commission's program and urging sportsmen to buy licenses. At this meeting marked the close of the year's activities a Browning automatic shotgun, given by the local sportsmen's league, was awarded to M. A. Bigler, city marshal.

Earliest Romance of Waldo Hills Started Back in Missouri, Where Plague Ran Rampant; Story Told

Location is Told
By HELEN COMSTOCK
News appearing under the name of Waldo Hills is gathered from two school districts, namely, Centerville and Evergreen. The center of this news district lies at the Waldo Hills Community club building, 14 miles directly east of the capitol, 4 1/2 miles south of Silvertown, and 10 miles north of Stayton at the junction of the Garden Road and the Silvertown-Stayton highway.

No community can lay claim to a more illustrious name, for it spells, not hardships alone, but pioneer spirit, courage and romance. To appreciate this let us look back to the year 1842 in southwestern Missouri, a section known as the Platte purchase. Fever and ague had been prevalent during the winter, taking such heavy toll of lives that many families decided to leave the state and try Oregon. Among those eager to go were Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Waldo. But early in 1843 Mr. Waldo became discouraged when he thought of the long trip with no roads, no bridges, and hostile Indians.

In January he told Mrs. Waldo that he and some others had decided the risks were too great. In her decisive way Mrs. Waldo informed him that in the spring she and the children would leave for Oregon for her mind, Indiana were no worse than chills and fever. So in company with the Applegates, the Waldos made the trip to the Willamette valley in 1843; members of the first train that brought wagons across the Cascade mountains.

The Waldos at once proceeded to the mission below Salem but Mrs. Waldo was dissatisfied. The mission was on a river bottom, a location that to her meant fever and ague. The next morning Mr. Waldo noted through a smoky haze a range of hills to the east, and later in the day rode horseback in that direction. Near where the town of Aumsville now stands he met a Missouri acquaintance who told him of a wonderful location a few miles north of where they were talking. There Mr. Waldo found a natural spring of water at the foot of a huge fir tree, mighty oaks and grass. The next year the Waldos built their home, a log cabin. The Waldo wagon is said to be the first to traverse land east of Salem.

Waldo Hills has given to the state legislators, judges, among them, Dan Waldo, youngest son of John B. Waldo, who for six years was a member of the Oregon supreme court and was for two years its chief justice; a governor, T. T. Geer who served the state from 1899 to 1903; and a famous cartoonist, Homer Davenport.

In the center of this district, across the road from the Waldo Hills community club house stands the Centerville schoolhouse. Well named it is. As one stands beside it on the crest of the hill it seems to be the center of one of the most beautiful views to be found in the valley. Two miles north of this school built close to the Silvertown-Stayton paved road stands Evergreen school. In 1890 an acre of ground was cleared and the building erected. It was so surrounded by mighty firs that the name Evergreen was chosen. Now a single line of trees west of the building is all that suggests the name.

Buster Dies After Long Life of Devoted Service

By MRS. AL NUSOM
MISSION BOTTOM, Oct. 10.—Buster, the blue Australian Shepherd dog of Robert Cole, died Saturday after a long life of faithful, loving service. For 20 years Buster has been friend, watch dog, bird dog and playfellow to the family.

She had been ill the past few months and had steadily grown weaker. Two traits she maintained until the last—faithfulness and loyalty to those she loved. Like human beings, she had her likes and dislikes. Buster never cared for children, but she would tolerate them as long as they didn't bother her. Buster was a fine watchdog. When left at the house or in the car to guard their contents the owner felt protected. The dog often followed Mr. Cole about his work on the farm, and if he laid his gloves and hat down Buster laid herself beside them and no one dared pick them up.

Mrs. Cole recalls a time when Buster's watchful habit proved somewhat of an inconvenience. During hop-picking season several years ago Buster laid down to keep guard over some sacks until her master's return. When the sacks were needed Mr. Cole was not present, and Buster firmly stood her ground and no one dared touch the sacks until Mrs. Cole could be summoned. She walked a distance of nearly a mile to convince Buster she was making herself a nuisance.

Hunting season was always a happy time for Buster. She liked to accompany Mr. Cole and she was more capable in this capacity than many bird dogs. Buster was buried in the garden among the flowers where she used often to sit and watch her mistress at work.

recently, when she fell from a step ladder, breaking two ribs and fracturing three. Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hixson and family left Wednesday for Toledo where Mr. Hixson will be in charge of the Standard Oil business in that city.

Schwab Recalls Earlier Day on 50th Anniversary Of Mt. Angel Residence

By A. K. LULAY
MT. ANGEL, Oct. 10.—Fred Schwab, founder and owner of the Schwab Commission company and three sisters, Mrs. Edward Gooley, Mother Gaudentia and Sister Rosula, this week celebrated their fiftieth anniversary of residence in Mt. Angel.

At the Mt. Angel residence of Mrs. and Mr. Louis Schwab arrived in Mt. Angel, then known as Roy, in October, 1881, the settlement consisted of three small frame warehouses, a blacksmith shop and three or four houses. The warehouses belonged to the Cleaver family, on whose donation land claim the town is located.

Louis Schwab purchased a 150 acre farm located near Mt. Angel. When Father Adelhelm came here looking for a location for the new Benedictine Monastery in the fall of 1881, he asked Mr. Schwab to purchase the butte and surround it with Father Adelhelm. This he did while Father Adelhelm went back to Switzerland for more priests and brothers for the foundation of the monastery.
